Charter schools raise questions on preferential treatment and cooperation

Editor:

The state has encouraged charter schools as an alternative to the existing public school system. Did the state find public school graduates uneducated? Since state universities charter these schools, will charter school graduates be preferred applicants at state universities?

Last spring the public school administration told me that there was no communication or collaboration between the two school systems. That could cost property tax payers.

I was told that it costs $6,600 per student, per year, in the public school. The charter school receives $5,500 per student, per year.

The public school system requests $21 million for an auditorium, a new school and other school expenditures. So far the charter school is altering an existing building, and will provide equipment from the funds it receives. The charter school will emphasize science and technology. It costs much more to equip classrooms for science and technology than for reading, writing and arithmetic. The charter school has applications for 65 students, and a potential for more. The public school system anticipates a loss of 75 students in four years when Big Rock Point closes.

The charter school plans to keep class sizes below 15 students. Class sizes in the public school system range between 15 and 35 students, and an average in the upper twenties.

only board member who voted against appointing Block as new coach.

Also under consideration for soccer coach was Hagen Manker. Board member, Sulane Hamilton, who is married to Manker, said she wanted to go on public record that she had not used her position on the board to attempt to get her husband hired as coach. Hamilton said that while she feels Manker is better qualified than Block for the position, she reluctantly supported the motion to hire Block.

Charlevoix industrial fair coming

The 1996 Charlevoix Industrial Fair will be held from 9 a.m.-6 p.m. Friday, Oct. 4, in the Charlevoix High School gym.

This event is free to the public and will showcase Charlevoix County manufacturers.

The industrial fair is an opportunity to discover the wide array of products that are made locally. It also provides a chance to explore careers in industry and learn which skills are needed to successfully compete for those jobs.

Charlevoix County manufacturers interested in showcasing products should contact Julie at the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, 547-2101, to reserve space for a booth.

Manufacturing firms who have agreed to participate in the 1996 Industrial Fair include: American Diamond Tool, Bay Shore Steel, Bergmann Center, Burnette Foods, Charlevoix Area Hospital, Charlevoix Manufacturing, Consumers Power, CPI Products, DCL, Harbor Industries, Industrial Magnetics, LexaLite International, Medusa Cement, Michigan Scientific, Seelye Equipment and Viatec.

Money given to Shanahan Park

Charlevoix Township Supervisor, Oscar Stroud, recently accepted the last of three donations from Medusa Cement Company for improvements to Charlevoix's Shanahan Park.

Medusa plant manager, John Laney, presented a check for $6,000 to fund recent improvements to the park's soccer field parking lot. The new lot allows spectators to park their cars adjacent to the field and watch the games.

The cement company had previously made a $3,000 contribution that allowed the creation of a new skateboard park and a $5,000 donation toward construction of permanent rest rooms for the basketball facility at Shanahan Park.

Laney said, "It's been a great pleasure for all of us at Medusa Charlevoix to see young people from the Charlevoix area - including our employees' children - enjoying these facilities. This is the kind of family-oriented community project we are particularly proud to be a part of."

Vroom: Classic cars compete

A crowed gathered at Shanahan Park, just north of Charlevoix, on a hot and sunny Sunday to watch winners collect awards from the Charlevoix Street Legend's Classic Car Show. Proceeds raised from the car show are being donated to Camp Quality, the Charlevoix teen and senior centers and D.A.R.E. The $283 raised in a 50/50 raffle is being matched by the club and donated to Nick Buckus, a 12-year-old from Petoskey who has leukemia. About 140 cars participated in a weekend of touring the area and competing for prizes in 33 classes.

Jack and Shirley Lashmit's pink panther, a 1950 Mack truck, tied for the best host car during the weekend show. The couple used the truck to lead more than a mile-long convoy of classic cars around Lake Charlevoix Saturday evening.

Beacons

... of blessing

By the Rev. Bruce Hamilton
Community Church of God

A book and a billboard played an important part in a brief weekend getaway that my wife and I enjoyed. The book is called "Plain and Simple" by Sue Bender. It is the story of a very unique opportunity the author had in living with two different Amish families. If you have ever driven around the Mio area or down in north central Indiana, maybe you've seen the black buggies and the very proud and dignified folks who own them. Being one whose lifestyle has been known to get more than a little hectic now and then, I could identify with Sue's desire to explore the culture and see how people seem to thrive without what you and I would consider life's necessities.

I laughed as I read about water fights on hot summer afternoons. I smiled as I thought of children I had seen in trips to Indiana riding in buggies with Mom or Dad dressed traditionally with them wearing dayglow colored tennis shoes. I was moved as Sue opened a worship service before me and her own heart's debate about whether she should even intrude.

Knowing a few things about children's toys today, I was further stirred by the concept of "faceless" dolls. The Amish strongly hold to not having any "graven images" in their lives. But parents are parents regardless of their faith, so Amish mothers make dolls for their children that have none of the "Barbie-like" decorations that you and I are so used to. The love and the strength of their families came through loud and clear.

The billboard was a small nondescript sign on the way to Fort Wayne that advertised "Amish Acres," a historic farm near Nappanee. Curiosity got the better of me and we left the beaten path to go find it. I should have known, after reading Sue's book, that it wasn't truly an Amish place. But it did offer a first hand "window" into their world that I might not have otherwise seen.

We sat down to a "Threshers Dinner" with the whole butter (my cholesterol!) and whole milk, mashed potatoes, turkey and more. We walked through an old time grist mill and saw quilts that were amazing. But what may or may not surprise you is what I came home with. Two faceless dolls, a boy and a girl, now grace our home. And just like Sue did, I discovered something. They may not have "faces" in the traditional sense, but they do speak. You can sense the tranquility and the gentleness in them.

Do I want to become a part of the Amish community? No, not hardly. But I do think they have some lessons to teach us, like slowing down and valuing all that goes on around us in God's creation each day. I think we could all pick up on the close family ties that seem to characterize their way of life. But most of all, instead of letting your schedule dictate who you are and what you do, you should take charge of your schedule.

You are God's unique and special child. He has gifted you with some truly special abilities and possibilities. Sometimes a dose of the "Plain and Simple" in life might be just the best thing for us all.

"This is the day that the Lord hath made! Let us rejoice and be glad in it!"

City gets state grant for Bridge Park

The city has received federal transportation funds of $428,800 and will use it to purchase the land at Bridge Park from the state highway department. The city already paid $50,306 of the $536,000 land-acquisition price. City mayor, Josh Barnes, said the remaining 10 percent owed by Charlevoix is being paid through work city employees are doing on state projects relating to Bridge Park and the bridge.

Through the grant and current arrangements for trading work, the land will be paid for in full.

Concert in East Park brings in soulful sounds of 'Sam'

Blues-tinged jazz, gospel, country and soul, performed by Samantha Moore & Friends, will resonate throughout Charlevoix's East Park at 8 p.m. Wednesday.

Making her debut as a part of the Charlevoix Convention Bureau's summer concert series, "Sam's" music is about celebrating the human spirit.

Sam's career began as a backup singer for the Motown Record Company, and she has performed with the Neville Brothers, Marcus Belgrave, Shirley Scott and Jack McDuff. She has also been featured at the Suttons Bay Jazzfest and in Petoskey for the last two years at the Big Brothers/Big Sisters annual spring fund-raiser.

Traverse City blues and jazz afficionados know her as a true professional, with a reputation for lifting spirits with the power of music from the heart at Grand Traverse Resort's Trillium Restaurant and Lounge.

She'll likely give the audience a chance to call for their favorites, such as her renditions of "Skylark" and "Don't Rain on My Parade."

On Wednesday, Aug. 28, Chris Martin and friends will be playing their familiar country, variety tunes to close out this year's concert series.

School asbestos must go

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

The Environmental Protection Agency wants the asbestos in the high school ceiling encapsulated or removed.

The asbestos has been monitored and inspected for years. Experts determined that it is not a danger in the air, only if touched, said school district superintendent, Roberta Jackson, during Monday's school board meeting.

Jackson said Tuesday that the school board plans to have it removed and will use money from the school renovation bonds it hopes to pass in September. The estimate for removal is $403,000, and is included as an expense in the school expansion plan.

Also Monday, the school board approved a health occupations contract with Charlevoix Area Hospital. The new vocational education program is for students with health care career interests. Classes begin this school year and will meet at both the high school and hospital. The instructors will be hospital employees.

Tim Volovsek was approved as the new physics, chemistry and general science teacher. Phillip Heller, who had been approved by the board, declined the position. Volovsek has taught in Wisconsin for the past three years.

"From a business standpoint, it's by far the most effective guide that we have in this region. We did a little survey ourselves and we found out that three times in four, people were referred by the PhoneGuide ... I didn't need to have too many more reasons to feel more strongly in favor of PhoneGuide than I did, but then when I did a survey on top of it and found out what we did, it was all the more reason to stick with the PhoneGuide over the others."

Shutter franchise comes to Charlevoix

Owner visits customers' homes

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

Shutters are enjoying a surge in popularity and Mardy Bohn of The Shutter Shop Inc. is ready to satisfy her clients' tastes.

"Shutters decorate the inside and outside of the home," Bohn said. "Shutters open things up. The most popular shutter has a two-and-a-half inch louver."

Customers often choose a white or off-white paint for the shutters, or choose from a variety of richly-colored stains, Bohn said.

Bohn, who holds a franchise with The Shutter Shop, has a background in interior design, sewing, drapery-making and upholstery. She began sewing as a child and it became a passionate hobby. She had her own sewing business for a time, and worked in interior design for J.C. Penney, Sears and Ethan Allen. She majored in interior design at Wayne State University and has 13 years of experience as an interior decorator. She said her background is important to her ability to help clients make the right decisions for window treatments.

"Shutters are a very specialized item that most window treatment dealers avoid because it takes a lot of expertise," she said. The type of window determines the shutter width, for instance.

Bohn visits and consults with clients in their own homes. She asks them about their lifestyles and their tastes and displays samples for them. She also sells wide louver wood blinds and verticals, also popular window treatments.

Bohn also provides drapery and light upholstery services. Her telephone number in Charlevoix is 547-0764.

Charlevoix sends scramble team

The team of Brian Brogan, Denny LaCroix, Mitts Lee, and Kim Makarewicz won the Olds Scramble Local Qualifying Aug. 10, at the Charlevoix Country Club. They advance to the Michigan Section Qualifier on Sept. 3, where they can qualify for the National Finals October 10-14, in Orlando, Florida.

This is the first ever entry for a Charlevoix area team into what is known as "The Largest Golf Tournament In The World." Local Oldsmobile dealer, Crown Motors, sponsored the event, providing promotional materials and gifts for participants.

"This is a very exciting event, and we are pleased to be able to support our local golfers," said Crown Motors' General Manager, Bob Ferguson. "We hope our team brings the national championship back to Charlevoix!"

The local qualifier was hotly contested, with the winning team needing two extra holes to defeat the team of Tom Bickersteth, Kris Hanor, Nancy LaCroix, and Katie Stone, with whom they were tied (at net 57) after eighteen holes of play. A total of seven foursomes vied for the lone qualifying spot.

Brogan, LaCroix, Lee, and Makarewicz will be joined by Charlevoix Country Club head professional Bruce Schepeler when they journey to Cadillac Country Club for their sectional qualifying attempt on Sept. 3.

Conservancy has web site

With the help of a $750 grant from the Petoskey-Harbor Springs Area Community Foundation, the Little Traverse Conservancy has established a World Wide Web site for the nature centers, environmental education programs, watershed groups, and other organizations in Northern Michigan that are involved in conservation and environment. The address is http://nature.org.

The conservancy's project allows each organization to make available information regarding their goals, accomplishments, services available, membership, events, field trips, internships, volunteer opportunities, etc. Visitors and residents now will have a source of up-to-date information about the many worthy non-profit environmental groups in northern Michigan while students and teachers may obtain information useful in the classroom.

According to Ralph Hamilton, whose mother was a Macabee Lady, the picture was taken from the upper floor of the Noble Hotel, which was located where the Central Drug store is now. Hamilton was 3-years-old when this historic photograph was taken.

Macabee was an organization similar to the Masons. Macabee Day is said to have been a convention held at the old opera house and the Charlevoix Hotel, near the channel.

William Watson was a professional instructor at the Chicago Club course on Charlevoix's north side for many years. He designed and supervised the construction and lay of the Belvedere Golf Course.

The landscaping was done by Vern Miller. The work was started in 1925. Used partly in 1927, nine holes, it was finished and dedicated in 1929, when the picture at the left was taken.

The above information was taken from Bob Miles' Charlevoix and provided to the Courier by the Charlevoix Historical Society.

City considers future airport management, expansion

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Charlevoix's airport is about to fly into unchartered territory.

And city officials are looking for guidance.

After 12 years of having Island Airways manage the airport, the job is up for bids. Two local parties have submitted their vision for airport expansion and improvement: Island Airways, and Tom and Sandra Mort.

Detailed reports from each proposed management team have been submitted to the city. Both include making Charlevoix's airport one that will draw and service an increased number of private and industrial flights. And with developments like Bay Harbor miles down the road, increased patrons are available.

"We aren't experts in airport management," Charlevoix city manager, Mike Wiesner said. "We're looking for ideas and creativity from them (possible managers).

"There's more and more pressure for jets in the area."

More than $3 million has been invested into airport improvements in the past few years, Wiesner said, including building a new runway, converting the old one to a taxiway, fencing the airport, developing hangar sites and installing a new fuel system.

The city's airport committee is preparing to conduct interviews with the tentative managers.

Island Airways took over management of the airport in 1984. Tom Mort has been a pilot for 20 years, has owned and maintained three aircraft for the past five years and has experience as a civil engineer.

Both parties envision the construction of new offices and additional hangars, expansion of the runway and improved parking.

Island Airways proposal involves: Separating airport management from its charter service and hiring Harbor Springs airport's assistant manager, Rachel Barrett, to do the job.

Barrett would report directly to the city manager, under their proposal, and the equipment previously collected by the company to plow, maintain and fuel planes at the airport would be leased or sold to the city.

In his proposal, Paul Welke, Island Airways president, said the company has been able to provide the city with a profit from the airport for years.

"We feel this can continue under the new arrangement with revenue flowing into the city from our fixed base operation lease, fuel flowage, hangar rentals and hangar leases," he said.

The plan would also include about a 5 cent-per gallon fuel tax to repay the city for its investment into the new underground fuel system, which should be operational in the next two weeks, Wiesner said. The project cost about $85,000 for two underground tanks that hold about 10,000 gallons of gasoline.

Mort proposes establishing a capital improvement fund, in addition to expected revenue. He proposed depositing a 20 cent-per gallon gas tax into the fund for airport improvements. The fuel tax is Mort's greatest increase in airport revenue.

Based on the current fuel sales of 120,000 gallons per year, Mort estimates that this would generate about $24,000 per year for the fund, which would be held by the City of Charlevoix.

"A substantial fuel cost discount should be available to businesses purchasing greater than 20,000 gallons per year," Mort said, in his proposal.

The city has yet to schedule a meeting to interview the management candidates. It has, however, sought the opinion of an airport management expert to help guide the decision.

Belvedere residents press 9-1-1 committee for change

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Persistence could win Belvedere Avenue residents the right to shed their new Hurlbut name tag.

About 10 homeowners from the city's bluff met with the 9-1-1 committee Monday. They were told that if they could get a majority agreement from homeowners on their street, East Hurlbut could be renamed Belvedere Bluff.

Those in attendance are setting out with a new petition. And this time, they are seeking names of people who live on the south side of the street. There were 16 of the 18 bluff homes represented on the first petition, which was presented to city council.

There are 19 addresses shown on the city map on the south side of Hurlbut. Technically, a majority is 51 percent. And the group needs at least three more landowners to agree on changing their street name to Belvedere Bluff to have more than half of the landowners to have a majority.

Barbara Sitner, of 210 Belvedere, said she's informally talked to enough people on the other side to pull off a majority.

"We're putting them in the position you've put us in," said Jill Picha, who's voiced opposition to the address change since the beginning. "That's not really fair."

Instead of having city officials change the addresses on the south side of East Hurlbut, those who are holding fast to "Belvedere" will be canvassing the two-block area for signatures that will be presented to city council.

Another option offered by the residents was to place their Belvedere Avenue addresses at the bottom of the bluff. Committee members are not encouraging splitting the street, which is why the addresses were originally changed.

City officials were responsible to provide the 9-1-1 emergency dispatch center a list of addresses that were lower in error when calling up addresses on the computer. About 340 addresses were changed in the city. The street department is currently replacing signs. City maps are currently being changed.

"Over the years there have been delays on your streets," city police chief, Dennis Halverson said. "We can document your street situation causing us delays in servicing you."

Bluff residents argued that city officials haven't appeared to have had problems finding their houses for years. Why change now?

"It's not a matter of Charlevoix emergency workers knowing where you are," said city councilman, Gabe Campbell. "It's the backups coming from other towns."

"Any emergency unit responder who can't get from the bottom of the hill to the top is too stupid to do the job," Picha said. "The bottom line is, 75 percent of us aren't going

Failed to pass editor's final cut

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

The Olympic sounding of "Charlevoix the Beautiful" fell to the cutting room floor before it reached ears nationwide.

When Dean and Joyce Davenport spent their week watching world-class athletic competition in Atlanta, he made his connections to have his home mentioned over the air.

Bud Collins, NBC tennis commentary, slipped Charlevoix into his script. However, in the day's highlights, the mention was cut.

The first time Charlevoix was mentioned on international television was during Wimbledon two years ago. A volley that traveled way out of bounds provided Dick Enburg the opportunity to mention that it could have landed in Charlevoix. The tournament is held in England.

Davenport is 1-1 in getting Charlevoix mentioned during the world-class athletic events. His efforts to spread the word on his home haven't ended. He said he will try to get Charlevoix mentioned during the French Open next year.

Even though Davenport missed his chance for a 2-0 record at the Olympics, he gained much more. He watched Michael Johnson set two world records. He watched Kerri Strug vault the United States women's gymnastics team into a gold medal.

Davenport said he came away with a great appreciation for the competitors' athletic ability.

Watching them go for the gold was more awesome than he expected.

In addition to the ability of the athletes, Davenport left Atlanta with a sense of world unity. Athletes from across the world were friendly, even during those moments when their greatest goals were at stake.

"Why can't we try to do that all the time instead of just every four years at the Olympics?" Davenport said.

Bridge walks in brief

Charlevoix bridge walk on Labor Day?

People spending their holiday weekend in northern Michigan can let their feet do a walking on several area bridges.

Even though there's little word around the community about a bridge walk in Charlevoix, the bridge will be there and so could anyone deciding to take a short journey from the north to the south side of town, or vice versa.

There will be no cavalcades, big-time politicians or crowds. Just those choosing to take advantage of the official weekend of summer in Charlevoix the Beautiful.

Brave The Short Hort Monday

Candles will be carried across The Short Hort, a 16-foot bridge near the general store.

"They have women broad-jumpers who can jump longer than that," said Jon Hartwell. "It's labor intensive."

A ceremony at the bridge begins at 8 p.m. with walkers being led by the glow of their B.Y.O. candles at 9 p.m.

"Labor garb" should be worn for the event.

The bridge is located a block from the store, toward Charlevoix, and across a field.

Traditional Mackinac Bridge walk continues

The Mighty Mac's pack will begin to cross at 7 a.m. Monday, Sept. 2, from the St. Ignace side of the bridge.

Half the bridge will be closed to traffic.

to change."

Lynne Kukes, who also lives on the bluff, said she would pay for the new signs it would take to direct emergency personnel to the 18 homes that face Round Lake, but are accessed through Hurlbut. Other residents offered to pay for new house numbers for those living across the street.

"All we're after, and were ever after, was to be able to respond in case of an emergency," said city manager, Mike Wiesner.

New street signs show new 9-1-1 address changes

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

New street signs are popping up around Charlevoix and the project is nearing completion.

Altogether the city has made nine name changes, and named three alleys and eight private drives.

The new 9-1-1 emergency system has necessitated some of the new street signs, but it was something that needed to be done anyway, said John Martin, Charlevoix street superintendent. Alleys needed to be named because people live there, he said.

Some streets needed renaming to eliminate confusion, said Dennis Halverson, city police chief. He explained that streets have been split as passing years introduced construction of new buildings.

"At one time, Wood Street probably went through, but when the Pine River Place and the sheriff's office were built, it split Wood Street so the street was unconnected," Halverson said.

To prevent confusion, one section of Wood Street was renamed Crain Street and the other section was left as Wood Street.

The police department said it has not received complaints about the new signs, but not everyone in the community is happy.

Summer resident, Steele Taylor, understands that his private drive needs clarification for 9-1-1, but he is not happy about having the drive named. It will bring traffic down the drive because people will think it is a public street, he said.

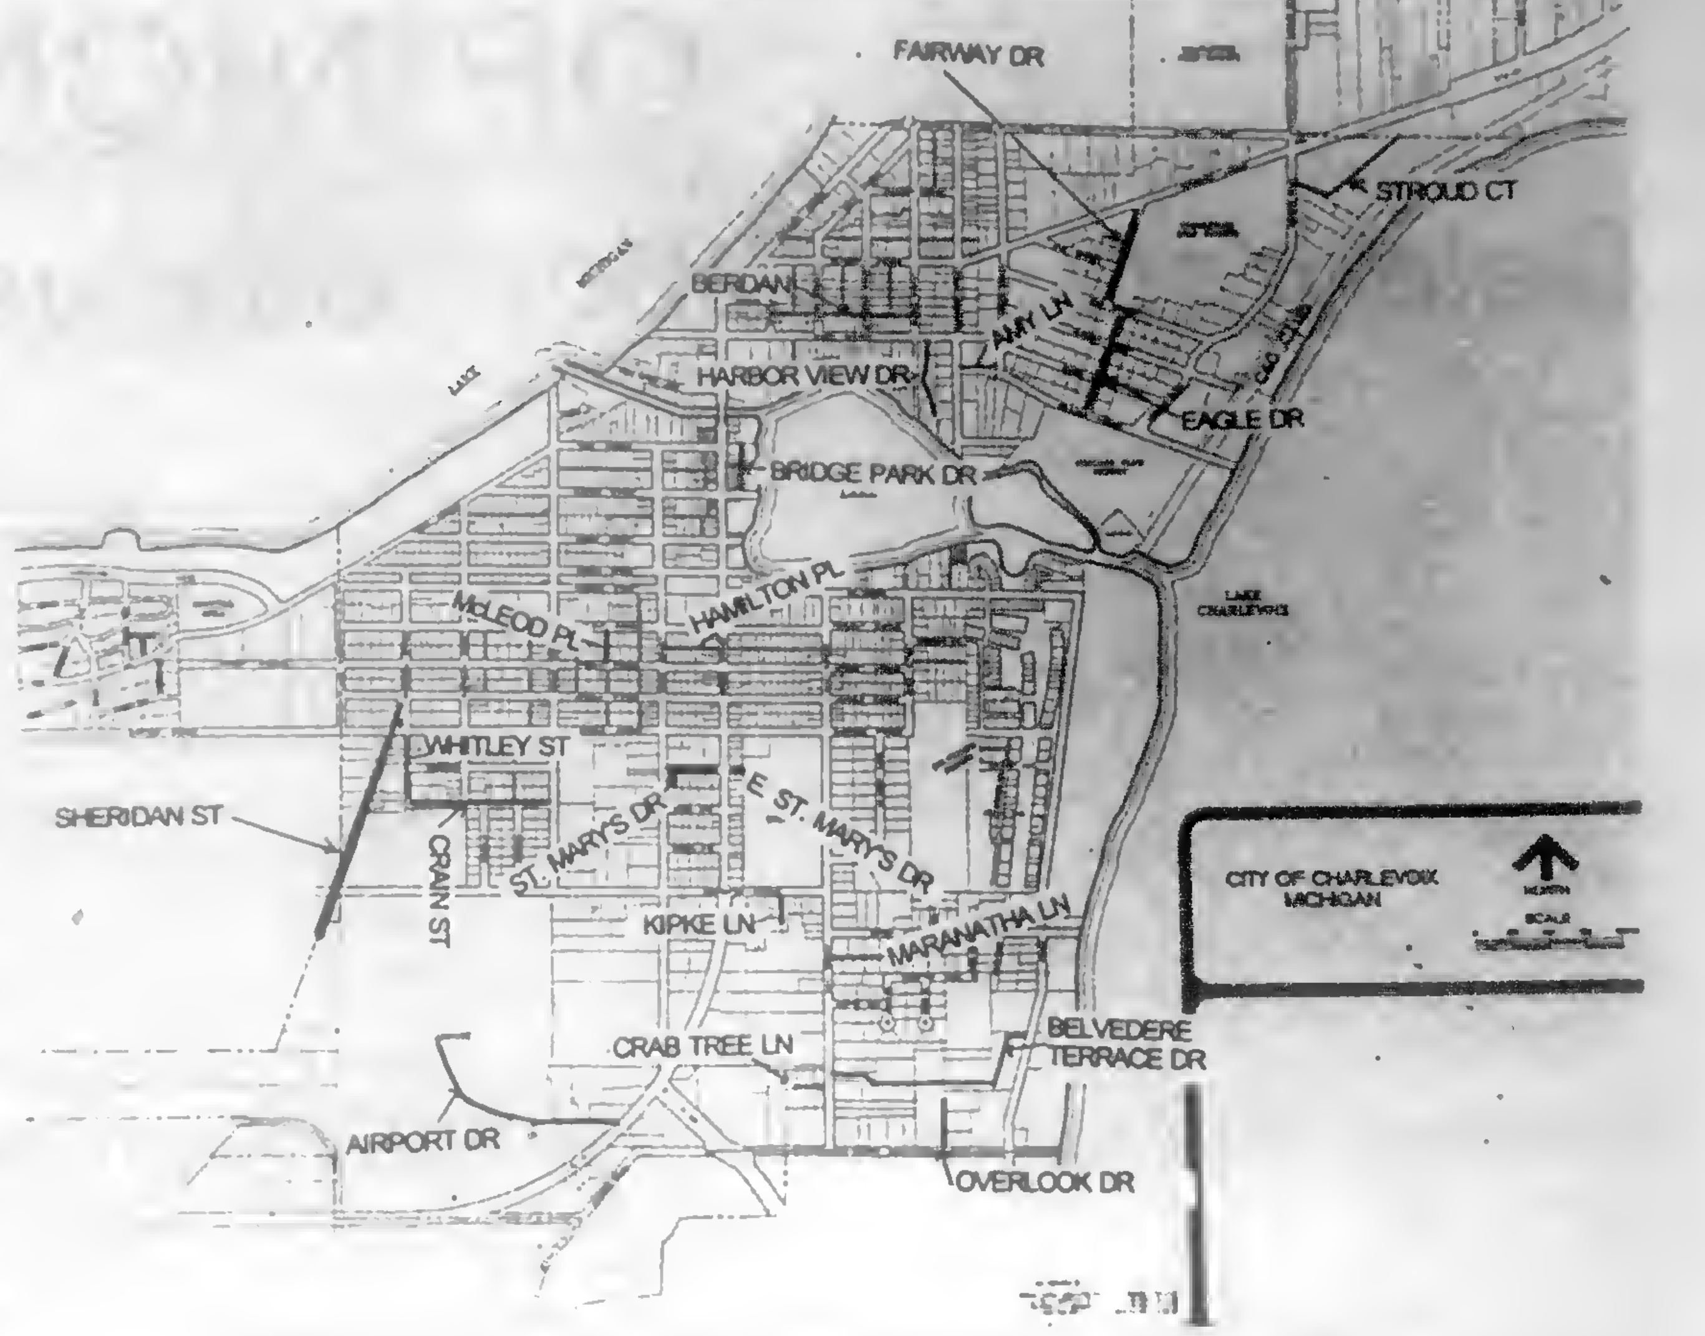
Taylor has 10 grandchildren and he fears for their safety. He has installed a speed bump. Police say the drive needs a name because it has several houses on it.

The new signs are made out of wood, instead of metal. They are being installed by Gene Liotta, a street department employee.

Street names were decided upon by the police department with input from area residents. The department also used Charlevoix historical events to come up with street names.

The city hopes to have new, updated city street maps ready for residents and others to pick up by the end of September.

An example of the new wooden street signs that are marking the recent street and alley naming.



Street, alley changes listed

The following is a list of street name changes recently completed by the City of Charlevoix:

Central Street (Petoskey to Elm) changed to Fairway Drive. Central Street (Elm to Chicago) changed to Eagle Drive. Norwood Street (Garfield to Carpenter) changed to Sheridan Street. West Wood Street changed to Crain Street. Robinson Street changed to St. Mary's Drive. Airport Drive will formally be Airport Drive. Bridge Park Drive, the new street built behind the theater.

The alley north of East Dixon is now named Berdan. The alley that runs between Hurlbut and Upright is now called Hamilton Place. And the alley between Hurlbut and Upright, east of Grant, is called McLeod Place.

Private drives that have been named are: Overlook Drive, north of Stover and between Ferry and May. Harbor View Lane, south off E. Dixon between Burns and Prospect. Amy Lane, between Chicago and Prospect. Maranatha Lane, east off May and between Eaton and Hampton.

Kipke Lane, south off Carpenter and between May and Bridge. Crab Tree Lane, west off May and between Stover and Hampton. Belvedere Terrace Drive, runs between May and Ferry, north of Stover. Stroud Court, east off Mercer and south of U.S. 31.

Celebrate "unlabor" day, use the right to rest

EDITORIAL

Labor Day could be best known for portraying Jerry Lewis' serious side. His marathon fund-raiser for muscular dystrophy has aired overnight for 30 years.

And of course, Labor Day means a day off.

For once, the rest and recreation side of a holiday actually represents the meaning behind its celebration.

Labor Day is a holiday honoring working people. It is observed in September in the United States, Puerto Rico and Canada. In Europe, Labor Day is celebrated May 1.

This is a holiday known for little fanfare. Some people choose to walk miles across the Mighty Mac, or even comparatively few feet across the Pine River Channel. Others stay home, watch Jerry or just have a cookout with friends and family.

After a busy, traffic- and tourist-filled summer, the lull is welcome. A desire for the lull is how Labor Day began.

The holiday began at the suggestion of two men who wanted to honor working people in the United States — Matthew Maguire, a machinist from Paterson, N.J., and Peter Maguire, a New York City carpenter who helped found the United Brotherhood of Carpenters.

They helped organize the first Labor Day parade in New York City in 1882. Oregon was the first state to officially recognize the holiday. President Grover Cleveland signed a bill in 1894 making Labor Day a national holiday.

America needs an "unlabor" day. People's work weeks are extending beyond what's healthy. People are so busy keeping up with the Joneses that they don't realize how much of life is being missed.

In Australia, Labor Day is called Eight Hour Day. It commemorates the successful struggle to shorten the working day to eight hours. In America, many people struggle to do more in less time. An eight hour work day is considered a luxury — bankers' hours.

Take time this Labor Day to do what overly-ambitious people would consider wasting time.

Relax.

The Courier office will be closed Monday. And there won't be any bad feelings about our not being here to answer the phone or help customers when they walk in the door.

We are laborers. And we, like the rest of the working class people in this country, have earned the right to rest.

We encourage everyone to take time to rest and not just dive into other projects that offer little refreshment. Summer is ending. But along with the changing of the leaves comes school activities and preparations for the holiday season.

Enjoy the earned rest.

Celebrate an "unlabor" day.

Voters obligated to skew election telephone surveys during campaign

Editor:

In a presidential election year, the obligations of citizenship extend considerably beyond simply voting or even working actively for the candidate of your choice. An additional obligation is placed upon the conscientious citizen by the present process of candidate selection and campaigning. That obligation is to lie to any pollster who contacts you to assist him in taking the political pulse of the nation.

Political campaigns are currently fueled and forged by the information gathered in daily polls. Determining what the citizens think and what will please them most is an absolutely essential part of the current political process. Who is ahead in the polls and what they should say to remain ahead is the mother's milk of political life. All this manipulation of us, the voters and citizens, is at least mildly disturbing, and it will become only more intense as election time approaches. What can a good citizen do to help keep an election honest and encourage the candidates to tell us what they believe rather than what they think we want to hear?

In general lying is a despicable act and one that should not be condoned by a good citizen. However, in the case of political polls, the electoral health of our nation requires that carefully crafted, undetectable lies be communicated directly and confidently by anyone who is contacted by a political pollster.

If as few as 10 percent of responders (potential voters) could successfully lie to pollsters, the results of any political poll would have a margin of error too large to be useful in manipulating us and our votes. And if 50 percent of us could lie with conviction, the poll as a political device would disappear.

It is not essential that pollsters know that people are going to be lying to them in larger numbers than usual. Lying could be more successful than any third party in restoring political power to the voters. Talk about an October surprise: imagine the election night surprise when all the poll data turns out to have been badly flawed by the heroic actions of citizens who knew the importance of setting aside their minor moral qualms to restore the country to its democratic ideals. We can wrest the political process from the cynical hands of pollsters and return it to the voters. Don't just vote; lie.

Home schooling could cost district numbers

Editor:

The August 1996 Charlevoix Public Schools Newsletter states that as a result of the proposed school facility changes all schools will have "access to learning - internet, other schools, current curriculum information, current maps, textbooks will be eliminated in the future." That indicates that school curriculums will be computer based.

A segment on the Today Show stated that home schooling is growing rapidly. There are one million home school participants now nationally. Three software companies now offer computer based home-schooling curriculums. One of them costs $2,500 per year and could come down.

The $6,600 per student, per year, public school costs are going up. If K through 12 education becomes dominated by computer based home schooling, then the whole present public school education complex could be drastically downsized and join the other downsized segments of the global economy that the schools are preparing the students to join.

Board should explain change in high school soccer coach

Editor:

My son has been in the soccer program since he was 4-years-old. When the middle school started a football program, my son was the only eighth-grader to remain on the middle school soccer team.

Last year was my son's first year as a varsity soccer player — a program many of us parents fought long and hard for. He will play again this year and I will be a supportive parent, but I am appalled at what's been happening with this fledgling, but worthwhile, varsity sport. Coach Dennis was well respected by his team, according to my son. From what I could gather after attending the opening parents' meeting last fall and after attending several games, sportsmanship was as, if not more important, than winning. Another of my children participated in yet one more varsity sport where the coach emphasized fairness and good sportsmanship and she, too, got into hot water. What a sad commentary.

Just this week, I received a letter asking me to help promote the upcoming school facilities' bond election. School board — your timing is bad. If you can't even answer questions on a relatively small program, perhaps we shouldn't trust you to handle a multi-million dollar project.

A special tribute for one of life's special people

The following tribute was written by Lisa Doty, on behalf of her mother.

Editor:

Many times there are people in our community who are special, who do special things that go unnoticed. I would like to take this time to honor one very special person.

When you hear the name "Bunny" Sandahl, what do you think of? You remember, don't you? She owned and operated B.S. Haircare in Oleson's Plaza in downtown Charlevoix for numerous years, too many to mention.

Bunny's the one who would go the extra mile to please her customers and clientele, many of whom became some of her closest friends. She's the one who would always lend an ear when you really needed someone to talk to who would understand. Not only did she understand, but she also never passed judgment on you. She's the one who would do your hair at 6 o'clock in the morning if that was the only time you could make it, and on occasion, you could drive by her shop late at night and see the

The release of 50 live butterflies into the sky was a dramatic kick-off last Thursday in celebration of the Crooked Tree Arts Council's 25th Anniversary. The long heralded event was scheduled for noon at the McCune Arts Center — but all morning it rained heavily. This was not according to the plan of the anniversary committee, who chose the butterfly as their symbol, because it represents the growth and change taking place within the cultural community.

Thanks to the loving care of Chuck Robbins of the Little Traverse Conservancy, the painted lady butterflies had been incubating nicely since they arrived from California as chrysalides, between their larvae and adult stages. The instructions were to keep them in their individual containers at 72-74 degrees, for exactly 15 days, when they had to be released.

On Thursday, men women and children streamed into the auditorium with their wet umbrellas and dripping raincoats, wondering if and when the butterflies would be released from their pyramid-shaped boxes. These boxes were displayed on the stage, decorated with silver balloons and white flowers.

A short program had been planned, including a reading of the Legend of the Butterfly by the author, Simon Otto. When the program ended at 1 p.m., everyone was invited outside and miracle of miracles — the sun was shining. Much to the delight of the children, the little boxes were passed out, opened, and the butterflies flew up, up and away as predicted. Flight, according to Webster's Dictionary, and the council's anniversary theme, is defined as a soaring above the ordinary. Without a doubt, spirits soared for everyone present on this unordinary day.

The forthcoming September agenda at the art center is also far from ordinary. Beginning Thursday, Sept. 5, local glass artists will exhibit "Frozen Light" in the exhibition gallery. On Friday, Sept. 20, Concord Academy is planning a "Thank You" benefit, with refreshments donated by local restaurants. On Sunday, Sept. 22, the popular Leontovych String Quartet opens the winter concert series, and finally the Artrain is rolling into Petoskey and can be toured Saturday-Sunday, Sept. 28-29. One of the first successful projects undertaken by the council, was to bring the Artrain to this area, and there are numerous parents and

About 205 men of the 500 assigned to the battalion flew from Ft. Carson, in Colorado Springs, to California at 4 a.m. Aug. 19 for their final day of training to help combat the fires.

They have been sent to the forests to relieve exhausted firefighters.

County 4-H program adds younger group

Four more years have just been added to the 4-H program of Charlevoix County. At the August meeting of the Charlevoix County 4-H Council, a new group of 5-to 8-year-old members was formally adopted.

"Charlevoix County has been accepting 5-8 year old members for over 10 years and this new program will give them the opportunity to be involved in a club designed especially for them," said Paul Haver, council president.

The program is planned to involve little or no competition. The younger 4-H members work on "hands-on" activities that give them a sample for the many projects that 4-H has to offer. They may go on field trips or will usually have two or three separate projects to work on at one 4-H club meeting. The program is parent intensive and requires some participation from every parent.

"Parent involvement has been an important part of 4-H all through the history of our program," said John Wurm, Charlevoix County 4-H Youth Agent. "One of the key points of the program is that the members develop a notebook of activities that will be a treasure for these youth right on into their adult life."

To get started, usually two to three adults get together and agree to form a small 4-H club. The clubs usually range from five to 15 members, depending on the amount of adult involvement. With this age group smaller numbers are recommended. The activities are selected by the 4-H leaders provided by resources from MSU Extension and local libraries. Projects may include such areas as: arts, bird study, crafts, foods and nutrition, gardening, horticulture, natural resources, pocket pets, wild flowers, and safety.

One example of a club project is that the members may collect leaves and press them into wax paper. These collections would be included in the member notebook.

"The notebooks are never judged, but they are reviewed by a grand motherly-type person to create a non-threatening situation for the young 4-H member," Wurm said. "Starting a 4-H club is like starting a small business since it involves organizational skills to make the club effective."

Leaders are trained on how to get the most out of their experience. Those interested in potentially starting a club should contact John Wurm at 582-6232.

Beacons of blessing

By Bruce Hamilton
Community Church of God

We're going back to school shopping. It's not as easy as it was when I was little. The college student in our clan "needs" things for her dorm room that make no practical sense to her dear old Dad. The biggest challenge she has presented us is that she wants a "lava lamp." Do you even remember those things? Globs of wax gloating up and down in heated colored water!

Actually between her and her roommate, her dorm room is better furnished than the first apartment my wife and I shared together after we were married. In terms of her wardrobe, well last year we moved her down to school in one vehicle. This year it is taking two. The two cars also mark a bit of a rite of passage for us as parents. One of them belongs to her. However, whoever told me that the longer they were away at college, the less they took? At least so far it just isn't true!

Then there's my Middle School son who is destined for eighth grade. Thankfully, for the moment, he's stuck with the basics. Jeans that fit, pocket tee shirts (No weird colors, Dad!), a trapper (that's a notebook to the uninitiated), and all the related pencils, pens, and paper that he deems important are on his shopping list. I suppose it will happen with him too, but for now brand labels are not important. They just have to be faded properly and be comfortable.

It will be hard leaving Anderson University and seeing her remain behind. I don't know if I'll ever get used to that any more than my folks got used to seeing me off for the various phases of my life's pilgrimage. Dropping him off at Middle School has evolved too. It's as if he gets a "game face" on as we approach Mason Street each morning. But at least my wife and I know we have prepared them as best we can for what they will find as they grow.

Preparation is important in a lot of aspects of life. You want the mechanic to be properly prepared to repair your car. The doctor had better be up to speed on all the latest issues when it comes to treating your illnesses. How are you at being prepared with everything you need for the spiritual side of your life?

Are you faithful in the practice of prayer? Do you have a good working knowledge of God's Word and how to find the wisdom and counsel you need within its pages? Are you a part of a fellowship of believers? There are so many things that can pop up in life that are hard to face on your own. It will positively amaze you when you see the difference a good church family can make.

Are you living out what you believe? All the preparations in the world are meaningless if you don't incorporate them into your daily routine. Besides that, when you discover that God's way really does work in your life, you're going to want to learn how more things about your faith will work and help you. Questions? Just like school teaches our kids the joys of an education, there's a church near you that would love to help you discover the joys of living by faith.

teachers today, who still remember with pleasure visiting the train when they were in grade school, and who now look forward to taking their children to this outstanding exhibit.

It is the first time the collection of artwork from the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service will be seen outside of Washington D.C. Such renowned artists as Alexander Calder, Georgia O'Keeffe, Dale Chihuly, de Kooning and Robert Indiana will be featured, and one entire gallery car is dedicated to exploring and explaining printmaking techniques.

Those who remember the good old days will also remember the lack of cultural stimulation in northern Michigan. There were few or no classes in art, music and dance available, no traveling museum exhibits or art galleries. Plays and concerts were very limited. Since its founding, the council has regularly brought professional master teachers into the schools to perform and delight the children, and next year there will be even more programs.

The Virginia McCune Arts Center is the headquarters of the Crooked Tree Arts Council that serves both Charlevoix and Emmet Counties. With the help of dedicated members, this organization has grown and changed just like the butterfly, from no more than a dream into a dynamic center for the arts that is today recognized as one of the finest in Michigan.

lights on, peek in her window and see her hard at work on one of her patrons. She's the one who always had toys and puzzles for your children to play with and be entertained so she could work her magic fingers on you, and sometimes, when she had a minute to spare, she would sit right down on the floor and play with those same children, or read stories to them.

Bunny's the one, who, when you didn't have enough money to pay for your haircut would always say, "Don't worry about it, you can catch me next time." When she knew you were feeling down, she's the one who'd say, "Come on, let me give you a makeover on me," just to lift your spirits. She's the one who would go to her cash drawer and give you money when she knew you couldn't afford to put food on your table, and had hungry mouths to feed, or when you really wanted to go or do something that you didn't have the extra cash for, Bunny was there, willing to help you out, knowing and never expecting you to return it. That's how generous and caring she is.

Doesn't she sound like a truly amazing woman to you? Well folks, she is! And we know because we are her children.

We've had first-hand experience with her giving, caring, unselfish ways. From the time we were young enough to remember and on into our adult lives, she has been there for us. Each of us, in our own ways, depend on her and lean on her for her strength and words of wisdom.

We have been blessed with having this woman as our mother, who has taught us her life values of being hardworking, caring, unselfish and loving. And now in her time of need, we would like to salute you mom, and thank you for all you have done for us. And for all the years you carried us and supported us, you can now lean on us, we're here for you now. We love you mom. God bless you.

Outback Jack brings cartoons to town

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

While shopping in Toronto, Gordon and Dolores Tramper decided to visit a store because they were intrigued by the name — Outback Jack. Once inside, the uniqueness of the merchandise convinced the entrepreneurs to open their own Outback Jack store in Charlevoix.

The Trampers obtained a license and opened Outback Jack on Bridge Street Aug. 9. The store sells personalized art pictures and mugs for nearly any occasion. The art work depicts characters playing sports, celebrating birthdays, weddings and anniversaries, working in careers, and other activities.

Customers choose a picture or mug and the store personalizes the item to the customer's desire. Dolores Tramper said business is good and that local people like it.

"Charlevoix is a good choice for our store," she said. "We're glad to be part of the community. It's an ideal location and the activities shown on the pictures and mugs fit the community." These activities include golfing, skiing, tennis and canoeing.

Tramper said she plans to talk with schools because the store has pictures and mugs that can be personalized to honor teachers or coaches and that cover school activities.

The items are affordable, Tramper said. Pictures with a mat are $12.50 and $25 framed. Mugs are $14. Personalization is done at the store and takes about 10 to 15 minutes.

Customers can obtain a four-color brochure showing the variety of pictures or mug choices at the store at 216 Bridge St., or by calling 1-800-747-0721, or 547-5877.

Outback Jack is open Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Sunday from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Charlevoix sponsored team wins national softball title

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Leroy Buchanan has managed his softball team through many victories. But none so sweet as its new reign as national champs.

The fast pitch team, sponsored by Pat McKeown Ford took top honors during an Aug. 17 and 18 tournament in Gadsden, Alahama. The trophy and recognition in the Class C competition came from a 5-0 tournament record. The team carries an overall season record of 25-0.

"We expected to win, really," Buchanan said, of the 18-team tournament. "We've played so well all year."

The team became the first ever from the Petoskey Softball Association to claim national honors.

In the championship game against the Region Rockers from Indiana, McKeown fell behind 2-0, making up the difference in the sixth inning when Liz Grunch and Stacey Barber-Walker hit singles and were moved to second and third base by Becky Ance's bunt.

Grunch then scored on a wild pitch and Barber-Walker on a single by Melissa Cox.

In the top of the 10th inning, under international tie-breaker rules, Christine Grunch was placed at second base to start the inning. She scored after a sacrifice and a single brought her home.

With a runner on third, the Rockers tried to tie up the game in the bottom of the 10th.

"Then came the play of the tournament," Buchanan said.

With one out, the Rockers hit a short fly. Christine Grunch ran in from left field and made the catch while colliding with her sister, and shortstop, Liz Grunch. But she held onto the ball for the second out.

The runner on third took off for home, but Christine Grunch tossed the ball to second baseman, Stacey Barber-Walker, who made a quick throw to the plate. The runner was tagged out by catcher, Meg Fowler.

Four of the 12 team members were named to the Class C All American Team: Fowler, catcher; Jodi Borowicz, pitcher; Barber-Walker, second base; and Chris Grunch, left fielder.

Borowicz was also named most valuable player for her 40-innings of play. She gave up 21 hits through all five games and left the tournament without one walk.

Buchanan has been coaching the team for 16 years. And some of the players have been with him each season.

"The chemistry of the team has really been good," he said.

The team has gone to nationals three different times. In 1991, it finished fifth. In 1992 it lost two straight. And in 1995, they didn't place in the finals.

But last year's competition involved Class B teams. This year, the team competed in Class C.

Having a national title hasn't encouraged team members to rest on their laurels.

"They're already talking about next year," Buchanan said. "They want to do it all over again."

Next year, because of the outstanding record this summer, will bump back up to Class B.

Women's softball champions receive season awards

State and local champs

Area youth in NorStar sailing program

A Charlevoix youth is among 10-area students who sailed away on the 60-foot schooner, Inland Seas, Sept. 16 after completing a three-day training program.

For the second year, a crew sailed aboard the Suttons Bay schooner in Lake Michigan, learning the fundamentals of sailing and about the area's maritime science, history and industry. The trainees were also exposed to shipboard operations and maintenance, as well as actually participating in sailing the vessel.

Students were selected by 4-H leaders and counselors from high schools throughout Charlevoix and Emmet counties. Included on this year's journey is Chris Collier of Charlevoix; Carleen Williams of East Jordan; Ryan Brooks of Boyne City; Josh Greenman, Mandi Manthei, Derrick Schapel and Nathan Tatroe of Petoskey; Michael Morris and Becky and Michael Rowland of Harbor Springs.

This summer's program was again sponsored by NorStar (Northern Sail Training and Renewal). Captain, full-time crew and student trainees were joined by an adult advisor and marine science and ecology instructors.

Long-range goal of the NorStar program is to develop a fleet of schooner schoolships traversing the Great Lakes and beyond on extended cruises. Interim plans call for establishing programs for older participants; the chartering of longer sailing sessions in future summers; working extensively with area youth at risk; and eventually acquiring a suitable sailing vessel for its own use.

Retired Coast Guard Commander David Smith is executive director of NorStar. He reports that the program has been received with great enthusiasm by area educators as well as by local sailing interests."Much of northwestern Michigan's history is tied to schooners, other tall ships and sail based commerce. NorStar will build on this historical foundation. We intend to help young people learning about our region's scientific, environmental and maritime related career potential," Smith said.

Area man ditches court

Sought for arrest

A $1,000 arrest warrant was issued for Jason Staph, 21, of 1018 May St., for his failure to appear at an arraignment in Emmet County District Court. Staph has been charged with negligent homicide for the death of Michael Burmeister, a passenger in the car Staph was driving on June 25 in Bear Creek Township.

State police determined that Staph was speeding when his car rolled over on Howard Road. Another passenger, Danyel Burmeister, was also injured in the accident. She has been released from Northern Michigan Hospital.

Youth fashion show raises money for Charlevoix teen center

Plans made for annual fashion show

The lights were up. The music was cool and low. The guests were seated cafe' style around the walkway sipping lemonade and sampling hors d'oeuvres awaiting the entrance of their favorite teens. The first Charlevoix Teen Center Back to School "Be Who You Are" Fashion Show hit the runway Friday.

Area businesses provided door prizes and food and merchants loaned their hottest new apparel. The looks were polished and perfect right down to the lime green finger nail polish that complemented the lime polyester mini skirt. Youth strutted their stuff in outfits from the Rainbow Shoppe, referred to by teen fans as the "Bow," all the way to Mettlers. Sally Beemon summed up everyone's enthusiasm by announcing: "That was sweet! We've gotta do it again next year, only make it bigger!"

Varsity basketball team ready for fall action

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Hank Wagner led the members of the varsity girls' basketball team to an 11-0 season when they were in seventh-grade.

He replaces Joe Powers, who led Charlevoix High School girls' basketball team to two Lake Michigan Division championships, two Class C district titles and two regional finals.

As the newly appointed head basketball coach at the high school, he's about to embark on a new journey with the athletes. And he has a mixture of experience, strong teamwork and familiarity pulling for him.

"We're all back together, and we're going to take it one more step," Wagner said.

There are four returning lettermen on the team, only one — Jenny Eveleigh — is a senior. The others are Lisa Parrish, Annmarie Terryberry and Amanda Eaton, all juniors. All four players are expected to be strong starters, Wagner said. They are returning to the floor carrying last year's title as conference district champions.

The team has 11 players, seven of which are juniors and up from the junior varsity. Eight seniors were lost from last year's winning team.

Preparation for the season began Aug. 12, when the coach started running the players and pushing ball handling drills.

Strategy for the coming year: "We're going to run the hall," Wagner said.

Coach said he's working to develop team depth and increase speed.

"They are very coachable kids," Wagner said. "They respond well."

Although Wagner will be new to varsity sidelines this fall, it is not his first stint at high school coaching, having filled those shoes 10 years ago in Charlevoix.

Wagner is a 1962 Charlevoix High School graduate. He is a science teacher at the middle school, where he has coached boys and girls basketball for years. Last year's team finished 11-1 in conference play.

Junior varsity, freshman ready for season tip off

By B.J. Hetler
Courier reporter

Junior varsity girls' basketball coach, Leanna Mosoryak, fine tunes players to get them ready for varsity. And the freshman team is always building through its yearly sacrifice of players to junior varsity.

"I play everybody," Mosoryak said. "It helps the kids' self-esteem. They'll never get confidence if they don't play."

Mosoryak is in her ninth year as coach. Her interest in basketball started when she moved to Charlevoix and joined the team in the 1970s. Her four-year record at the junior varsity level is 54 and 25.

The team's 20-game season opens Thursday, Aug. 29, in Cheboygan. Mosoryak said the 13-member team's strengths are its quickness and a strong inside-out game. The team needs to improve on post play, she said.

Mosoryak and her team are ready for the competition.

"I use a lot of discipline and make the kids really think about basketball and what it means for them," she said.

As for predictions on the competition, Mosoryak said she goes into every game blind.

"I play my game plan and generally come up with a win," she said.

Freshman coach, Jim Parrish, has lost seven players, two which he relied on heavily.

But of the 12 players Parrish does have, most of them have played seventh- and eighth-grade ball, as well as recreation league.

"Freshmen teams have been real successful," Parrish said. "I'll know after my first game."

The first game is Petoskey's invitational Monday and today in Petoskey. If Charlevoix's freshmen win there it shows they want to win, Parrish said.

"I tell them it's their most important game," he added.

The season opener is also with Petoskey, but in Charlevoix 6:30 p.m.

Rayder football team carries experience in small numbers

By B.J. Hetler
Courier reporter

Charlevoix's varsity football team is similar to last year's team with a strong defense. That provides an opportunity to win and to compete with anyone, said head coach, Roger Gowell.

The team has only 22 players, but Gowell said the team gives its best shot for each game.

"We take every team seriously," he said.

Leadership for the team will come in large part from the seniors, especially co-captains, Josh Skeel, Mike Rautio and David Manker.

"The seniors have to come through for us to be successful," Gowell said.

The coach also expects a lot from Ben Owens, a junior who played varsity last year.

Two juniors, T. J. Carey and Steve Felter, are competing for the quarterback position.

A difficulty for the team is depth with only 22 athletes, Gowell said. "A few athletes will have to do a lot more."

Strengths are strong offensive and defensive lines and an offensive backfield with more overall experience than last year.

The team will face its toughest opposition against St. Francis and Boyne City. The Rayders open their season on Sept. 6 against St. Ignace in Charlevoix.

Junior varsity team ready 1996 season

The Charlevoix High School junior varsity team is coached by two veteran coaches — Brian Certa and Hal Evans. Together they have 40 years of experience coaching at Charlevoix.

This year Certa and Evans will coach 16 sophomores and 14 freshmen. The team has worked hard for the last two weeks, said Certa.

"The junior varsity is a reserve to the varsity. Our main goal is to better their play individually and as a unit."

The team plays opening day at St. Ignace on Thursday, Sept. 5. Certa said tough teams this year are Traverse City, St. Francis and Boyne City.

CROSS COUNTRY

Long-distance runners looking for team depth

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

The runners going the distance this fall for the boys' cross country team are mostly young runners.

And head coach, Ken Plude, said it will be up to the less experienced runners to pull a win out for the team.

In cross country, a team runs seven people and scores five. The team has three seniors who have run with the team for three years. They need the depth to help them pull the Rayders into winning position.

"The young kids are determined," Plude said.

In 1994, the team was third in the state and graduated 10 seniors. This year is a continuance of the last: gain experience. This year's seniors — Brian Martinus, Nate Martin and Marc Dohm — are expected to lead for the Rayders.

"They are helping teach the young guy's what it takes to run at the big level — the state level," Plude said.

One new runner, who is showing promise, is foreign exchange student, Hugo Jimenez, Plude said.

The cross country team competes by region, not district. So, Plude said, the races are tough. There are 18 schools in Charlevoix's Class C region. And runners from ninth through twelfth grades make up the 14-member team.

This is Plude's fifth year as head coach. Before that, he was assistant. His assistant is Paul Gelderblom.

Plude's goal is to get the team experienced in pack running, to show support for each other during races.

Currently, the team is on Beaver Island for a week-long running camp. The time is being spent adding miles to the runners' endurance and building teamwork skills.

Formal competition begins 10 a.m. Saturday, Sept. 7, for an invitational hosted by the Rayders.

Girls' cross country: Experience returns

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

The runners striding for the Rayders on this fall's girls' cross country team have experience and health pulling them toward a conference title.

And head coach, Ken Plude, said his team is strong heading into the season.

Last year's team was first in the state for academic honors and placed second in the state in Class C distance running.

"It's tough to repeat and do what they did last year," Plude said. "We're just saying, run and see where it takes us."

We means Plude and his assistant coach, Paul Gelderblom.

"We're just looking to have some fun," Plude said.

Having fun with the coaches, is a strong representation of last year's winners. Only one senior was lost, a result of the student moving.

The team's intention is clear: To continue pressing for a state banner.

And even though the runners have less summertime mileage than when it began competition last fall, Plude is confident of its strength.

"The key will be staying healthy and for them to take care of themselves," he said.

Two years ago, team members were set on excelling beyond what any girls' cross country team had accomplished. This is their second year for the goals they set then.

Plude said Chelsea Gorkiewicz, Rachael Newcomb and Meg Spang are three seniors to contend with on the trails. Juniors, Candice Vandergriff and Monica Browe, are also strong team leaders.

Girls' basketball teams prepare for competition

Wednesday, Sept. 4.

Parrish, in his fifth year as coach for freshmen girls, likes to give freshmen a lot of open range to explore their basketball interests and talents. He also understands that freshmen are new to the high school experience and are trying other things besides basketball.

"The freshmen year is an experiment and a learning experience over all."

The team practices three to four days a week and will play one to two games a week. Nineteen games are scheduled.

Parrish said he tries to bring the girls through the transition between junior high and high school basketball.

"The main thing is to have fun, to learn something and enjoy it," he said. "I'm not out to drill them into the ground. I want them to know what they have to do to get better if they want to continue with basketball."

Good luck Rayders

Golf team to try for third consecutive conference title

All-conference players return to varsity team

By B.J. Hetler
Courier reporter

The Charlevoix High School golf team has a good shot at winning the conference championship this year, coach Jim Glynn said. That would make it the third consecutive year, the same number of years that Glynn has coached the team.

The varsity made a good showing at the Russ Harvey Boyne Invitational on Aug. 21, when it won third place. The event was a non-conference opener held at Boyne Mountain. Harbor Springs and Inland Lakes finished first and second, consecutively.

"We have a good solid team," Glynn said. "I think we're one of the stronger teams in the league." Glynn named Harbor Springs, Inland Lakes, Elk Rapids and Kalkaska as other talented teams. Ten schools are in Charlevoix's conference. Conference play opens Thursday, Sept. 5.

Charlevoix sports varsity and junior varsity teams. Jason Vincent, Ryan Murdick, Bob Summerfield, Dan Pardee and Keith Grunch are all returning lettermen.

As a freshman, Grunch was also name all-conference, along with teammate, Pardee, who was a junior.

Pardee and Summerfield are the team's two seniors. Murdick and Vincent were juniors.

The junior varsity team currently has 11 players. However, in golf, the coach has complete objectivity as to who plays varsity and who plays junior varsity. There could be mid-season changes. Golfers turning in the lowest scores will play varsity.

Those assigned to junior varsity for the season's opener are: John Browe, Chiaki Kato, Josh Holecheck, Carl Schoenheit, Levi Bakker, Todd Schaperkotter, Justin Thorp, Tommy Yaroch, Corey Knapp, Steve Pirie and Jon Sell.

Coach Glynn brings 20 years of golfing experience to the greens and his players. He always has his eyes on the students, calling each one by name and keeping them moving and learning.

"The kids need a certain amount of regimen in their coaching," he said. "They need to chip, putt and work on tempo and balance at the range."

Glynn has help coaching from golf pros Steve Braun, of Belvedere Golf Club, and Dave Poquette, formerly of Belvedere. Belvedere Golf Club hosts the golf team each year and the pros spend hours of volunteer time with the kids.

Bruce Schepeler, golf pro at the Charlevoix Country Club, and Joan Waha, club pro at the Charlevoix Golf Club, are also instrumental in teaching the techniques to the kids, Glynn said.

Golf is a lifetime sport that teaches the idea of the work ethic to achieve, Glynn said. He wants his students to learn how to golf, along with learning the honesty and integrity of the sport.

Boy's soccer team pushes into play with a young team

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

As the dust settles from the replacement of the boy's soccer team's head coach, Josh Block is taking his place to lead a young team into its fourth varsity season.

Block was assistant coach last year under the umbrella of head coach, Mike Dennis. He's familiar with the players and said they're anxious to learn.

"They're a pretty motivated group of people," he said.

The team is growing daily. So far, 19 boys, grades nine through twelve, have picked up their maroon and white uniforms and are running the field at practice.

Block said that although the varsity team is young, having many freshman playing, the team has passion for the sport.

"The kids love the game," he said. "They want to play. They're attentive."

In preparation for conference play, Block is having the team go through ball-control drills, passing and receiving drills, run the dunes at Mount McSauba and scrimmage.

As the sport of soccer grows, and the Rayders' team matures, Block expects to see some tough competition coming out of Charlevoix.

For now, Block is working on getting a back-up goalie. Only one is returning from last year's team. He's also working to develop a strong defense.

His assistant coach is Tom Shelton, a French teacher at the high school. Block teaches computers at the middle school.

Their familiarity with the students, Block said, is a team asset.

"Coaching is about making a connection with the kids," he said, "about motivating them."

Many of the students who play on the varsity team are not strangers to the sport. They have experience playing with a fully developed 4-H league. And the varsity team is their places to shine.

"This is what they've been working so hard for," Block said.

Shelton is looking for a positive season — a good building year.

But the team is recovering from the loss of many seniors, and the transition of having a new head coach.

"I'm looking forward to watching the team come together into a solid unit," Shelton said.

Round Lake height restrictions still being researched

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

City planners are still evaluating height restrictions for the north side of Round Lake. A vote isn't soon pending. But background investigation by city officials is trying to pinpoint objectives and the need for such an amendment.

The change could cause building limitations for people owning land on a slope, more than the current 26-foot height limitation.

"The logical place for a house may create problems," said city planner Gerry Harsch, noting that in addition to height, there's a 50-foot construction setback.

"(The amendment) is basically to regulate the scale of the buildings along the north side so they are in keeping with the Earl Young buildings that were originally constructed there, and to maintain the traditional views of the shoreline from the lake and other points," Harsch said.

Earl Young is the early builder who constructed the stone homes along the lakeshore near Charlevoix Area Hospital and the Weathervane.

In a letter to city manager, Mike Wiesner, city attorney, James Young, raises two areas needing further research before a public hearing can be held on a height-restriction amendment to the zoning ordinance.

The first issue relates to uniformity of regulations within the residential district and the second is whether city council has justification for passing such an amendment.

Ongoing research includes:

— A count of how many lots, public lands or streets will have their view of Round Lake preserved by enactment of the proposed amendment.

— Obtaining an appraiser who can advise the city whether the value of the lots on the bluff behind the land which will be subject to the pro-

Downstate man busted for delivering drugs in Charlevoix

An East Lansing youth has been arrested for drug trafficking in Charlevoix.

City police and members of the Straits Area Narcotics Enforcement team (S.A.N.E.) culminated an investigation with the arrest of the 17-year-old Friday, when he was found near the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, according to police.

The young man was found with what is suspected to be 200 hits of LSD, a quantity of cocaine and marijuana. Tests will be run on the substances for verification.

Police are seeking five felony charges against the man, whose name is being withheld pending arraignment in 90th District Court.

The man has been lodged in the Charlevoix County Jail since Friday. Police are still investigating the possibility of the man making earlier trips to Charlevoix with drugs. He does not live in town.

Police are not releasing information on who the man might be delivering the drug to.

Mary Bert McDonough is partial to Irish trinkets. Her grandparents migrated to Beaver Island from Ireland before either of her parents were born. "It just seems natural to like Irish music," she said. She lives on an island that was once mostly occupied by the Irish.

Beaver Island: Its Irish elder

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Most people figure there's two ways to get to Beaver Island: by boat or plane.

Mary Bert McDonough remembers being bundled under blankets and inside a heavy coat as she ventured across the ice by horse and sleigh. The journey occurred 70 years ago, the January her father was ill.

"I just had to get back," the 92-year-old island resident said.

The trip from Cross Village took 10 hours. With Mary Bert, arrived the island's mail.

"Before we started out, I was afraid because we used to have cracks in the ice. That day, there were no cracks," she said, nestled in the safety and summer warmth of her front porch.

Mary Bert could tell stories for days from her porch, a place she calls her favorite summer getaway. People wave as they pass by. She returns the gesture.

"People wave even if they don't know you," she said, the Irish logo on her sweatshirt prompting visions of her cheering for Notre Dame football. A green shamrock hangs around her neck.

Good luck? Not as much as Irish pride. Mary's grandparents, all four of them, migrated to the island from the greater island — Ireland. One of her three daughters brought the necklace from the homeland for her mother to wear. She also has one son.

Like her children, Mary Bert grew up amid the island surroundings, attending Sunny Side School and playing ante-over with friends. In her early years, Mary Bert was just Mary.

But neighbors on the 55-square-mile island added Bert, her husband's name, to separate her from the other Mary McDonough living on the island.

Mary Bert married her husband in 1925. They lived on the island until his civil service construction job took them to the city. For 13 years, they traveled back and forth. In 1938, they came home for good when Bert got a job as caretaker for the island's southernmost lighthouse.

The jacket of his civil service uniform hangs in the island's Marine Museum. Mary Bert kept his cap.

"The trousers he wore out, ya know," she said.

Finances on the island were tight at times, just like everywhere else in the early 1900s. Mary Bert remembers the lamprey eels killing all the fish and causing many men to sell their tugs and seek work on the mainland. This was the island's form of the Great Depression that came years after the mainland suffered.

Mary and Bert endured. The former redhead, now streaked white with touches of orange, is now living in the house alone. Bert died in 1984, and Mary lives on what one man calls "widow hill."

"There's so many widows on the island," Mary Bert said. "You wonder why the men go so soon."

As they always do, the years have brought many changes to Mary Bert's life. The loss of the husband

Soil erosion ordinance draws fire

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

Soil erosion, sedimentation and stormwater runoff may not be a part of most people's daily discourse, but a proposed ordinance discussed at a county commissioner's meeting Aug. 28, drew a standing-room-only crowd.

Realtors, engineers, ecologists, planners and citizens voiced their opinions of the ordinance that would set standards and enforcement remedies for Charlevoix County to meet government regulations.

The purpose of the Soil Erosion, Sedimentation and Stormwater Runoff Control Ordinance is to prevent pollution or destruction of the area's natural resources. Runoff occurs when moving water leaves property boundaries. As it moves, it picks up pollutants and sedimentation and eventually deposits them at another site. Runoff also can cause erosion.

Many people at the meeting had problems with the ordinance as it has been drafted.

"The ordinance has a tremendous amount of arbitrariness," said Boyne City ecologist, Steven Voice. "It's not defined well enough and there's too much bureaucracy."

Don Swem works in soil erosion for Performance Engineering. He agreed that a standardized approach to drainage problems is good, but said the ordinance goes too far.

"It needs a lot more work," Swem said. "The ordinance is unclear and it's left open for various interpretation."

But Grand Traverse and Antrim counties have an ordinance similar to this one and it works well, said Pete Bruski, of the Grand Traverse Drain Commissioner's Office. He warned that the Charlevoix area is growing and the rate of development will only get worse as the downstate population continues to discover the area.

"We're not trying to jam Traverse County thoughts down Charlevoix County throats," Bruski said. "But it's good to have a uniformed set of guidelines among counties. It's (the ordinance) workable, and I'm here to support it."

Charlevoix County Planner Larry Sullivan said the ordinance is needed because current regulations deal with erosion only while a site is under construction. The new ordinance will structure guidelines to take care of problems on a continuing basis.

"The ordinance language may need some revision," Sullivan said. "But we need to think of the future in dealing with rainfall. The ordinance will impact development, but it won't stop development, but will make for more responsible development."

New lift station work approved by city

The city has awarded the reconstruction of Mercer Boulevard and Palmer Street Lift Station to KAL Excavation of Omena, Mich. The firm came in with a bid of $316,857.09.

The estimated total project cost, including the bid with a three percent contingency and $30,000 in engineering costs, is $356,000. The amount is $109,000 under project budget.

A lift station is a pumping station that lifts sewage from one level to another.

KAL's bid was approved unanimously at a special city council meeting Aug. 27. The meeting was called so the firm could begin work as soon as possible. The city hopes to have the work completed by the first of November.

Mercer Boulevard reconstruction includes storm sewer installation, water main replacement, curb and gutter, and road reconstruction. It also includes a sidewalk extension along the west side of Mercer to Petoskey Avenue, and construction of a sidewalk along Petoskey Avenue from Mercer to Fairway Drive.

The project will replace a 1937 lift station serving the Palmer Street area.

Charlevoix family supports Alzheimer's memory walk

Community should join journey

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

The hardest moment for John Clarke was when he had to surrender his driver's license at the Secretary of State's office. For Dorothy Clarke, John's wife, the hardest part was when John's Alzheimer's disease progressed to the point where she had to place him in a nursing home.

John Clarke and his family's journey with Alzheimer's began in 1988. With the help of family members and occasional caregivers, Dorothy Clarke cared for her husband at their home in Marion Township until 1993. The family's journey with John ended when he died in 1995.

The Charlevoix-Emmet Memory Walk commemorates John Clarke and others afflicted with Alzheimer's, a disease that attacks the memory and the ability to think, reason and judge. More than four million Americans have Alzheimer's. The Northwest Michigan chapter of the Alzheimer's Association reported in 1993 that there were 370 people in Charlevoix County and 424 people in Emmet County afflicted with the disease.

> "No one should go through this disease alone."
> — Linda Mansfield

The second annual memory walk begins at East Park Saturday, Sept. 14. Organizer Linda Mansfield urges the community to join the journey by participating in the 3.5-mile walk designed around Charlevoix's scenic areas.

The walk is the main source of income for local chapters of the Alzheimer's Association, and all proceeds stay in the area to provide support to individuals with Alzheimer's and their families, Mansfield said. Participants may pledge donations at registration.

About 85 people participated in the first walk last year and organizers are hoping for 100 or more participants this year.

"No one should go through this disease alone," Mansfield said. "Yet, because this disease can go on for 10 to 15 years, it can become a very lonely journey. We need to do all we can to get the message out that you are not alone."

A memory board will be set up in East Park at the band shell for people to post photographs of family members or friends with Alzheimer's.

Dorothy Clarke supports the walk because she sees a need for raising funds.

"I think they (medical researchers) need more money for research," she said. "The medication didn't help John."

She also supports the walk in memory of her husband, a man who loved to farm, enjoyed woodworking and reading, and who was a devoted family man.

Dorothy Clarke poses with her husband, John, at their 50th wedding anniversary in 1990. Alzheimer's claimed John's life in 1995, after a seven year battle.

"He was a strict father, but a good father," Clarke said. "He used to pull the grandchildren in a pony cart." The Clarkes have three children, nine grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

The family, including some of the grandchildren, pulled together during John's illness. Neighbors even helped by taking her husband for walks, Clarke said. People staying in touch are important.

"Some people stop coming to visit," Clarke said. "If people want to help, one thing is when the Alzheimer's really gets to be noticeable, even if they (the individuals with Alzheimer's) don't understand you, talking to them helps. It makes them feel they're not alone."

Charlevoix-Emmet Memory Walk

When: 9-11 a.m. Saturday, Sept. 14

Where: East Park bandshell

What: Participants walk a 3.5-mile route from East Park, across the bridge, through neighborhoods and to Depot Beach.

The return journey walks past the Earl Young stone-constructed homes.

Prizes and refreshments will be provided at each rest stop.

Folk singer and entertainer Patty Clark will perform at the beginning of the journey.

10 ways to help people dealing with Alzheimer's

A friend is an important source of support for the Alzheimer family. Even if they live far away, there's still plenty you can do. Here are ten easy ways to help:

— Keep in touch. Maintain contact with family members. A card, call or visit mean a great deal. Continue to send cards, even if you don't get a response. It's a simple, yet important way to show you care.

— Do little things. When cooking, make extra portions and drop off a meal (in a freezable and disposable container). When on errands, check with a family member to see if there's anything they need. Surprise the caregiver with a special treat, such as a rented movie, audiotape of last week's church service or gift certificate for a massage or dinner out.

— Give them a break. Stay with the Alzheimer person so family members can run errands, attend a support group meeting or take a short trip. Even if the caregiver does not leave the house, this will provide personal time.

— Be specific when offering assistance. Most friends are good about saying they're available to "do anything," but many caregivers find it hard to ask for something specific. Have the family prepare a "to do" list of hard-to-get-to projects.

— Be alert. Learn about Alzheimer's and how it impacts the family.

— Provide a change of scenery. Plan an activity that gets the whole family out of the house.

— Learn to listen. Sometimes, those affected by Alzheimer's just need to talk with someone. Be available when the caregiver is free to talk without interruptions. You don't need to provide all the answers-just be a compassionate listener.

— Care for the caregiver. Encourage caregivers to take care of themselves. Local chapters of the Alzheimer's Association have information available, and sponsor telephone "Helplines" and support groups in your area.

— Remember all family members. The person with Alzheimer's will appreciate your visits, even if unable to show it. Talk with the person the way you'd want to be talked to. Spouses, adult children and even young grandchildren are all affected in different ways by a relative's Alzheimer's disease. Be attentive to their needs, too.

— Get involved. Unless a prevention is found, 14 million Americans will have Alzheimer's disease in coming years. Raise awareness and funds for Alzheimer's Association programs and services.

OPINIONS

Communication needed between media and community

A newspaper appears to be a tangible item, with black and white sureties of life as the community lives it, and as reporters and editors see it.

Yet, despite centuries of printing and reading, there remains many mysteries behind the newsprint that hits the streets daily, or weekly as is the case of the Charlevoix Courier.

Thursday, there was a question and answer session at the Charlevoix Rotary Club regarding the role of the Courier and decisions involving what is found within its pages each week.

The session provided an interesting glimpse at how the community perceives its newspaper. There was general support and some displeasure. There were obvious opinions as to what type of news should be put in the Courier.

It's important for a newspaper to accurately reflect the community it serves. It can neither be a public relation's tool nor a gloom and doom, dirty-laundry recording of activities.

Charlevoix people should be noted for their accomplishments and interesting activities. The direction of city and school government should be watched and reported.

The newspaper's role in this type of reporting is generally understood. But along with regular reporting, comes the responsibility of being a paper of record.

EDITORIAL

Many newspapers have cast that role aside. They cater to people's wants more than they cater to historical preservation. The Courier runs obituaries, births, district court cases, business names, marriages and divorces as part of its responsibility of being a record keeper.

One person was adamant that the Courier should not print divorces. They are nobody's business. Well, they are public information, and fall in line with marriages and births. The unfortunate part with divorces is that there is a lot of pain involved in breaking a union. But there is also a lot of pain involved when someone in the community dies. Both divorce notices and obituaries can do more than keep record. They can let neighbors know that it's time to reach out with compassion and not to call the house asking for the former spouse or family members, which would only elicit more pain.

To a good reporter — and editor — there is no distinction between "positive and negative" news. There's just news, information to communicate to the public.

At the Courier, we evaluate what is important to our readers, what we feel an obligation to report and what needs to be run for the record.

Unfortunately, because of a long-time lack of communication with readers and viewers, the public often passes blame and judgment on the media for stories that were included in the newspaper for reasons they don't understand.

The media is perceived as vicious, evil people who don't care about anything but selling more newspapers or airing its broadcast. This is a gross generalization, which is just as inaccurate as a slur that degrades someone of race simply because of color.

The staff at the Charlevoix Courier wants to report the heartbeat of the community. And we can't expect everyone to agree with every story we run. However, we do hope to further understand the community to do a better job of covering its issues. In return, we hope to further educate readers on how we operate.

If living in a city, a caller might have to fight through transfers and phone tag in order to reach someone of authority at a newspaper. At the Courier, we are a telephone call away. Our front door opens with a push.

Letters to the editor

Death of woman and unborn child should legally amount to two deaths

Editor:

How very heartbreaking, but at the same time, how very heartwarming to read the item in your Aug. 21 issue concerning the deaths of Patricia Elledge and her "unborn son."

Some months ago a similar incident happened in the Cincinnati area.

A teenager stole her sister's car, and while driving at a high rate of speed, crossed the median of an interstate highway and slammed into the car of a young pregnant woman, killing her and her unborn son.

A son she and her husband had already named.

However, the local media (newspapers & television) referred to the completely developed boy as a "fetus". The teenager was charged with only one death.

I salute your intelligence and compassion!

Shirley Waggoner

All young athletes are winners, no top honors

Editor:

I want to thank you for your fine coverage of our sports programs in Charlevoix that are run through the Charlevoix Recreation Department.

For the first time, we had a professional photographer take pictures of all of our youth softball players and their teams.

We did this because we figured that all kids are winners, and we wanted everyone to be rewarded for participating in our softball program.

Because of this, we did not have league champions in our youth softball program, nor did we keep standings and report them to the paper.

The picture that was in the Courier the week of Aug. 28, of the Junior Peanut League team was submitted by the team's coach, Tori Fisher, without the recreation department's prior knowledge or consent.

Thank you very much for all your help.

Ike Boss,
Charlevoix Recreation Director

Lots of folks will have lots to say
About polls taken along the way —
But the polls that really count are those
That, come Election Day, open and close.

Height limitations being considered

posed amendment will increase or be preserved by enactment of the amendment. For example, if a structure were built to its maximum height under the current regulations, would it block a view of the lake, and if so, how would it effect property values.

— Studies are needed on the economic viability to the aesthetics or preservation of an area such as Round Lake. The city will have to define its aesthetic objective in the amendment.

— Verification of an original goal to keep lakefront homes on Round Lake low.

A protest petition was presented to the city regarding increased height restrictions on the north side of the lake. According to city council procedures, any amendment pertaining to the issue will now require a two-thirds vote to pass.

The pending ordinance isn't expected to be presented until the above questions have been answered, possibly in October, Harsch told city planners Aug. 28.

"A significant amount of time will have to be extended to address the issues listed above," Young told Wiesner. "However, if the city intends to enact the proposed height amendment ... then the work must be done. There is no alternative."

Elsa Marie and Joshua Martin

An outdoor ceremony on the grounds of the Belvedere Club joined Elsa Marie Conlan and Joshua Dean Martin in marriage on June 1. One hundred-twenty guests watched from the bluff overlooking Lake Charlevoix as Elsa and Joshua exchanged vows in a double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Lt. Cmdr. U.S. Coast Guard retired, Tom Conlan, and his wife Glenda, of Charlevoix. The groom's parents are Don and Sherry Sproul, of Charlevoix, and Larry Dean Martin, of Cheboygan.

Escorted to the gazebo by her father, the bride wore a gown of silk and carried Calla Lilies in her bouquet. The maid of honor was Kathryn Elizabeth Conlan, the bride's sister. Kathryn was escorted by best man, Nathan Martin, brother of the groom. Bridesmaids were Megan Friedly and Angelina Doan. Groomsmen were Travis Blissett and Luke Porath. Helping seat guests were James Conlan, Corey Crain and Dan Avery.

The reception followed at the Belvedere Casino. A rehearsal dinner was given by Mr. and Mrs. Don Sproul at the Argonne Supper Club.

The couple will make their home in Melbourne Fla., where Joshua is stationed as a member of the Air Force's elite Para Rescue force. Elsa will be completing her bachelor degree requirements in education at Florida Technological University in Melbourne, Fla.

Free child immunizations Saturday

Measles made a reappearance in Michigan last week. That shouldn't be surprising.

Michigan is dead last in immunizing children under 2-years-old. District Health Department No. 3 is joining 36 other health departments in promoting child immunizations.

The "Immunize Your Little Michigander" is a statewide educational campaign and a "Super Saturday" event at which free immunization shots will be offered.

The three-week campaign has been supported by several corporations. McDonald's restaurants will be distributing informational tray liners and bag stuffers and Michigan Meijer stores will be showing an immunization video in their pharmacies and distributing brochures that contain an immunization schedule.

As part of the immunization effort, the McDonald's in Charlevoix is hosting a free immunization from 1-3 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 7.

For more information about immunizing children, parents can stop by McDonald's or contact the health department at 547-6523.

Beacons of blessing

By Rev. Bruce Hamilton
Community Church of God

I had a chance to tour a place I've never seen before. I got to walk through the White House in Washington, D.C., and I did it without even leaving Charlevoix. Through the wonders of modern technology, I punched in a code on my computer and the next thing I saw was a picture of the President's home with a great big "good evening" written across the screen.

Like a lot of people's homes, there was a guest book for you to sign. But once you did that, they invited you to look around. There was the Lincoln Bedroom, the Green Room, even the Oval Office. You could look through books in the White House library and "walk" through the halls looking at paintings of previous presidents. It was fascinating.

A different code in the computer found me face to face with the Smithsonian Institution and its treasures of Americana. Another code invited me to bridge the Atlantic and tour some of Europe's finest art museums. My eyes were opened to a world that I had always heard about but never really understood or appreciated was available.

I have a friend who fights the idea of computers tooth and nail. His favorite gripe is that before long people will forget what a pen and paper are for, and for that matter when was the last time you even saw a "handwritten" letter. I can understand where he's coming from. I used to do 95 percent of my writing on legal pads and then later type things up. Now, it's like my pen has forgotten to think for itself. The keyboard seems to grab my fingers and insist that "they" do the talking.

It is a constantly changing world that we live in. I'll be the first to say that not all those changes are necessarily for the better, but we had best learn about them if we're going to keep up. Some things though will never change.

A mother's love for her child will be just as strong and true through whatever life may bring. After June's warm breezes and cheery flowers, January's snows and gray skies will be just as invigorating. A husband who truly cares for his wife will be by her side and share his life with her all he can. Next week's first day of classes will find some kid somewhere saying, "It's not school I hate. It's the principal of the thing."

There are some other important things that won't change either. Like "if any man be in Christ, he is a new creation. The old things have passed away. Behold everything is brand new!" How about, "The Lord is my shepherd. I shall not want ..." Don't forget "for God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son ..."

In a society that is changing so fast, it should be encouraging to know that there are some things around that don't need to change. They in fact evolve and get stronger with those changes. No, you can't send your prayers to www.heaven.org (that's computer-ese for those of you who haven't explored the Internet). But why would you want to when God has said all along that His Spirit was prepared to live in our hearts? Celebrate the new opportunities that technology brings. But give thanks when it comes to God that you can still breathe His name in prayer and He will be right there.

Beaver Island snapshot

This six-year-old green wing Macaw, Bogart, spends a summer afternoon chewing on the railing on the back porch of Lakesports in the village. The bird belongs to the Albins, who moved to the island and opened the water sport equipment-mountain bike rental two years ago. Christy Albin said the family moved to their island home to raise their children away from the city.

Unless you take your own vessel or cross the ice, there are two ways to get to Beaver Island: plane or boat. Tourists often visit the island by flying with Island Airways or powering over on the larger Beaver Islander or South Shore, owned by the Beaver Island Boat Co. Both types of transport provide scenic views, and are said to be part of the "Beaver Island experience." Pictured: (above) is a pilot from Island Airways during takeoff. He is flanked by a passenger who's interested in his technique. (Below) People boarding the Beaver Islander are taking a return trip to Charlevoix recently.

The Whiskey Point Lighthouse, at the entrance to St. James Harbor, was built in the 1800s. Near the lighthouse is a memorial marker, which remembers the islanders who died on the Great Lakes through drowning.

BEAVER ISLAND REALTY

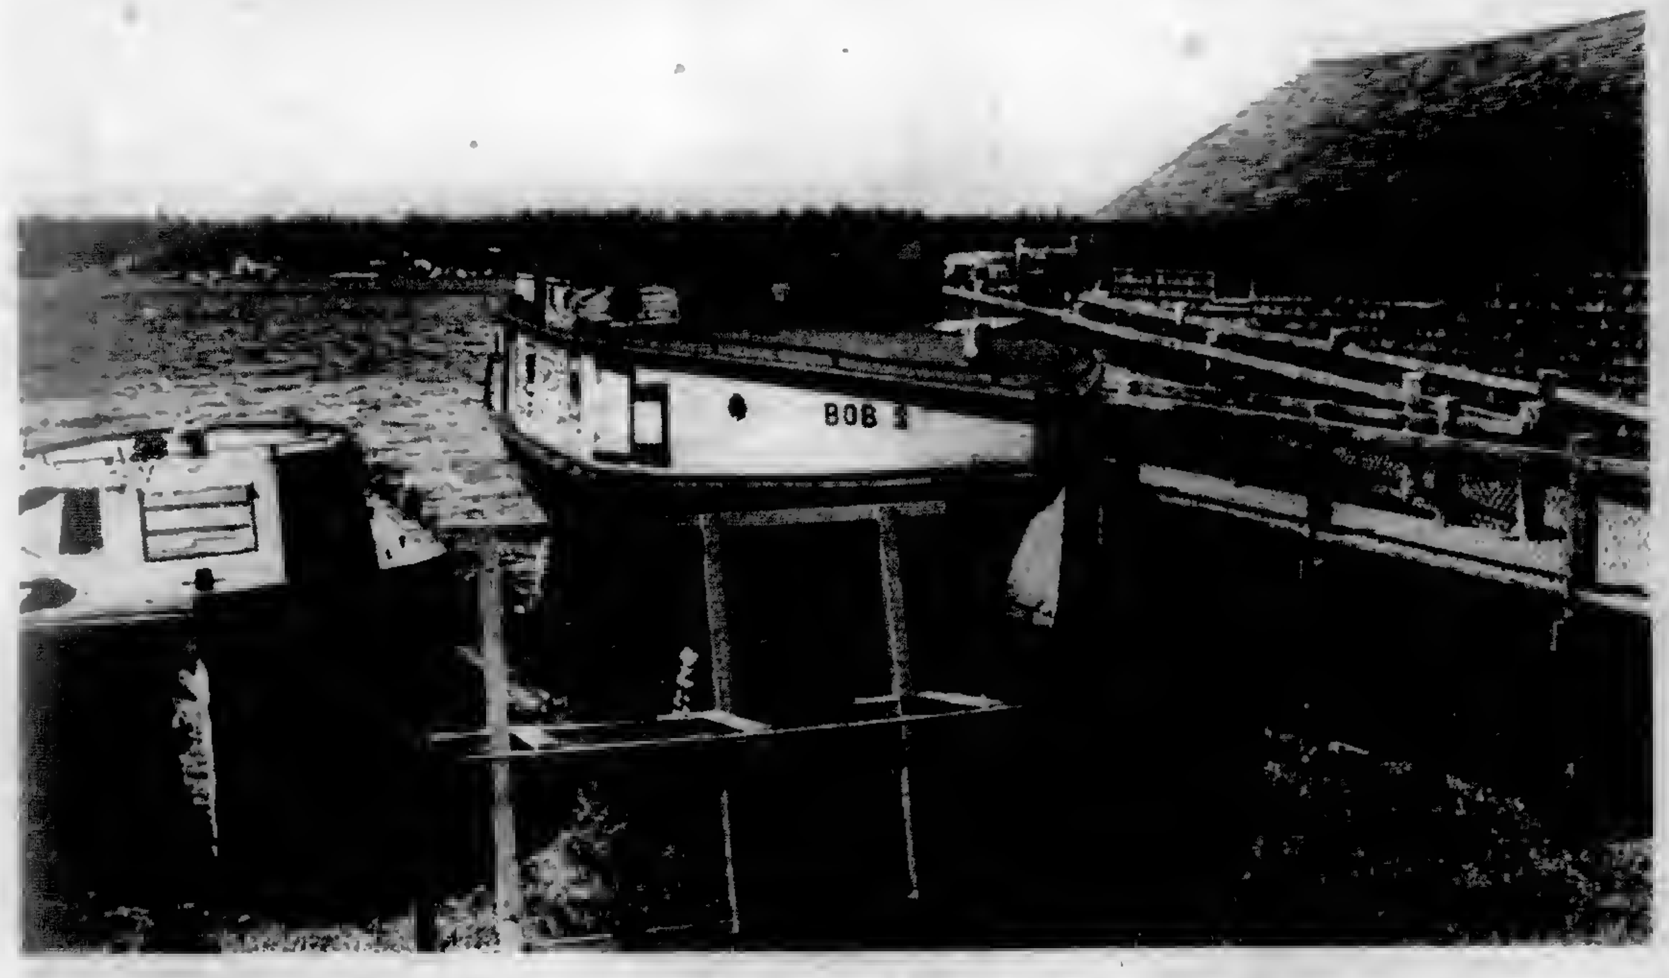
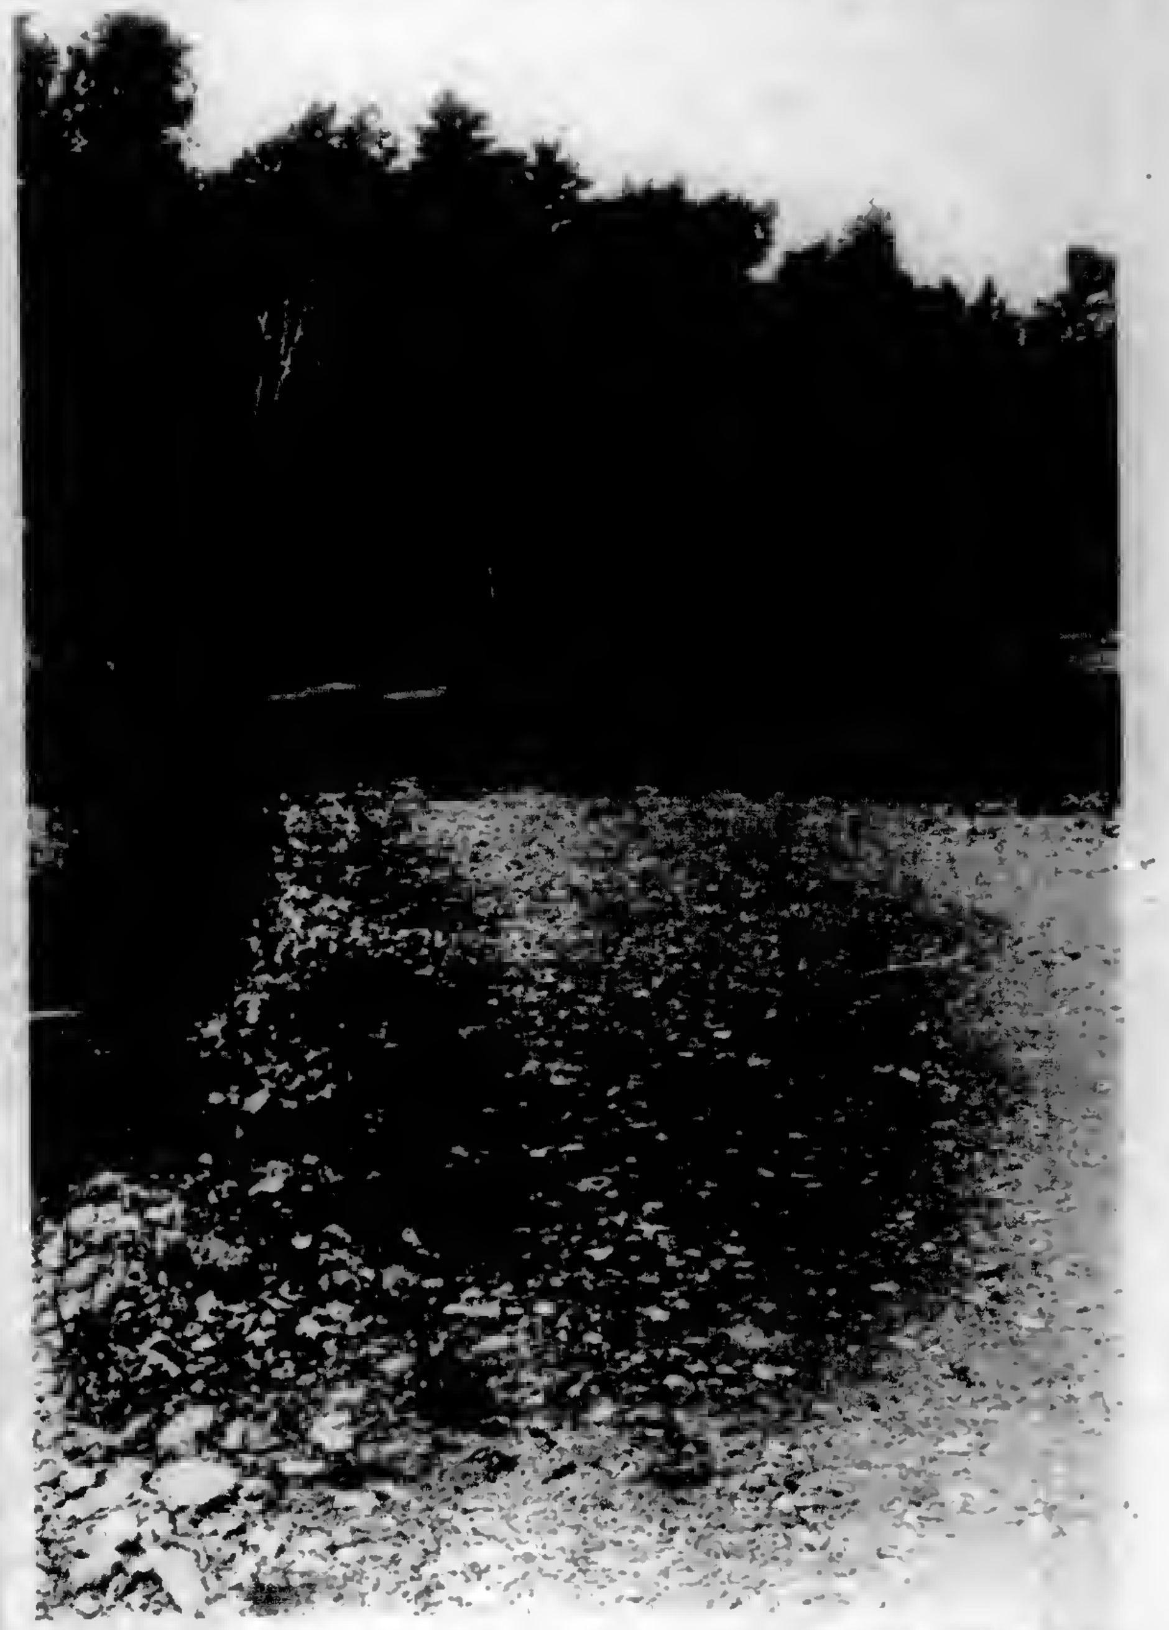
Supplies for the islanders have to be shipped or flown to the 55-square-mile island. This forklift is busy unloading Coca-Cola before the Beaver Islander departs with its newest set of passengers. Groceries are expensive on the island, compared to the mainland, so shipping expenses are covered. Throughout the coming fall, island stores will be busy stocking up on supplies for the winter, a time when the boat can no longer help transport.

Beaver Island snapshot



The Bob S is one of the last wooden gill net tugs left in existence. It was donated to the island's historical society by the late Earl Maudrie. Phil Gregg said the society plans to restore the 1935 tug and use it as a commercial fishing exhibit outside the Marine Museum. The boat is about 46-feet-long and will hold a collection of commercial fishing artifacts.

Some say that living on Beaver Island is like living in Charlevoix 25 years ago. Homesteads dot the countryside as island residents live amid the slower-paced life found away from the mainland. Once tourism stops in the winter, there are about 415 people who live on the island. Twenty years ago, there were less than 200 full-time residents. Young people go to school, many of the men make their living as builders. Women often work in the taverns or shops. Recreation comes in the form of drinking, outdoor sports in the summer and ice skating or inside basketball in the winter.



Often the road near Gull Harbor Natural Preserve is flooded by high waters. This summer, however, they were passable by 4-wheel drive. The preserve was established to protect the Great Blue Heron, along with other species of birds that dwell there. It is located near Whiskey Point and hooks around the top of the the island.

Even though the island is a getaway from the hustling of city life, islanders do find ways to travel beyond the waters surrounding Beaver Island. This satellite is one example.

Oldest island resident helps in ancestry search and one of her daughters are striking tragedies that have carried a greater appreciation for life to Mary Bert's home.

"You think you can't, but somehow you just get the strength to carry on," she said.

Really, Mary Bert does more than carry on nowadays. She said her reward in life is that people have been kind to her and she's quite content on her island.

"You can go into your neighbor's house and feel free," she said. "This is home."

Even though Mary Bert doesn't get around the island as much as she used to, the island comes to her. Her days are spent chatting with those who stop by to relish her stories.

People seek her out for information on island and family history. They want to know if she knew their ancestors.

"I think it's because I'm old," she said."But I don't feel like I'm so old." Mary Bert is the oldest resident on the island. And through the stories, listeners get a glimpses of her doing the two-step in parish hall or enjoying the orchestra that plays at the Shamrock on Saturdays.

Through decades on the island, Mary Bert and Beaver Island history have become one to some. She began accumulating her island seniority, Oct. 6, 1903, when she was born in her grandmother's house on Sloptown Road.

She's lived a life she would never want to change. "If I had to live my life over, I'd do the same thing," she said. Her feeling of contentment — an attribute she says comes with age — permeate her screened-in getaway.

"I don't think there's anything we lack," she said, in a soft voice. "We're sittin' pretty."

BUSINESS

Downtown businesses smile on sporadic summer

Some record days

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

It wasn't exactly the summer that couldn't for downtown businesses, but most entrepreneurs agree it was an unusual summer.

"It was very sporadic, summer came and went quickly," said Charlie Stratton, manager of American Spoon Foods. Sales during Charlevoix events, such as Venetian Festival and sidewalk sales, were disappointing. But other days when business could be expected to be down, such as Mondays, the store was very busy, Stratton said.

The top sellers for American Spoon Foods were its award-winning mango butter and dried cherries.

Splash Clothing Inc. Manager, Dan Demers, said summer business started slow, but by mid-July the store was busier than usual and sales are up from last year.

Splash sells progressive men's and women's clothing and novelty merchandise. Lava lamps were its top seller, as well as T-shirts, Demers said.

Jeryl Murdick, of Murdick's Famous Fudge, said July was the kick-in month for sales at Murdick's also. The waterfront art fair was the store's highest sale day. The ever-popular chocolate fudge sold the best, followed by caramel's.

Ice cream is Kilwin's Chocolates Fudge & Ice Cream biggest seller and manager, Niki Rewald, said the store was busy all season, with venetian weekend bringing the store its busiest day.

Mike Holmes, owner of The Appletree, said business was steady throughout the summer for the store. Appletree set sales records during the art fair and venetian. Big sellers were wooden-carved bears, copper frogs and the giant glass suncatchers.

Northern Possessions co-owner, Judy Adams, said business was steady for the store, but "after the people got here."

"People are still coming in, heavier than ever now," Adams said. "It's a new group of people, along with the regulars, this year, people from different areas.

A one-of-a-kind clothing store, Northern Possessions has more merchandise this summer than in the past, Adams said.

Area businesses are expecting a good fall. The color season brings visitors to town and events such as apple festival help store sales. Most of the downtown stores stay open through Christmas or year-round.

Charlevoix petunias end flourishing season

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

The petunia season is coming to a close.

The Keep Charlevoix Beautiful Committee's purchase of river bottom soil from Ludington could have made the city extra colorful this summer.

Miles of pink, purple and white petunias flourished amid the soil, which cost the committee $4,700.

According to Mr. Petunia, Dale Boss, who waters the flowers daily, the richness of the soil has reduced weeding expenses from $9,000 to $2,000.

Two, sometimes three, people were able to keep the weeds from overgrowing the blossoms. Last year, Boss said, 15-17 people were needed each day to combat the overgrowth from the compost.

Each Thursday, Earl Muma supervised four trustees from the Charlevoix County Jail in their weeding efforts.

However, Keep Charlevoix Beautiful President, Bruce McArthur, said that although about 80 percent of the petunias planted used the river bottom soil, there were more weeds found growing than expected. He said the other 20 percent of the flowers were grown in Drenth soil, also producing numerous weeds.

The petunias were sprayed to keep down the overgrowth several times in the summer.

Boss is expected to make a recommendation to the committee regarding the direction of next year's colorful crop. He said the downstate soil is a hit with him.

"You've got to spend money to make money. You've got to have a good product to get good results," he said. "This is one of the best crops we've ever had."

The dirt will be keep in the flower basins throughout the winter, treated in the spring and reused, Boss said.

SCRAPBOOK

Norwood Township first settled by farmer with vision

By Nancy Ritzema
Courier columnist

The pioneer settler found a virtual wilderness in Norwood in 1866. The 40 to 160 or more acres of land that he bought from the government or timber company stood waiting to be cleared. The timber, often too far away to be easily hauled to the sawmill, was considered of no value but to burn. The proper use of the land, to the settler, was to raise potatoes, beans or wheat.

The settler-farmer chopped the trees down with his axe and then burned the windrows of felled trees. The piles of ash left after burning were turned back into the soil.

Earliest crops of winter wheat and potatoes, which were planted around tree stumps, were bountiful and brought a good bushel price. Potatoes, along with a barrel of salt-for preserving food, ensured that the settler and his family would have food on the table during the long winters.

"Very little corn was planted in Norwood's early days as it was supposed we were way north of the corn belt, but the Indian women raised small patches of Indian Corn near Antrim City," the late Ernest Harris recalls in a paper her wrote. It was read at the Pioneer Picnic in 1908.

"The settler of the 1860's did not raise much to sell besides wheat and potatoes. He sent his wheat to Traverse City and had his surplus wheat ground for his own flour and bran.

"After a time a water wheel was put in at Antrim City and many a time I yoked up the oxen and went to Antrim with a "grist."

"Wheat was cut by hand with a scythe and cradle and raked and bound by hand. The grain was pounded out with a flail. Potatoes were planted, cultivated and dug with a common hoe.

"We turned the stock out in the spring of the year and milked the cows when we happened to find them. The butter and milk in those days tasted like leeks."

In fewer than 20 years after the Harris family arrived at Norwood, there were 45 farms in Norwood Township valued at a total of $109.600. Rye, oats, beans, Canada peas, hay, potatoes and wheat were harvested from 2,125 acres. Labor-saving devices such as grain binders and early thresher contrivances had appeared.

Sneller's creamery in Atwood about 1900.

Settlers had learned to grow corn this far north and 24 acres were successfully planted of Indian corn in 1884. Apple orchards covered 52 acres. More than 3,000 bushels of wheat were harvested from farms in 1884.

At the northern end of Norwood Township prosperous Scottish farmer William McGeagh erected a grist mill in 1876 on McGeagh creek for $800. He ground his abundant wheat crops into flour. His high-quality flour was much in demand for several years throughout Charlevoix County.

Seed peas became a cash crop and township farmers planted 41 acres of Canada peas. By 1891 E.W. Coulter, of Traverse City, had set up a seed business in a warehouse near the dock and sawmill.

Coulter hired 10 experienced pickers from Traverse City to sort 1,100 bushels of dried peas purchased from local farmers. The peas were sold as seed in the spring.

Livestock in the township outnumbered the people by about two-to-one. In 1884 the agricultural report for the township listed live stock as 92 horses, 10 working oxen, 112 milk cows, 211 other cattle, 128 swine and 123 sheep.

Women churned an astounding 13,500 pounds of butter from fresh cream. Farmers sold an additional 175 gallons of milk to butter and cheese factories in 1884. Norwood area farmers sold any extra milk to Sneller's Creamery in Atwood.

Sturdy split-rail fences kept wandering cows from eating the onion-like leek plants growing in the wood lots. Good fences were essential around cultivated fields to keep out rooting hogs.

The hogs were so destructive and such a nuisance that one year after the township was organized in 1869, the board passed an ordinance that "hogs should not be allowed to run at large in Norwood Township."

Every farmer kept a few sheep. The wool was sold and the lambs were raised for food.

Farm building in 1884 might typically have included a woodshed, wagonshed and granary combined, smokehouse, outhouse, corncrib, chicken house, pig sty and horse and cattle barns. The old log farm house had probably been covered over with hemlock boards or a new frame house built with lumber from the Norwood sawmill.

Cheap land, enticing advertisements and a sense of adventure brought the settler-farmer to Norwood in 1866. Hard work and perseverance turned the wilderness into productive farmland.

For over a century small farms and their agricultural products were the pride and the economic backbone for rural Norwood Township.

It's back to school we go! This photo was taken in May of 1971 at the Charlevoix Elementary School.

CT scan fund-raiser begins for Charlevoix

A $10,000 bequest from the Gilbert Saltonstall estate is providing the kick-off contribution for a Charlevoix Area Hospital campaign to raise $500,000 for a computerized tomography (CT) scanner.

The scanners were invented about 20 years ago. They provide diagnostic resources for hospitals, which allow physicians to see inside the body and view soft tissue without surgery.

The scans are used to diagnose disease and injury to all areas of the body.

Charlevoix Area Hospital has not had this technology available on site. Patients needing the scans have been referred to Northern Michigan Hospital or Munson Medical Center.

"The CT scanner has now become a standard of care," said Richard Krueger, hospital president, "and we need to be able to offer this technological advance to our patients so that they do not have the inconvenience, risk, and expense involved in transporting them out of the hospital and back in order to have the test done."

Dr. Saltonstall was a physician on the Charlevoix Area Hospital staff for over 40 years.

"He always talked about the advances in technology and medicine which he saw during his lifetime," Krueger said, "and his involvement in establishing advancements in medicine in Charlevoix. It is appropriate that his gift be used in this way."

Part of the expense of acquiring this new technology is in renovation of space in the old kitchen area of the hospital to house the scanner.

The campaign will be conducted within the hospital family and the community during the next several months.

Quilters' fashion show, tea welcomes public

The Little Traverse Bay Quilters' Guild will hold their annual guest night and membership tea at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 11, in the conference center at North Central Michigan College.

Interested stitchers, crafters, quilters and friends are invited to attend and learn about the quilt guild and enjoy a catered tea.

Also see the Quilters Fashion Show, a trunk show of quilts, quilted jackets, vests, wall hangings, and other related items, provided by Calico n' Things of Colorado. Items will be for sale.

The quilt guild recently celebrated its 10th anniversary and have an active membership of almost 100. Besides sharing quilting knowledge, ideas, and programs, the guild is active in community projects, having made quilts and had fund-raisers for Hospice of Petoskey, Habitat for Humanity, Women's Resource, Montessori Children's House, Nehemiah House, H.A.N.D.S, scholarship funds for North Central's student nursing program, college scholarship fund, and quilted placemats for the Emmet County Meals on Wheels program. Over all, the quilters have raised over $10,000 for these local programs.

The guild is now making children's quilts for the Emmet County Sheriff's Department to be given as needed to any child they assist in their work. These quilts will stay with the child wherever they may go. This is a long term on-going project, in addition to other programs that the guild becomes involved in.

Pending ordinance finding council opposition

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

The public will have their say about the city fining zoning violators and whether land on Petoskey Avenue, where Phillip's Service Station sits, should be zoned commercial.

Both public hearings are scheduled for 7 p.m. Monday, Oct. 7, in city hall.

City planners have sent opposite recommendations to the council regarding the issues. Planners support an amendment that would allow zoning violations to be considered civil infractions instead of misdemeanor offenses. They oppose a request to have residential land on Petoskey Ave. rezoned to commercial.

The civil infractions ordinance would allow the city to impose fines — again and again — on people who do not abide with zoning regulations. City officials have said the fines would only come after verbal warnings were ignored.

Bob Timms is the only member of the city council who recently voted against even bringing the ordinance to a public hearing.

"I feel it's a power grab by the administration to lessen the work they have to do," he said. "It's an infringement on the people in Charlevoix. Just because other towns are doing it doesn't mean Charlevoix should do it."

The ordinance has been made possible by the passage of a state

Charlevoix church reaches beyond racial differences

By Janenne Irene Froats

Swastikas.

"White power."

"Who needs niggers?"

The slicing severity of those words and symbols were soothed by flower petals sent by members of the Community Reformed Church of Charlevoix to a downstate church after it was vandalized by white supremacists in April.

The hatefulness of the words stung the pastor as he saw them on the back wall of his church in Wayne.

"It just hit me like somebody slapped me in the face," said pastor Virgil Humes, from his downstate church. He realized it was not just children pulling a prank and called the police.

Two men were arrested following the incident and charged with ethnic intimidation. And a church was left to strip the building's surface of the slurs and begin to mend. Healing came from outstretched hands of people from other churches.

The alter arrangement from the Charlevoix group was accompanied by a note of regret for the racist attack. To the group's surprise, their spontaneous gesture, which began when one member read of the event in the newspaper, ignited the kind of friendship most abhorred by those who defaced the church.

"It's possible for there to be genuine friendships," said Charlevoix resident and church elder, Garrett Miller. "It is indeed possible and not that difficult to totally bypass racial boundaries."

Miller and about 20 other members of the Community Reformed Church traveled to Wayne in July to meet their new friends face to face.

A photograph in the Sept. 4 issue misidentified a Coast Guard ship. The Neah Bay, from Cleveland, was docked in Charlevoix overnight while the Acacia was in Chicago. It was shown passing underneath the bridge on its way out of Round Lake.

Public hearings set on zoning

law. It is designed to enable municipalities to consistently enforce zoning ordinances rather than allow some to continue in noncompliance because of the litigation costs.

Timms said he doesn't think an ordinance of this type is needed in Charlevoix.

"I don't think it's that big of a problem," he said. "It doesn't have to be this drastic."

According to city planner, Gerry Harsch, a survey was conducted last year to determine the number of zoning violations in the city. The zoning administrator found 120.

Of those, between five and 10 cases have been turned over to the city attorney for litigation.

Harsch said that overall, a small number of city violations end up in court.

"Usually when attorneys get involved, people take steps to correct," he said. "It's a very long, drawn-out process to get there, and reasonably expensive."

The public hearing on 543 Petoskey Ave. will give residents the chance to comment on Pete Phillips' request to rezone part of his mother's property from residential to commercial. He said he wants to sell it for development.

"Sooner or later the whole section is going to go commercial," he said.

Locals befriend victims of racism

They stayed in church members' homes and worshiped with them.

"That is a great expression of love and a great showing of racial solidarity between the black and white community," Humes said.

Now, about 50 people from the downstate church are coming to Charlevoix. On Sunday, Sept. 15, Humes will preach at both the 9 and 11:15 a.m. services. The gospel choir will also minister in music.

There are no obligations to the traveling back and forth. Just a focusing on what various church members have in common, not what is different about their lives or looks.

"If the churches start speaking out against it (racism,) then we can get to the very heart of the matter in our communities," Humes said. "When it hits you in your home, it really hurts."

"If it's not possible for Christian churches to get past racial boundaries, then you almost have a sense of hopelessness for society at large," Miller said.

As a result of the incident, the downstate pastor has become an activist, speaking weekly on ridding the country of racial bigotry.

"The racial issue is not dead," he said, noting that before the vandalism, he was not a man to preach on or emphasize racism.

Humes said that what was meant to intimidate and degrade his church as done the opposite. They have newfound friends and an expanded vision of breaking barriers between unlike faces and ethnic origins.

"We're using the opportunity to bring black and white churches together," he said. "We all share the same needs and desires.

"Out of a bad act, so much good has come of it."

In addition to the reformed church's contact, members of the Charlevoix Assembly of God have also made a trip to see people at the Baptist church downstate.

"All this from a simple bouquet of flowers," Miller said.

Sunday's services are open to the public. Community Reformed Church of Charlevoix is located at the corner of Petoskey Ave. and Oak Street.

Big Rock shuts down

Big Rock Point nuclear power plant shut down Tuesday to repair a valve in the reactor depressurization system. The leak was discovered by an operator on routine rounds, according to Tim Petrosky, plant director of public affairs. The valve was found dripping water and blowing steam. The valve is designed to allow water into the reactor core if more water is needed to cool the fuel. It is located inside the plant's containment sphere.

Petrosky said that even though the amount of water being released from the valve does not require the plant to shut down for repairs, management decided to do so. The plant is expected to be down for six days. Other maintenance will also be performed during that time.

This ends a run of 156 consecutive days, making it the 16 best run in Big Rock's history.

Students return to classroom for semester studies

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

Most of the children at Charlevoix Elementary School settled easily into a new academic year as school opened Sept. 3.

Kindergartners drew pictures, listened to their teachers and sang songs, while a shy, blond-headed boy, clung to his teacher, Dorothy Miller. Some of the kids need a little special attention the first day, she said.

Erik Lundteigen reminded his third-grade class to speak in "six-inch volumes" as the students' chattering increased.

"The kids are excited about being back," he said. "The teachers and students are a little apprehensive the first day, but it's a good day, a fun day."

The elementary school has a sizable enrollment increase this year, said principal Dick Swenor. The kindergartner through fifth-grade school has 634 students. About 60 are new students, and some come from other states, such as Arizona, New York, Montana and Texas.

Opening day is an exciting day for everybody, Swenor said, and the day was busy, but went smoothly.

Opening day at Charlevoix Middle School was hectic, but also went smoothly, said Bev Boss, of principal Dennis VanGuilder's office.

The kids had to search for their lockers and some students went to the wrong classes, but it was an ordinary first day.

The middle school includes sixth- through eighth-grades. This year it has 47 fewer students. Some students have moved from the area or entered charter schools, Boss said. Also, more eighth-graders moved into high school than elementary students moved into middle school.

As the 1996-97 school year gets into swing, the middle school will hold student advisory meetings each Wednesday. Teachers will hold discussions on life skills and behavior expectations, such as students' behavior on buses.

Enrollment at Charlevoix High School is about the same as last year, said principal, Gary Grundman. The initial enrollment count is about 425 students. The high school includes grades nine through twelve.

The first two days of classes at the high school were busy. And if there was trouble with students finding classrooms, they had no trouble finding the cafeteria at lunch time. Most of the student body descended en masse on cafeteria workers, made their lunch choices and then settled into noisy, laughing groups.

Another school year is in full swing in Charlevoix.

OPINIONS

Say yes to students' needs, vote "yes" on school bond

EDITORIAL

Perspective is everything.

In the Monday, Sept. 23, school hond election, it will be the difference between voters who believe they are making an investment and those who believe educators are asking for the sky.

Charlevoix needs to make an investment. And handicap accessible, asbestos-free, technologically adequate schools are an investment in the entire community.

There have been investments along the way to maintain and upgrade the current schools. But Band-Aids do little to heal a gaping wound.

Charlevoix's wounds become apparent when seeing elementary students in class behind partitions because there's a shortage of classrooms, when handicapped students look elsewhere for their education and when dim lighting in high school hallways can't be corrected because they're in a no-touch asbestos zone.

Every community holds sentimental value to schools in which parents once strolled. Charlevoix built a good school in 1927. Since then, the building has felt the thunder on countless feet. It's time to let go.

And a new high school is the best way to make the transition. Moving middle school students to a renovated high school will give them almost everything, including square footage, they would have gained with a new middle school.

Included in the proposal is renovations to the elementary school and the construction of a 700-seat auditorium onto the high school.

The school board's plan is sound. It will benefit students from K-12 and people throughout the community.

The elementary school will become more adequate as the fifth-grade moves to the middle school, which has been designed to cluster fifth- and sixth-grades on one side of the school and seventh- and eighth-grade students on the other side.

The plan is expensive — totaling $21,075,000 between the two proposals. But it will stop patchwork portables and sealants and enable the district to meet students needs.

If both proposals are passed, it will cost a property with a home valued at $80,000 $13.20 per month, or $158.31 per year for the next 20 years. The proposal for the schools involves 3.37 mills, with the auditorium at .58 mills.

Adults who automatically vote no to school bond elections do so because they don't see the need for students to have better than what they had. Some of the same people are losing their jobs during corporate downsizing because they're not keeping up with demands of the day that are required in the workplace.

Construction costs are not decreasing and neither are the needs of the students. "No" votes to these proposals will leave the district at square one — needing a new school and not having the community's support.

Nobody wants their taxes to increase. But we can't think of a better reason to make the financial sacrifice than the young people of Charlevoix. After all, they will be making these decisions for the next generation of Rayders.

Letters to the editor

Education for kids does not come in the form of new school buildings

Editor:

On Sept. 23, voters from the Charlevoix school district will be asked to vote on the $40,634,313 program proposed by the school board. The program is to be financed by a bond issue of $21,075,000, with interest charges of $19,559,313.

We are being asked to spend $3,080,000 for an auditorium. Suddenly, the school gyms are no longer suitable to hold student plays, and other large meetings.

We have laid out money to expand our schools and keep all three schools upgraded. Now we are being told that the middle school should be disposed of. This is the building that knowledgeable townspeople say is "built like a tank."

There is one fact that faces everyone, including the board, and that is "a building never educated anyone." And education is what we tax payers want for the students in whatever buildings we say are adequate and within our means to provide.

The school board had professional help to put their program to the voters, at our expense. There is a large block of voters with vested interests in our school system who will vote, YES. I am voting NO; how are you going to vote?

Charlie Butcher, P.E.

Put grudges aside, vote "yes" for school bond

Editor:

It's time to look to the future for Charlevoix school students and the community! Vote yes for both proposals A and B on the upcoming bond election, Sept. 23 at the Charlevoix Elementary School.

Please put past grudges aside. This is a good plan and it is time to move forward. A new high school would be technologically equipped to give students the education they need for the future, the present high school will be updated to accommodate middle schoolers with more room and accessibility. The overcrowded elementary school (there is one classroom in the hallway now) will benefit from a science lab, media center and fewer students.

An auditorium has been long awaited in Charlevoix. Not just for assemblies and performing arts in the high school, but for community adult and children's theater, travelogues, lectures, musical and dance performances.

The time has come to make this happen for the good of the whole community.

One of the engineer/architects for the new school plans told me that as he interviewed the teachers to find out what they would like to see in school facilities, he was most impressed with Charlevoix's teaching staff. He said teachers in other communities don't always have the vision to see new possibilities, but Charlevoix teachers are progressive!

Let's make Charlevoix a beautiful place for our children to get an education! Vote a double yes on the 23!

Cara B. Hochhalter

Young athletes should be taught about winning

Editor:

To Mr. Ike Boss in regards to his letter in last week's Courier:

It seems like when its hard looking for coaches, umpires, sponsors, helpers, etc., you would appreciate coaches that take inexperienced kids, practice them two hours twice a week and come out on top, they should have their picture acknowledged. When do kids start learning the experience of winning and losing? Sorry you put Tori down Ike!

School board asks for support on the Sept. 23 election for a new school, auditorium

Editor:

After four years of careful assessment of our district's facilities, the board of education has approved two bond proposals for submission to the community. The board has determined that these two proposals would meet the needs of all students in the Charlevoix Public Schools.

In brief, the assessment concluded that the elementary school is overcrowded; the middle school is obsolete; and the high school is under designed for modern high school applications.

The poll conducted in June indicates that the community supports the construction of only one new facility at this time. Costing out the options clearly shows that it would cost less to renovate the existing high school into an exciting 5-8 facility than to make the necessary and expensive modifications to meet current 9-12 school standards. This option also extends the life expectancy of the high school building.

Therefore, the following proposals are being submitted to the public on Monday, Sept. 23:

Proposal 1: Build a new high school, remodel the present high school building to be a 5/6 - 7/8 middle school, remodel the elementary to be a K-4 with a new science lab and library media center, provide technology enhancements to all three buildings, provide needed structural repair and rewiring at the high school building.

Proposal 2: Build an auditorium for school and community use.

The Board of Education appreciates the Charlevoix community's long standing commitment to education.

Miraculous hole-in-one breaks golfing etiquette, draws mixed reactions

Editor:

I was visiting the Lesser family in Charlevoix and read a funny article about golf in your paper. Thought you might enjoy the following:

On Monday, Aug. 26, Sam Himmelrich stepped up to the tee on the par four second hole at Charlevoix Country Club with a Callaway Big Bertha driver. Sam doesn't believe in practice swings. Sam takes 18 swings from the tees on a normal day, all of them at the ball. Never mind Sam's only played once in the last year, just hit away. So he must have been as startled as the rest of us when he whomped the ball into that extraterrestrial orbit golfers say they play for but never reach. And that's when we started to worry — a lot. It looked like it was going to knock up close enough to the green to interfere with the foursome putting out ahead of us. We panicked. A rise in the fairway blocked our view, so none could see how close it came to the green. This was a par four, mind you...

The foursome ahead began to gesticulate wildly at us — and we were all very embarrassed at having hit into them. You don't hit onto a green when it's occupied; that's a cardinal rule of golf etiquette. When the foursome ahead continued jumping up and down and yelling, Sam realized he was going to have to go down and face the music, apologize. He drove down in the golf cart, and we watched, dumfounded, as the golfers surrounded him; and then they were shaking his hand enthusiastically.

We watched as he loped across the green to retrieve his ball, some where out of view from our vantage point. When Sam came back to us, he was almost too embarrassed to tell us: "Hole in one," he said with a sheepish grin.

Cookbook sales add to CT funds

A check for $1596 was presented to Charlevoix Area Hospital by Ellen Zienert, cookbook sales chairperson of Xi Epsilon Gamma Chapter of Bata Sigma Phi.

The contribution will be applied to the hospital's campaign for a computerized tomography (CT) scanner which was announced last week.

The cookbook titled ""A Taste of Charlevoix II" contains recipes by members of the community and artwork by Sue and Russ Bolt.

In accepting the gift, hospital President Richard Krueger said, "Beta Sigma Phi has been a long-time supporter of the hospital. We appreciate all the help they have given us over the years. It is appropriate that they are the first community organization to give toward this campaign."

The campaign is for a total of $500,000 in order to acquire a CT scanner which is a radiological tool used to view soft tissue, as well as bone, to diagnose disease and injury to all areas of the body.

The cookbooks are on sale throughout the year at the hospital gift shop, Bridge Street Books, Shop of the Gulls, Don's IGA, and Bartlett's Home Furnishings.

Anita and Timothy Plagge

A ceremony in a tropical garden in San Diego, Calif., joined Anita Gertz and Timothy Plagge in marriage June 22. Thirty-five guests attended the afternoon wedding outside Humphrey's Half Moon Inn.

The bride is the daughter of Detlef and Karen Gertz, of Farmington Hills, Mich. The groom is the son of Merle and Barbara Plagge, of Charlevoix. Both Anita and Timothy reside in San Diego.

The Rev. Peter Plagge, brother of groom, performed the ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore an ivory, silk dress, adorned with sequins on the bodice and simple sleeves. She also wore a shoulder-length veil with a beaded hem and silk flowers at the head.

The bride carried a mixture of purple and yellow flowers.

Her maid of honor, Kristen Harrison, sang a solo during the wedding. She wore a lavender, sleeveless and knee-length silk dress.

Best man was Rodney Foster, the groom's best friend.

A reception at Humphrey's Half Moon Inn followed, which overlooks San Diego Bay.

The rehearsal dinner was held at Seaport Village in San Diego on June 21. It was hosted by Merle and Barbara Plagge.

The couple traveled to Hawaii for their honeymoon. They will make their home in San Diego, where the groom is a biology instructor at San Diego Mesa Community College, and Anita is a biologist.

Charlevoix County Humane Society discovers parvo

Charlevoix County Humane Society has learned of several cases of canine parvovirus ("parvo") affecting dogs and puppies in Charlevoix County.

This potentially deadly but preventable disease, found in dogs and puppies, most commonly attacks the canine intestinal tract and is shed in feces and vomit. It is not transmissible to humans.

Charlevoix County Humane Society is working to combat this disease within its animal shelter. The agency has consulted with local veterinarians and is ensuring that its health-monitoring system and disinfection procedures are preventing this community-wide problem from affecting animals at the shelter.

Charlevoix County Humane Society urges dog owners to take the following steps to protect their dogs from this deadly disease:

— Make sure your dog or puppy is up to date on all vaccinations, including the vaccination for parvo.

— Keep your pet away from the feces of other dogs.

— Remove animal feces from your yard frequently.

— Keep food bowls and animal bedding clean.

Charlevoix County Humane Society urges pet owners to watch their dogs carefully for symptoms of parvo. Symptoms include loss of appetite, vomiting, dehydration, fever, depression, lethargy, and diarrhea (grayish or yellowish or streaked with blood).

Although this disease is often fatal, getting proper veterinary treatment soon after symptoms appear can save an infected dog's life.

Pool board gains two

Suzanne Budd, PhD., and Dan Buday have been elected to the board of directors of Charlevoix Friends of the Pool. The organization is a sponsor of the Charlevoix Community Pool.

Budd, an assistant professor, has been with the Michigan State University College of Nursing since 1973. She has been chair of medical-surgical nursing courses. She has served the community through work with Sparrow Home Care Advisory Board and the Tri-County Division of the American Heart Association of Michigan, for which she currently serves as president. She has presented her work on women and heart disease at the local, state, national and international levels. Budd plans to spend more time at her Lake Charlevoix home, as well as continue to be involved in cardiovascular health promotion activities.

Buday is a 1984 graduate of Charlevoix High School, where he was student council president. He graduated from Northwestern University with a major in mathematics and economics. He is presently employed at Buday's Sound Advice with his father, Edward Buday.

Buday first expressed interest in the pool project his senior year when its practicality was being researched. He suggested that, since water safety for youngsters was the primary reason the group sought to build an indoor pool, that it should be located at or near the elementary school.

Friends of the Pool was unsuccessful in obtaining an on-site school location but is now building a pool within a three-minute hus ride of the elementary school on U.S. 31 North.

Beacons of blessing

By Bruce Hamilton
Community Church of God

We thought we'd try to sneak in one more "family day" before the rigors of a very full fall schedule kicked in. The vote was for a trip to the Grand Traverse Mall. The food court allows each of to pick our favorites for lunch, and then head to the movies. Settling on food was a whole lot easier than uniting on a film, but the eventual winner was "Jack," starring Robin Williams.

In a story line that only a movie could pull off, we are introduced to a young couple who give birth to a son whose biological clock isn't working right. The boy was born only two months into the pregnancy but was full term nonetheless. The doctors told the amazed parents that "Jack" was growing at four times the normal rate of most people. So when he was ten, he would look like a 40-year-old man. And therein lies the beauty and fascination of this cinematic tale.

We watch Robin Williams' 40-year-old body view the world with the eyes of a 10-year-old child. There's the wonderment of seeing a butterfly first fight its way out of the cocoon. There's the creativity in play that finds a cardboard box being a whole lot more fun than any store-bought toy. There's the struggle of making friends and gaining acceptance for who and what you are as an individual. You name the adventure that you went through when you were a kid or the challenge you faced with your own child and chances are it was a part of the movie.

I laughed and I cried. I cheered for Jack. I wanted to hug his mom and dad. Life is not always easy and growing up has its good points along with its not so satisfying ones. But the message of the film that so spoke to me was the joy of looking at life through the eyes of a child, regardless of your age. And you know what? That will preach.

Think about Jesus' own dealings with children. He spoke of them as being the very essence of the kingdom of God. He played with them, let them climb all over him, and they knew He loved them. He sternly warned that anyone who discouraged their young faith and enthusiasm for life would be better off taking a long walk off a short pier. But most importantly, He said that if you really wanted to know God in your life, if you really wanted to understand the possibilities that life really offered, you had to be born again — become as a young child, trusting and accepting in your spirit.

We all have to grow up. Time has a way of doing that to us. But in our hearts, that child needs to hang in there. God sets new wonders, new adventures, new joys and so much more before us each and every day. The very nature of our faith should tell us that our greatest hope is found in trusting our heavenly Father's wisdom and unconditional love. We need to be HIS children and live each day with the child-like eyes that are still a part of our spirits, viewing the majesty and magic of life that God daily unfolds before those He loves eternally.

Boulder Park Terrace opens new rehabilitation wing

Inpatient, outpatient care

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

A new rehabilitation services wing at Boulder Park Terrace will be presented to the community at an open house from 3-6 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 12.

Boulder Park has built a model of a partial "house" so that patients recovering from a neurologic or orthopedic injuries can relearn and practice everyday skills, such as opening and locking doors, walking on various surfaces and using kitchen appliances. A miniature putting green provides golfing practice.

> "It's a wonderful feeling to see people get well and go home. Some come back to visit without their walkers or canes and that's exciting."
> — Sue Bush, director of nursing

The purpose of the new rehabilitation services is to provide a stepping stone between the hospital and returning home.

Carrie Brown recently arrived at Boulder Park from the hospital following surgery. The 83-year-old is working through rehabilitation so that she can return to her own home, south of Charlevoix. She lived independently before the surgery and said she hopes to return home soon.

Some people use the center on an outpatient basis for continued rehabilitation after they have met their goals and gone home. It helps them keep their skills and strength, said Sue Bush, director of nursing.

Bush said the rehabilitation wing was built as a result of a survey evaluating community needs.

"We're seeing a change in the health care system in this country. People are being asked to leave the hospital sooner," she said, adding that not everyone is quite ready to return home at that point.

Construction of the wing began last fall and was completed early this summer. The rehabilitation team is led by a doctor and includes a psychologist and physical, occupational and speech therapists.

"The staff is excited," Bush said. "It's a wonderful feeling to see people get well and go home. Some come back to visit without their walkers or canes and that's exciting."

Charlevoix company brings new foam blocks to Michigan

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

An engineering challenge has thrust Northwest Design Group into the limelight while its innovative solution supports a new bridge in Emmet County's Springvale Township.

The design and construction of the Oden Island bridge is a first for the state of Michigan, said Howard Haselschwardt, president of the Charlevoix civil engineering consulting firm.

Oden Island Road crossing Crooked Lake north of Petoskey, is the site of the 22-foot-long bridge. Because the ground is weak and contains soft clay and soil, the company decided on a lightweight timber bridge structure and light, foam blocks for fill material. The blocks, known as expanded polystyrene foam blocks, were developed in Norway. They are being used for the first time in Michigan.

The blocks will support the causeway carrying the road to each end of the new bridge.

Northwest Design Group researched light-weight fill possibilities and decided on the foam blocks, which are manufactured by Falcon Manufacturing in Byron Center.

The other option to support the causeway was excavation of the soft soil, replacing it with typical embankment fill material, but the company found that expensive and messy.

Another advantage of the foam blocks is their weight of 1.5 pounds per cubic foot, compared to 120 pounds per cubic foot for typical fill soil.

Northwest Design Group was founded in 1981 by Irvin Sturm. Haselschwardt bought the company in 1995. Sturm is now vice president. The company is working on more than 40 projects throughout northern lower and upper Michigan.

A geotechnical testing laboratory was installed at the company about three years ago and Haselschwardt said Northwest Design Group is the only firm with the capability to test materials in-house.

The company was chosen hy Northern Michigan Hospital for quality control testing of materials for the hospital's planned expansion and renovation, beginning this month.

The combination of testing facilities and a highly-trained, competent staff bring the company up to the challenges of its projects, Haselschwardt said.

"I'm intensely proud of the employees," Haselschwardt said. "We're able to do what we do because of our people."

The company's 11-person staff includes engineers, surveyors, engineering technicians and administrative personnel. Together they work on structural projects such as buildings, bridges, roads, water supply and sewer utility systems. A large percentage of clients are public agencies, municipalities, cities and counties.

Northwest Design Group is excited about the innovative design of the Oden Island bridge. Other than Norway, the foam blocks have limited use thus far in the United States.

From his office, Howard Haselschwardt, president of Northwest Design Group, explains the technique of the innovative foam blocks being used in the construction of the Oden Island bridge over Crooked Lake. The business has been operating in Charlevoix since 1981, when it was founded by Irvin Sturm. The blocks are just part of the materials the firm believes will build a lightweight bridge.

Business in brief

Charlevoix man receives multiple honors

Tim Bruce, of GHA Financial Services, was recently awarded three distinguished awards from The National Association of Health Underwriters and The National Association of Life Underwriters.

He received The National Quality Award for the fifth time. He was also given the Presidents Council Award and the National Sales Achievement Award for the sixth time.

Bruce also received the President's Council Award for qualifying for the Leading Producers Round Table by The National Associate of Health Underwriters. Few agents qualify for all three of these awards and by doing so, Bruce ranks in the top 3 percent of all Life, and Health Underwriters in the Nation. His office is located in Charlevoix.

Consumers instructs campaigners

As the national political conventions conclude and local campaigns heat up, Consumers Power Co. is reminding enthusiastic campaigners not to nail, staple, tack or pin posters or flyers on utility poles.

During an outage, a line worker may have to climb the pole in order to restore electric service. Nails and other pieces of hard metal interfere with climbing spikes ability to grip the pole. If a crew member looses footing high above the ground, the fall could be fatal.

Retailers seek more employees

Nearly half of all Michigan retailers are having trouble finding employees to work in their stores, and many are raising wages in an attempt to attract qualified workers.

In most cases, retailers are absorbing the higher wage costs rather than passing them on to consumers. The result is shrinking margins and greater pressure on retailers in the highly-competitive marketplace.

Those are among the findings of July's Michigan Retail Index, the monthly survey of Michigan Retailers Association members.

The Index also found that July sales activity remained positive. Fifty-four percent of retailers reported increased sales from a year ago. That was up from 50 percent in June and 52 percent in May.

The monthly survey showed 49 percent of retailers reporting "trouble hiring workers' and 41 percent saying they have increased wages to attract qualified workers. At the same time, 78 percent reported no increase in prices from a year ago.

Members of the Michigan Retailers Association operate more than 8,000 stores across the state.

Farmers ready for vote

On Tuesday, Oct. 1, the Department of Agriculture will conduct a second referendum on the sheep and wool promotion, research, education and information order act of 1994.

The order will go into effect if it is approved in this referendum by sheep producers and feeders, and importers of sheep and sheep products.

If the order is approved, it will become final, and a nationwide program will go into effect to collect assessments from the sheep and wool industry to carry out research and promotion activities to benefit the industry.

A referendum on this same issue was conducted Feb. 6, 1996, but the procedures were applied incorrectly and inconsistently.

Completed absentee ballots for eligible farmers must be received in the County CES office by Friday, Sept. 27. Ballots will be counted Wednesday, Oct. 16.

Rayders topped by St. Ignace Saints in season opener

Up against Grayling next

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

The scoreboard didn't tell the full story of the Rayders opening football game Friday. Numbers showing a 29-6 loss to St. Ignace weren't encouraging.

Head coach Roger Gowell fills in where the numbers leave off.

"I think our kids made their best effort," he said. "After breaking down the (game) film, the kids played a good football game."

> "We just have to improve in those areas that we had trouble in the other night."
> — Roger Gowell, head coach

The coach is using Friday's play to prepare the team for its first road game. At 7:30 p.m: Friday, Sept. 13, the Rayders square off against Grayling. Both teams run a 5-2 defense, with the Rayders preparing to face an offense quite different from the Saints. The Grayling team uses option offense, leaving its quarterback opportunities to run the ball.

"We just have to improve in those areas that we had trouble in the other night," Gowell said.

During Friday's game, the first half was close for both teams, with St. Ignace scoring on their first possession of the game. Most of the first quarter was spent watching the Saints march the ball downfield for its touchdown.

The Rayders first time in the end zone came in the second quarter, their second possession of the ball. An attempt for a two-point conversion failed.

St. Ignace threatened to score before the close of the first half, but time ran out. The teams headed to the locker rooms with a 7-6 score on the board.

Two second half turnovers and a blocked punt proved costly to Charlevoix. Initial second-half possession was lost for lack of yardage, with the Rayders punting the ball away.

The Saints blocked the kick and recovered the ball on the 20-yard line. Charlevoix intercepted the second play of the Saints' drive, taking possession at the 2-yard line. Then a series of miscues and mistakes opened the game up in favor of the visitors.

"We had poor field position in the second half," Gowell said. "We never got our offense in gear and going in the second half."

The Rayders threw an interception for a touchdown for the Saints. A two-point conversion gave the visitors a 15-6 lead. The ensuing kickoff was bobbled and Charlevoix was forced to start from its own 8-yard line. Unable to move the ball, they punted from the end zone, giving St. Ignace good field position.

Another offensive drive and a personal foul against Charlevoix resulted in a third touchdown for the Saints. The third quarter ended 22-6.

St. Ignace scored another touchdown late in the game to give them a 29-6 victory.

"We made mistakes which gave St. Ignace the chance to score," Gowell said. "We couldn't stop the outside running game."

David Manker led Rayder rushing with 51 yards on 11 carries. Chris Dominic handled the ball seven times for 41 yards. Manker was also the Rayders' top receiver with four catches for 40 yards. Gowell noted Josh Skeel for tough defense.

"They gave it their best effort," Gowell said of the team. "St. Ignace played a mistake-free game, and we made some mistakes and it cost us."

Robert Anzell is about to be taken down by St. Ignace as he carries the ball past the 30-yard line during Friday's opening game of the season. The Rayders spent much of the game struggling to gain good field position when taking posession of the ball. Their only touchdown came early in the game.

Girls' basketball team off to slow start

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

The Charlevoix High School girls' basketball team is still waiting to gel, said head coach, Hank Wagner.

The team was 0-3 as of Monday.

"We're still trying to figure out where everybody fits in," Wagner said.

The team's first game, which was played at Cheboygan, ended 72-60. Most of the game left the Rayders trailing by six-to-eight points.

"We couldn't quite catch them," Wagner said.

Top scorers for Charlevoix in that game were Lisa Parrish, 26, and Amanda Eaton, 16.

The team played its first game on the home court against Grayling. It lost 59-49. Wagner said the team scored 24 points in the second quarter and dropped back to seven in the third. He said the team just couldn't get the points it needed in the second half.

Top scorer for the Rayders was Amanda Eaton with 15.

The Rayders lost to the Petoskey Northmen Thursday, 75-43.

"We didn't play well together," Wagner said. "We had some spurts but nothing that ever connected."

Parrish was again high scorer with 13 points. Eaton followed with 10.

Wagner said the team is still practicing three days a week. And he's drilling the basics.

"It doesn't matter if your 0-3 or 20-3, you always practice fundamentals," he said.

The Rayders play Ellsworth at home 6 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 17.

Friday accident injures elderly downstate couple

A Charlevoix man was responsible for injuring a downstate couple Friday when he pulled his truck in front of them on U.S. 31, according to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department.

David Ray Russell, 34, drove off to the right shoulder and attempted to make a U-turn when his 1963 pickup was struck by an oncoming car. Police said both vehicles were heading south on the highway before the accident.

Arthur Baker, 60, and Beverly Baker, 57, both of Sandford, were trapped inside their 1979 Chevrolet Caprice following the impact, which occurred just before noon. The Jaws of Life were used to free Beverly after being trapped for about 20 minutes.

The couple was taken to Charlevoix Area Hospital, from which Beverly was released Monday, according to a hospital spokesperson. Mr. Baker was treated and released. There is no record of Russell having been treated for injuries, according to a spokesman at the hospital.

Brian Alofs was on his way to Traverse City when he saw the accident, shortly after it occurred. The recent graduate of Northwestern Michigan Police Academy said he jumped out of his car and helped an off-duty ambulance technician from Torch Lake with the elderly couple by taking vital signs and talking to them. Alofs held the woman's head to prevent damage to the spine, while the technician held the man's head while onlookers called for an ambulance.

The accident remains under investigation.

SCRAPBOOK

Charlevoix's Sugar Bowl remembered

In 1873, Dr. George W. Crouter came from Grand Rapids and opened a small drug store in the Kyes building, on the north side of the river, just east of the Fountain City House (location of present day, Weathervane Terrace Hotel).

In 1875 he built a store on Bridge Street, which was also his dental office. It is still in use today — the last of the old wooden structures of the pioneer days. In 1882 Archie Butters built a brick structure to the south of the Crouter building. It was occupied for many years by George W. Miller, clothier. He was a survivor of the 1887 Champlain disaster. At the turn of the century George Glados came to America from Greece and started a candy making business in the building, calling his establishment "The Sugar Bowl."

He soon added ice cream to the line, and with the help of his brother, John, he did a thriving business. The depression killed the candy end of the business. The place became by degrees a restaurant, but was known for more than fifty years as "The Sugar Bowl."

Teachers, support staff contracts settled

Raises under cost of living

District teachers and support staff have agreed to a new three-year contract. The school board ratified the contract at its meeting Monday. The old contract expired Aug. 31.

Teachers and support staff will receive a 2 percent annual salary increase for the next three years. The increase is below the cost of living.

Preliminary salary ranges show that teachers in their first year and holding a bachelor's degree start with a salary of $27,624. This jumps to $29,705 for those teachers with master's degrees.

Teachers with 25 years or more of experience, holding a bachelor's degree, start with a salary of $46,797. This jumps to $52,562 for teachers with master's degrees.

Preliminary support staff salary ranges show that first-year custodians start at $10.96 per hour and with 20 or more years of experience will earn $15.83. A cook ranges from $11.68 per hour to $15.73 per hour. A secretary ranges from $10.40 per hour to $14.90 per hour. Teacher assistants range from $9.76 per hour to $14.14.

No one is happy about the increase being below the cost-of-living, said Tom Sothard, teacher representative for the union. But even if it wasn't what they wanted, the teachers agreed.

"We tied salaries to revenues," Sothard said. "Charlevoix had a unique situation because of the number of kids that left the district. We'll continue to take a look at it."

Remains of unknown man finally laid to rest

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

After 100 years, he finally found a resting place.

The man is known as "he" because the skull and vertebrae buried Thursday in Norwood Township cemetery were never identified.

Regardless, a funeral was conducted. And after 100 years of lying in a shallow, sandy grave near Lake Michigan, the mystery man's remains are resting underneath a white, wooden cross.

"I'm sure that God knew him and where he was, and knows the whole story," said pastor Jerry Polk, the county chaplain who officiated the service. "His soul is in the hands of a loving God."

A light rain fell as the man's remains — enclosed in a small wooden box with a simple metal latch — were lowered into a one-foot-square hole.

All that was found last summer were a skull and vertebrae, said Charlevoix County Sheriff, George T. Lasater. The remains were found in Norwood Township by a man who was building a home. He was found in the flower garden, underneath about 18 inches of soil.

The sheriff sent the man's remains to a forensic anthropologist at Michigan State University to determine if there were signs of trauma and whether he was of European or Native American descent.

It was discovered that the man died in the 1880s or 1890s, when he was in his 40s, Lasater said. He was of European descent.

Lasater said there were no signs of trauma to the skull. He can only speculate on what happened to the man. Possibly, the man was involved in a sailing accident and washed ashore. He was found about 150 feet from the water.

Even though a name couldn't be used, or memories spoken, (from left) Norwood cemetery sexton, David Parsons, Charlevoix County Sheriff, George T. Lasater, and county chaplain, Rev. Jerry Polk, properly buried an unidentified skull and vertebrae Thursday.

For the most part, these kindergarten and elementary school students wait patiently for school buses to take them home. The kids are into the school routine after a couple of weeks of classes.

Mystery continues beyond skull burial

"It didn't appear it was an actual burial," Lasater said. No clothes or buttons were found with the remains.

However, the anthropologist determined that the man had good teeth, indicating that he wasn't just an indigent person. Lasater said a proper burial was just the right thing to do.

Once he determined that the man was of European descent, arrangements were made to hury him in the cemetery. Had he been Native American, the remains would have been given to the local Native American Council for their traditional burial.

Thursday was the man's official departure. Pastor Polk said he'd never performed a funeral for an unidentified person. But it didn't make a difference to him, the man had a soul.

"He had family. He was important to somebody," Polk said. "He deserves a proper burial, as much as any of us today."

As the sheriff, the pastor and the cemetery sexton pulled from the cemetery, sunshine broke through the hazy sky.

Events in brief

Rash of cars vandalized over the weekend

At least 15 cars at the city airport, south of town, were broken into late Saturday or early Sunday, according to Charlevoix Police Sgt. Dale Meredith.

Windows were smashed and items stolen from many of the cars. One car was taken for a joy ride after keys were found hidden inside.

The car is believed to have been involved in destruction of signs in Charlevoix Township. It was returned to the airport after the escapade.

Meredith said he believes that many of the cars belong to people on Beaver Island. The department isn't even sure if more cars were taken. A list of stolen items is being compiled.

To report information about the break-ins, call the police department at 547-3258.

Bond election on new high school, auditorium Monday

Location yet to be released

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Voters taking time to enter the polls Monday, Sept. 23, will be deciding the fate of two bond proposals for Charlevoix schools.

The first proposal involves $17,995,000 — 3.37 mills for 20 years — to build a new high school, renovate the existing high school into a middle school and update the elementary school.

The new school and renovations would mean K-4 attending school at the current elementary school's, grades 5-8 separated into two groups at the current high school and grades 9-12 in the new building.

The second bond proposal involves a 700-seat auditorium for $3,080,000, or .58 mills for 20 years.

Displays of the plans, involving all three schools, can be found at each of the schools prior to the election.

Polls will be open at the elementary school from 7 a.m.- 8 p.m. Monday.

If passed, the main millage for the new high school would cost a homeowner with a house valued at $80,000 $134.95 per year, or $11.25 per month. If the auditorium also passes, the millage will cost the same homeowner about $158.31 per year. The auditorium itself will cost about $23.36 a year for that homeowner.

According to Jackson, if the big proposal passes and the auditorium doesn't, a backup architectural plan will be used. However, the plan will still provide for future construction of such an auditorium.

The 700-seat structure planned, she said, is not top-of-the-line. Private donations are planned to be sought through foundations to boost the quality of the auditorium.

The price tag and how the money will be spent has been determined by the school board. However, where the new high school will be located has yet to be released.

According to district superintendent, Roberta Jackson, the district has narrowed down the number of possible locations and is working to gain options to buy.

A decision on one of those is forthcoming, hopefully, she said, before the election.

School questions new state test

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

Charlevoix high schoolers performed well on the new state-wide Michigan Educational Assessment Program proficiency tests, but the school cannot afford to be smug, said Charlie Bentley at Monday's school board meeting.

Bentley is the director of testing for the school system. The test covers mathematics, science, reading and writing. It is the first year for a new test, and Bentley sees some bumps that need to be smoothed out.

Usually a standard is set and then test results are evaluated. The state did not follow that procedure.

"It looked at the test scores and then decided the standard," Bentley said. "It intentionally set the standards high so that only a low percentage would succeed."

The message from the state is that students need to Victory Gardens? Maybe just a place to plant some seeds

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Ray Carr is a farmer at heart.

Years of teaching and working as a school principal couldn't change that. Carr has spent the last 30-some summers working the soil at Charlevoix's Victory Gardens.

"I have some grandchildren who eat dill pickles as fast as we can make them," the 78-year-old said of the efforts of he and his wife, Lillian. "We can and freeze a lot."

Carr takes a small jackknife out of his pocket and cuts off the roots from a piece of kohl rabi. He bags some up with his blackened hands. The sun is rising higher in the sky. It's about time to drive his aging pickup truck home.

Ray and Lillian have been busy most mornings harvesting peas, cucumbers, kohl rabi, corn, potatoes, string beans, radishes and carrots this fall. They rent four lots for $10 a year each from the city to have their garden. And they have neighbors who have farmed nearby lots near the airport for decades.

"There are a lot of good farmers here," Lillian said.

In all, there are 28 lots available for planting, said Linda Weller, administrative assistant to the city manager. Of those, 15 are not being used this summer.

Use of the garden was free until 1981, when a $10 lot rental was added by city council, Weller said. The land is mostly used by people who live in town and don't have enough property to grow a garden.

Carr said he has a small garden next to his house, but passing snowplows have bombarded the land with salt. Even after bringing in fresh topsoil, he can't grow the plump vegetables he harvests from his garden south of town, next to the airport.

The land — once known as 921 State Street — was purchased

Charlevoix Victory Gardens sets good example

EDITORIAL

Victory Gardens.

The phrase may remind people of harder financial times found in America during World War II.

They could also refer to the 28 small plots of land located south of town, near the city airport. They represent Charlevoix reaching out to residents who live within the city limits. The land is used by people to plant a summer garden. Many of those people do not have enough property to grow produce next to their homes.

Some people call the area the Victory Gardens.

Through research, we discovered that the gardens didn't begin during or immediately following World War II. The land was purchased by the city in the early 1960s. Shortly afterward, the city began letting people plant gardens on the land not being used for the developing airport.

We applaud city officials, those who were integral in starting the gardens, and those who have stood behind their continued use. The thoughtfulness of this act goes against society's motto that nothing comes for free.

For years, the land was made available to people. They could plant on one or several lots, depending on demand.

In the spring, the city hires a farmer to plow and disc the land. Water is provided free of charge. Somewhere in time, the city began charging $10 per lot, hardly a high fee for being able to grow enough produce to eat fresh, can and freeze.

It would have been exciting to think that the gardens have lasted since the days when local produce had to be grown so other produce could be used to support the war effort.

But we weren't disappointed when we discovered the truth about the gardens. How can legend be more exciting than fact when you have a city lending its land to the taxpayers regardless of official position, race or background?

Charlevoix has a little niche south of town to be proud of. Maybe people have noticed the large sunflowers that have turned with the summer sun. They are tall enough to see from M-66 and U.S. 31.

As the airport goes through its planned expansion, we hope that the city will continue to leave some space for the farmers who spend their spring and fall planting and harvesting at Charlevoix's Victory Gardens.

Although there doesn't appear to be an intriguing connection between the garden and World War II, the city's commitment to providing the land for residents' use is a kind of victory in itself. It shows a willingness to share with people just because it's possible.

Maybe, just maybe, the example of the Victory Gardens will encourage people with unused land to offer an unused corner for the little guys to grow until their heart's content.

We could all stand a lesson in sharing.

Taxpayers already said no to a new high school

Editor:

The school board and the high-priced hired help spent $8,500 tax dollars on a survey to get input from the taxpayers as to what they would support in future school expenditures.

One clear, indisputable fact surfaced to the top of all the priorities available. "We will not support a new high school" was the message you taxpayers gave. Now how much plainer could that be?

Obviously they don't give a rat's rear end for your opinion and the $8,500 was wasted because on Sept. 23, you taxpayers will be voting on the very same issue you already turned down. Does this make any sense to you taxpayers, the ones who will be paying all the bills? Many people have asked this question, "Can the Downtown Development Authority at any time capture any of these tax dollars? No answer written in stone has been heard yet and with the over run, in both money and time, on the Bridge Park boondoggle, anything is possible. Or as the monkey said when he tinkled in the cash drawer, "Eventually, this is going to run into a lot of money."

You taxpayers are probably well aware of the suit now pending to make the second-home assessment in Michigan unconstitutional on the grounds it is taxation without representation, which of course, it is. If it happens, over 70 percent of Charlevoix homes are in this category, so where will the millions in taxes come from to pay for something you already turned down?

Supposedly reliable sources claim the high-priced hired help donated $22,000 toward a playground. The only trouble with this is, it was money earmarked for maintenance. Again, can you taxpayers make any sense out of that?

Are they constructing new, hallowed halls of ivy at Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Dartmouth or are they keeping them in a good state of repair? Education does not start with an imposing edifice but rather in the hearts and minds of the people.

After many, previous fiascoes and now this political dilly with the firing of the soccer coach and the sullying of his good name, we should never vote for another school millage, or bond, until the present, high priced administrator is relieved.

Let's all get out and vote!

Perry Smith

Charlevoix needs people to back school bond issue

Editor:

This letter is written regarding the upcoming school facilities bond election. My family has been a part of the Charlevoix community for over thirteen years. We have raised our children here, two of whom are in college and the last one now in high school. The Charlevoix Public Schools have served us well, providing the kind of education which has made a positive difference in our children's lives. Now that our responsibilities for them are coming to an end, and we are beginning to channel our resources in new directions, it would be easy to withdraw our support for the schools. After all, our children will not be the primary beneficiaries of the planned new school facilities.

However, we feel just the opposite. To have the bond issue pass would bring us great joy, because it would mean quality education would continue to happen in Charlevoix and that the next generation of children in our town would be as prepared to meet the world as our own seem to be. Moreover, it would indicate that the people of Charlevoix are still as interested in helping each other as they are in looking only after their own interests. In addition to encouraging everyone of every age and family status to go to the polls on Monday, Sept. 23, I urge their YES vote on the election ballot.

It's time for a new school in Charlevoix

Editor:

We're voting YES on both school proposals, on Monday, Sept. 23.

I have been very involved with the proposed new facilities and feel now is the time to go ahead.

Timing is very important in any successful thing you do in life. I was on the school board 28 years ago, when we built the north side school. We got this paid for in 1988. I've had the experience and understand what is entailed in bringing to fruition a good project.

First and foremost, we have a Charlevoix high school graduate as our architect, Jim Sneathen. He is tops in his field. Lee and Helen Sneathen, who live on Maple Grove Road, are his dad and mother.

This is a bond issue for 20 years, like we have historically had in the past, not a 25- or 30-year bond like some schools are doing today. This is an election year, and interest rates are very favorable. Building costs are rising rapidly, so let's do it now. We live in an area that is having a lot of new development, and so our cost will go down rapidly due to all the new, expensive construction going on the tax rolls.

In 1968, when a premium car cost $3,600, the elementary school was built for $1,595,000. The problem with the '68 school, is that it is now way over its population capacity, by over 150 students.

With the rapid change in technology, space has to be added, to accommodate all the new computers we are now using. We need more electric power because 1968 doesn't work in 1998. It is like our 1960 house, when we light our Christmas scene, we have to buy electricity from a neighbor, because we just don't have enough. It would not be cost effective to spend millions in the old 1927 middle school, which has seen its day.

With the project as planned, every single kid will reap the benefits of the proposed building projects.

I can assure you we are getting good value for our money. We are not doing this for the superintendent or any other administrator. We are doing this for ourselves and the kids. Kids are special.

Grandpa said, and its true: "The Lord helps those who help themselves." Any community that is any good, has good schools, churches, etc., and above all, positive thinking people.

Five years from now, we can say it was a good business move which we made, to do it when we did.

We are very nostalgic, but be it as it may, the "good old days" are right now. Let's all get on the band wagon and go for both proposals. I've never seen a Brinks armored truck behind Winchester's hearse, nor even a U-haul, for that matter.

Smile, be positive, and LET'S GO DO IT!

Dale and Marilyn Boss

Voter urges "yes" vote at school bond polls

Editor:

This letter is written to urge a YES vote on the school building proposals. Environmentalists have taught us to treasure, protect and nurture our resources. Charlevoix's most valuable resource is our children. Under our educational system all of us shoulder this financial obligation and privilege our entire adult life.

I was truly lucky to be in eighth-grade when the first Russian satellite soared into space. America realized if it was to regain scientific prominence in the world it would need the finest educational system and the money was spent to accomplish this.

Education is also the route for the hard-working, bright student to achieve fame and fortune. The wealthy will always provide their children with the best education that money can buy. Let's make sure that all Charlevoix students have the opportunity to live up to their educational potential. Please vote yes for a new Charlevoix High School, remodeling of the current high school to become the new Charlevoix Middle School, and remodeling at the elementary school. Although this is not the only option, there is sound logic as well as obvious facility needs at all three schools to support this proposal.

Thank you for your consideration.

9-1-1 serving its purpose

Editor:

Lately we've been reading several articles on the recently opened tri-county 9-1-1 center involving Charlevoix, Cheboygan and Emmet counties. Some of the articles are favorable for the center and some are less favorable.

This is what it is all about. Approximately 6:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Sept. 10, a 9-1-1 call came into the center. An excited, upset female was the caller in reference to a domestic assault in progress. Before she could give a name or address, the suspect pulled the phone disconnecting the connection. Several attempts were made by dispatch to call after the line went dead with no results.

Talking to the victim a couple days later, she was not sure if the police would even be dispatched. Because of the enhanced 9-1-1, dispatchers had the address and phone number on the screen and police were dispatched to the residence immediately. As the deputies were pulling into the yard, the suspect was irate and violent and fled the scene on foot. The woman that placed the 9-1-1 call had to be transported to the emergency room via ambulance. The suspect was arrested and charged with assault with intent to murder.

Who knows what would have happened if there was not the capability for dispatch to obtain the address of this residence on this particular night. I don't know if because of this enhanced 9-1-1 system, a life was saved, but it very well could be the reason the victim in this case is still alive.

Before 9-1-1, there would have been no way for the dispatcher to direct police units to the scene.

As far as I know, this was one of the first times that a situation like this has happened in Emmet County, and there will certainly be more in the future.

Thanks for help with immunizations

Editor:

On behalf of District Health Department No. 3, I would like to thank Charlevoix Ambulance Service, LifeLink Ambulance, and the McDonald's restaurants in Boyne City and Charlevoix for their participation in Super Saturday on Sept. 7.

Super Saturday was a statewide initiative to increase awareness of the need to immunize children.

With the active support of Charlevoix Ambulance, LifeLink and McDonald's, we were able to review the immunization records of many children at the restaurants and provide needed immunizations, free of charge.

Nearly 25 percent of all American children under the age of two are unprotected against life-threatening, yet preventable, childhood diseases simply because they are not properly immunized.

Super Saturday is an excellent example of community cooperation to help impact a serious problem. For more information about immunization, parents can contact District Health Department No. 3 at (800) 432-4121.

Teachers spend summers preparing

Editor:

Ever wonder how Charlevoix Public School teachers spend their summers? A recent survey revealed some impressive statistics:

Out of 82 teachers, 56 responded: 25 elementary, 18 middle school, and 9 high school, 68 percent. Of these 56, 19 teachers attended college and earned a total of 57 credit hours. Thirty-three attended workshops, seminars, or enrichment classes, eight taught classes, while nine teachers coached. Sixteen teachers traveled to places that would enhance their subject knowledge and expertise in the classroom, and 20 teachers did volunteer work in the community.

In addition, nearly every teacher responding to the survey spent time at home improving their computer skills and reading books, magazines, and journals preparing new material to use in their classrooms.

Prior to the opening of school, teachers spent an average of 62 hours planning and getting their rooms ready by organizing materials, labeling textbooks, creating bulletin boards, making copies, meeting and planning with coworkers and calling/writing letters to welcome new students to their classroom. One teacher made 30 home visits to her new developmental kindergarten students and their families.

Fortunately for Charlevoix, our public school teachers, like most teachers around the nation, "go the extra mile" and are very dedicated, skilled, and hardworking employees.

Next time you wonder what our public school teachers do in their "time off," please ask them, or better yet, visit their classrooms in August to see them voluntarily already hard at work.

County gets good grade on finances

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

The adage says you can't argue with success and it didn't take long for county commissioners to approve an audit after hearing that the county is run efficiently and boasts good financial standing.

Assets total $6,270,332 for fiscal year Dec. 31, 1994 to Dec. 31, 1995, reported Don Breadon of Gaudette & Co. at the board's Sept. 11 meeting. The Traverse City firm performed the audit.

The overall excess of revenue over expenditures is $560,418. In fiscal year 1993 to 1994, the excess of revenues over expenditures was $506,355.

The county has about 20 funds and each fund budget was under spent.

The general fund operates the county and its balance increased from $1.9 million to $2.5 million on during the fiscal year.

The county took in more in revenues than anticipated and did not spend all that was allocated, said county clerk Jane Brannon. The county has a conservative fiscal policy, she said, and the board holds to the conservative line.

Breadon said that the county needs to improve in the area of fund transfers. Any transfers between funds should be approved by the board. All funds need a budget and should be overseen by the board, he said.

In other action, the board:

— Set times for interviews of the county administrator position. Two applicants will be interviewed Monday, Sept. 23. Commissioner Jim Behling said the committee will interview four applicants and then submit two names to the board for consideration. The administrator's responsibilities will include contracts, budgets, board liaison and personnel. The administrator would make recommendations to the board concerning appointed department heads, Behling said.

— Approved a resolution to transfer $8,149.25 from Grandvue Medical Care Facility's capital account to its operating account. The funds will pay for conversion of a residential wing to an Alzheimer's wing. The need for an Alzheimer's wing is supported by the public, commission chairman, Phil Johnson, said. Another residential wing may be added in the future.

— Approved a motion to consolidate Charlevoix, Emmet and Cheboygan counties under one emergency services director. Emergency services handles floods, toxic waste spills and other disasters. Charlevoix County retains the personnel to maintain the Big Rock Point nuclear power plant's section of the emergency plan.

— Approved sending a controversial storm water ordinance back to the drain commission and the soil board that drafted it for the agencies to address public concerns about the language of the ordinance.

CharEm United Way sets annual goal

Police chief helps chair fund-raiser

The CharEm United Way has set a record goal of $195,000 for its annual fund-raising campaign this fall.

After serving Charlevoix and Emmet counties for more than 30 years, the United Ways of three area communities, Boyne City, Charlevoix/East Jordan and Emmet County, joined forces to create a more efficient organization for support of area human service agencies. Last year, United Way organizations raised $169,000, surpassing their original goal by $9,000. Nearly 75 percent of the contributions were made through workplace campaigns.

The 1996-97 campaign is co-chaired by Linda Hume, branch manager and assistant vice president at NBD Bank, and Dennis Halverson, police chief for the City of Charlevoix. Both have been very involved in their company campaigns and have exhibited a sincere interest and support of United Way efforts.

"Since becoming a board member, I have been made personally aware how important United Way dollars are," Halverson said. "There are agencies serving our communities that would have difficulty carrying on without United Way assistance."

Money raised through the campaign is distributed to local non-profit agencies that provide education and training, emergency services, counseling, adult day care, shelter for victims of domestic violence, youth development programs, and hospice services.

In 1995, more than 16,000 local residents received services from United Way agencies. 1995-96 funded agencies include: Charlevoix Alano Club, America Red Cross, The Bergmann Center, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, Boyne City nurse, Boyne City Nursery, Boyne City Library, Boyne City Swim School, Camp Daggett, Camp McSauba, Catholic Human Services, Charlevoix County Hospice, Charlevoix Performing Arts, Charlevoix Senior Center, Child & Family Services, Chip Counseling, Crooked Tree Girl Scouts, Exceptional Riders, Little Traverse Bay Band of Odawa Indians, The Living Room, Michigan Dyslexia Institute, Northern Michigan Planned Parenthood, NM Council for the Prevention of Child Abuse & Neglect, Retired & Senior Volunteer Program, Salvation Army, Scenic Trails Boy Scout Council, Women's Resource Center, United Way of Michigan, and the VIP/Victim & Offender Reconciliation Program.

Questions regarding the CharEm United Way, its services, or funded agencies are asked to contact the CharEm United Way Executive Director Lisa Ashley at 347-0115.

Retreat invites band

A Ladies Retreat will be offered by Women Sharing Christ of Charlevoix Assembly of God starting 7 p.m. Friday, Sept., 27, and continuing 8:30 a.m.-4 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 28.

All ladies are invited to join in a time of refreshing.

GTM, Inc., of Indianapolis, Ind., will be ministering at the retreat. Their ministry in music and the Bible has taken them to more than 28 countries. They are said to bring fresh inspiration and challenge wherever they minister.

The group will also be ministering on Sunday, Sept. 29, at both church services. For more information call 547-6430.

Annual CROP walk scheduled

Come rain or shine, walkers from Boyne City, Charlevoix, and East Jordan are getting ready to walk for the hungry. The annual Charlevoix County CROP Walk will begin 9 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 5.

Charlevoix walkers will meet in the high school parking lot for a brief meeting with safety reminders and prayer and then proceed to walk to the Ironton Congregational Church, about 6 miles away. Walkers from all three communities will be treated to a lunch of hot dogs and soft drinks, this year served by the East Jordan participants.

A county goal is to raise $13,000 and have 13 walkers from each church. Last year $13,540 was raised by 134 walkers from the county, about 60 of those from Charlevoix. That meant $101.05 per walker.

Though most of the funds raised will be used by Church World Services in overseas relief and development work, 25 percent will stay in Charlevoix County to be used by the area food banks. Last year each Food Pantry in the three cities received $1,129.94, and they are hoping to better that amount this year.

For more information about the Charlevoix portion of this walk, contact Mary Helen Riggle at 547-9515 or Kay Smith at 547-2920.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

By the Rev. Bruce Hamilton
Community Church of God

Since this is September, it must be football season and you know how some people get all worked up about that oddly shaped pigskin ball. There was a story, I think out of Colorado, this week regarding high school football that really bothered me.

The young man involved has Down's Syndrome. It's a disability that would put him on a different track learning wise with other students. He had made it to his senior year in high school and he wanted to play football. He attended all the practices, learned what to do in his role on the defense, but they wouldn't let him play because he had just turned 20 and the maximum age allowed is 19. His parents wanted to see their son get to follow his dreams and went to court on his behalf trying to get an exemption based on the fact that he contends with Down's Syndrome.

The court said no. So after working and practicing so hard, he can suit up with the team if he wants on game night, but he has to stay on the sideline or else the school forfeits the contests and potentially their whole season.

I'm kind of glad that I'm not that family's pastor, for if I was, I'd be all over the school board to get into the fight to give that boy a chance to play. Any child who has struggled and fought his way against difficult odds in the educational system deserves to have a shot at his dreams regardless of his age.

Dreams have always moved and inspired us. They have challenged and lifted us up to do things we might never have attempted or considered without them. What is it that speaks to you? Whether you are farther along in life's journey or just beginning to stretch your wings, you can't tell me there hasn't been something that hasn't fascinated you, intrigued you, stirred up some sense of wonderment within you and made you contemplate something on faith that you never would have on your own.

We have always been intrigued by dreamers ourselves, but we have never been quite sure of what to make of them even today. How many people thought the brother bicycle mechanics from Dayton were out of their minds in thinking men could fly? Who would have bought stock from a man named Bell who thought he could send voices over wires?

You never know where the dreams in your own heart will take you until you have the courage to follow them. Remember the three wise men who recognized a star as a chance to see their dreams fulfilled? How about Moses and his fascination with the burning bush? Look what that dream turned into! A bright light on a little hike certainly turned Paul's life around. I wonder what John would think if he knew we were still reading and valuing his words some 2,000 years after he wrote them.

What about the dream that is in your heart? What's keeping you from going after it? There is more support than you might imagine waiting to help make it come true. God wouldn't have allowed it to be there if it didn't stand a good chance at coming true.

Beth and Frank Shepherd
217 Ferry Ave.
Charlevoix, Mi.

To the citizens of the Charlevoix School District,

As the parents of a middle school child we are of course interested in the quality of his education. As members of the larger Charlevoix community we understand the importance of educational opportunities for all our children. While a new facility does not automatically mean a good education, it is occasionally necessary for a community to ask its members to support the cost of new facilities. We believe this is the time to make that request.

Our middle school was built in 1927, our high school in 1962 and our elementary school in 1968. Of the three buildings the middle school, serving grades 6-8, is in the worst condition. It faces serious problems with wiring, narrow halls and stairways, no access for the physically challenged and overcrowded conditions. The high school, while not facing the serious physical deterioration of the middle school, is in need of modernization. The technological capabilities of the math and science labs as well as the media center need updating in order to enhance the education of our children and therefore the future of our community. Our elementary school was originally built to serve grades K-4. It is presently a very overcrowded K-5 building.

In considering the present and future needs of all our children, K-12, the board of education is proposing that the best solution for our facility woes is to build a new high school, renovate the present high school to serve grades 5-8 and renovate the elementary school to once again serve children in grades K-4. A new high school would provide our children with math and science labs capable of analyzing data by computer. We could have a writing lab with computers not assigned to the media center. A new high school would provide audio/video transmission to every classroom equipped with its own computer monitor and telephone. These are not the educational tools of tomorrow but are considered part of a modern classroom today. We have the opportunity to give them to our children now.

This is a 3.37 mill proposal and would cost a family living in an $80,000 home about $134 per year or a family whose home value is $120,000 about $200 per year. While there has been much talk in our community about waiting and passing a lesser or "pared down" proposal i.e., building only a new middle school, we believe that would be a mistake. The board of education's proposal considers the present and future educational needs of our children as well as the economic considerations of the voter in our community. Building a new middle school may be less expensive now, but in the not too distant future our poorly equipped classrooms will make it obvious we need to build a new high school. It will be obvious we are sending our children out ill prepared for the relentlessly increasing demands made on them by technologically sophisticated colleges and universities. With its present proposal we believe the board of education has made a good and logical decision. Renovating the present high school to be used as a middle school makes the best use of present facilities for the most years and therefore makes the best use of tax dollars. Please vote yes on September 23. Your vote will help our children and our whole community better prepare for the challenges of our increasingly technological futures.

Sincerely,

Beth Shepherd

CHIP Counseling ready to celebrate 20 years of service

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

Twenty years ago, CHIP Counseling Center was established in Charlevoix, and its formation turned a tragedy into a community benefit. Thursday, Sept. 19, the center is holding an open house for the public to celebrate years of counseling service.

Charles A. "Chip" Ransom was killed in a Lake Charlevoix boating accident in 1975. His parents, Woodbury and Christiana Ransom, friends of the family and members of the First Congregational Church wanted to do something for the community in his memory. They surveyed the area and found a need for a counseling center. CHIP Counseling Center was established in his memory to provide a place for general counseling and substance abuse education, treatment and prevention.

The Christian-based center also has offices in Petoskey, Bellaire and Cheboygan. More than 900 clients used the services throughout the four centers in 1995. Four counselors at the Charlevoix office counseled with 269 clients that year.

Alcohol abuse is the reason that 90 percent of the clients come to the center, said director Pat Nestor. About 18 percent are under the age of 21. The center works within area schools educating children about substance abuse awareness and prevention.

The private nonprofit center believes in changing its focus as community needs change, Nestor said. It credits much of its success to community supporters. The staff and its 10-member board of directors consider the open house as an opportunity to thank the public.

"CHIP has had, and continues to have, many supporters that make it possible for the organization to accomplish its mission," said board president, Byran Graham. "We hope they will join us as we celebrate this historic occasion."

The open house will be held at CHIP's offices from 3:30-5 p.m. Thursday, at 14695 Park Avenue, adjacent to Charlevoix Area Hospital.

Christiana Ransom will attend the event.

"They called me twice to make sure I wasn't lying," said Jacqueline Merta, chamber executive director. The drawing was held September 3 on the Beaver Islander during a cruise of Lake Charlevoix. Grant helps hospital establish elderly outreach

A community outreach program has been established to help the elderly, and their families, in northern Antrim and southern Charlevoix counties.

Funds from a health care grant to Charlevoix Area Hospital have been designated to provide in-home respite care through the Antrim County Commission on Aging. The Senior Companion program of the Catholic Human Services is receiving reimbursement for transportation expenses to provide services such as taking people to the doctor.

The program is an outgrowth of a health needs assessment done by hospitals and health departments in 21 northern Michigan counties last year. Groups in Charlevoix and Antrim counties determined elder care needs as a priority. The hospital is also planning health screenings, talks and clinics at their Central Lake office.

The hospital received the grant for $50,000 a year in 1995 and 1996. Whether or not another $50,000 will be available in 1997 is in question as Congress considers a new budget. The Rural Hospital Transition Grants are given for a three year period, however they are renewable on an annual basis.

Test scores not available for review

work harder, he said.

Eleventh-graders tested higher than the state proficiency percentage in math with a rating of 63.4 percent to 47.4 percent. In science, Charlevoix students rated 47.9 percent to the state's 32 percent. In reading the students rated 48.4 percent to the state's 40.2 percent and in writing they rated 50 percent to 34.3 percent.

Out of the 45 schools tested in northwestern Michigan, Charlevoix placed eighth highest in math and science and fifth highest in reading and writing, Bentley said.

But students need to strive to do better for each year of testing, he said. The test affects the choice of curriculum and will be more important each year. The school improvement team and others will meet with students to look at the areas on which they need to work.

Students and Bentley criticize the state for not allowing the students to see their tests after they have been scored. The state claims that it is too much paper work to return the tests, Bentley said, but he feels it is important to see the tests so students can learn from their mistakes.

Another criticism of the state tests is that some of what was tested was something that had not previously been taught, said third-grade teacher, Karen Pierce.

Bentley said it will be some time before the tests are understood.

After Bentley's report, the board took the following action:

— Accepted Athletic Director Barry Anderson's resignation as adult education director. Anderson remains athletic director. Enrichment classes and high school completion classes overseen by Anderson became too time consuming, he said, and he needs time for sports. A new adult education director has not yet been appointed.

— Approved the hiring of Scott Kelly as varsity baseball coach for the 1997 season.

— Approved the hiring of Barry Pierce as seventh-grade girls' basketball coach.

Charlevoix public schools welcome five new teachers

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

Charlevoix District Schools started the school year with five new teachers.

Molly Randall

Molly Randall, 22, teaches first grade. It is her first teaching position. Randall, from Ellsworth, graduated from Hillsdale College in May of 1995. She was a student teacher at the elementary school later in '95.

"My job is to set up a positive, warm environment in my classroom so all my children can be successful learners," Randall said. She said she enjoys the children's eagerness to learn and their spontaneity.

Randall remembers with humor when she asked the class what the word "usually" meant. One little boy told her it meant "almost," "always," "sometimes."

At the end of her first year of teaching, Randall said she would like the students to leave class with a positive image of themselves and a spark for learning.

Mark Drenth

Mark Drenth, 34, teaches special education at the middle school. A Charlevoix native, he taught in Boyne Falls and Cadillac school systems before returning to Charlevoix. Drenth graduated from Central Michigan University.

Tim Volovsek

Tim Volovsek, 34, teaches high school chemistry, physics and physical science. He taught in Sheboygan Falls, Wisc., from 1993 to 1996. Volovsek, from Franklin, Wisc., holds bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Wisconsin.

He said he wants to help students attain a quality skill level and knowledge base so that they will be successful in the next level of their lives. He said he enjoys the energy, creativity and desires of the students.

On his first day of school, Tim Volovsek was introduced to the class. "Usually my last name is mispronounced," he said. "However, this time my last name was pronounced correctly, but my first name was "Tom."

Volovsek hopes to establish a quality learning environment during his first school year.

Brandon Bruce

Brandon Bruce, 24, teaches high school physical education, health and personal training. This is his first teaching position. Bruce, from Arnold, Mich., graduated from Central Michigan University in December of 1995.

Bruce wants to help students understand and learn how to better enhance their lifestyles through physical activity and fitness. He said he enjoys helping students learn and to be successful.

Like being a new students, there are first-day adjustments to being a new teacher.

"There is a 10-minute bell that rings outside to let teachers outside know that there are 10 minutes left of class," he said. "I thought this was the bell to release the students, so I had to go chase all of my students down and bring them back to class."

Bruce said he wants the students to enjoy coming to gym class, since he enjoys teaching it.

Kaye Beatty

Kaye Beatty, 49, teaches high school health occupations through a vocational education program between the high school and Charlevoix Area Hospital. She has been a childbirth educator at Hutzel Hospital in Detroit, Northern Michigan Hospital and Charlevoix Area Hospital. Beatty's hometown is Plymouth, but she lives in Charlevoix.

"I would rather help kids learn the wonder of health occupations than to 'teach' it to them," she said. "It's something that should be experienced."

When her class toured the hospital on their first day, Beatty said the group sighed in unison when a newborn was presented for their inspection.

She enjoys the spontaneous excitement that comes from the students when they are interested in a topic.

She hopes to present a useful, relevant program that will enlighten and stimulate the students during her first school year.

Sports boosters selling coupons

Charlevoix Athletic Boosters, along with local businesses and restaurants, have joined together for a fund-raiser. The members and students will be selling a certificate offering a savings package valued over $650 for $20. The certificates includes two-for-one breakfasts, lunches, dinners, pizzas and subs. Participating restaurants include Grey Gables, Weathervane, On The Edge, Oma's Breakfast Club, Nanny's Restaurant, Subway, Whitneys of Charlevoix, Village Inn Pizza and Alexander's of Charlevoix.

Purchasing certificates will benefit students and schools, and patronizing businesses.

There is only a limited amount to be sold. They are available as of Friday, Sept. 6, from any booster or athlete, Charlevoix banks or the high school office.

City provides gardners space to plant summer produce in 1963 for airport development, Weller said. Each of the lots is about 24 by 24 feet.

Nobody seems to remember the year the gardens began. Some people call them Victory Gardens from a time when municipalities provided land for locals to grown their own produce so larger farms could better support the war effort of the 1940s. Other people, just call them the city gardens.

Regardless of the name, each spring the city pays a farmer to plow and disc the land. Water and hoses are left at the garden for people to use. Once the land is prepared, renters are completely responsible for tending to the lots.

"You plant it. You take care of it. And you harvest it," said city street superintendent, John Martin.

Weller said some people are so attached to their gardens that they want to be reassigned to the same lots year after year. In 1994, when the airport was being expanded, the gardens were moved.

Carr said it was a time of starting over, fertilizing and getting the soil ready to produce his summer delights.

Each year, many of the same gardeners gather up their hoes, trowels, Rototillers and spades and head to Charlevoix's gardens and commune with the land, and neighboring farmers.

For the Carrs, going to the garden is about more than growing vegetables for their family and friends. They enjoy the toiling it takes to produce a good crop.

"There's a lot of satisfaction in seeing things grow," Lillian said.

Student count effects school wages

The formula adopted in the contract takes the number of students and multiplies it by $6,600 per pupil, the state foundation grant received by school districts.

"We're happy that everybody is joining together to look at where the district is financially," said Allen Telgenhof, board contract representative. "Everybody realizes we're all in this together."

The contract added a coordinator position for "Odyssey of the Mind," the national academic problem-solving competition. A $500 yearly stipend was approved for the position. Stipends were also approved for coaches, clubs and student council, including an 8 percent stipend for the golf coach.

The contract also adopted a benefit plan which will allow employees to select benefits suited to their personal needs. The contract did not include any benefit changes, however.

Other contract provisions include:

— New teachers will have mentors for their first three years of teaching.

— A 1996-1997 district-wide calendar of days of instruction.

— Schools are able to use volunteers and subcontractors for work previously requiring union members.

— Two class periods are blocked together during the day to allow for more intensive studying for students.

The board also approved the same 2 percent salary increase for non-union personnel, such as bus drivers. No action was taken by the board for administrators which include the superintendent and the three school principals. However, it is expected that administrators receive the same wage increases as teachers and support staff.

According to event planner, Tim Petrosky, the 200-yard shot from the fairway is more rare than a hole-in-one. "It's the most rare shot in golf," Petrosky said.

Charlevoix golf team 3-0 in conference

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

The high school golf team played its third conference match on Sept. 11 and came up with its third win.

The double match against Alanson and Onaway was held at the Belvedere Country Club.

Dan Pardee, medalist for varsity, shot 42. Jon Sell was medalist for junior varsity and shot 43.

The team did a fine job, coach Jim Glynn said, noting that they are slowly getting better, match-by-match.

The team's top varsity players are Dan Pardee, Keith Grunch and Ryan Murdick.

"They're coming on strong, playing hard and gathering a work ethic," Glynn said.

The team as a whole is balanced, with no one strong player that makes the difference. They support one another, Glynn said.

The Rayders best competition comes from Harbor Springs.

"They're super strong," Glynn said.

Additional competition comes from Elk Rapids and Grayling, good teams that the Rayders need to watch, he said.

The team missed third place by one stroke and second place by two strokes at the Wildcat Invitational in Alpena on a rainy, cold Friday the 13th. The fourth place score for the Rayders was 352.

The team is midway through the regular season. It faces Traverse City St. Francis and Mancelona in a conference home match today at 4:30 p.m. at the Belvedere Country Club.

Upcoming matches are:

— 4 p.m. Monday, Sept. 23, with Gaylord at Belvedere Country Club.

— 4:30 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 25, with Inland Lakes and Grayling at Inland Lakes.

Junior varsity loses on the road

The junior varsity football team fell to the Grayling Vikings, 18-28, Thursday during a blustery, rainy night.

The Rayders offense was led by Matt McClellan and Colin Carr.

Brian Ward and Tom Cunningham lead Charlevoix in tackles.

Assistant coach, Hal Evans, said the team was changing over defense and had a few missed assignments, but will keep working on it and is optimistic the team will improve as the season progresses.

John Winn, of Charlevoix, shot a hole-in-one Aug. 30 at the Charlevoix Country Club. The drive traveled 115 yards on the fourth hole. Winn used a nine iron. He scored 41 on his nine holes of play. Winn is one of the club founders.

Varsity football team wins

The Charlevoix High School football team took its first win of the season Friday, defeating Grayling, 18-6, on the road.

David Manker rushed for 115 yards on 18 carries and Roger Pittman had 91 yards on 17 carries.

The team had a 12-0 lead at the half, after T.J. Carey pulled off two quarterback sneaks. The Vikings scored, making the game 12-6 in the fourth quarter. Charlevoix came back less than two minutes later to make up the gap.

The Rayders are now 1-1. They will face the Harbor Springs Rams on the road 7:30 p.m. Friday, Sept. 20.

The varsity girl's basketball team lost to Ellsworth, 51-44, Sept. 10 after heading into the final minutes of the game in the lead.

Coach Hank Wagner said three turnovers cost the team the win. Ellsworth scored on all three. Before the mishandling, the team led the game 40-39.

Charlevoix teen center gets big contribution from local business

The Charlevoix Teen Center recently received a contribution of $1,200 with a pledge totaling $4,800 from LexaLite International Corporation of Charlevoix.

The contribution came in response to a request from the Teen Center's fund-raising committee as they began talking to local corporations about the renewed credibility and positive community value of the Teen Center's activities with teens, families and local organizations focusing on youth.

The LexaLite contribution is the first commitment of its size and may serve to encourage other local organizations to financially support continued operations.

"We are very thankful to Josh Barnes and Patricia DeYoung at LexaLite International for stepping forward with such a generous contribution," said Teen Center director, Scott Kelly.

"Our Guardian Angel fund-raising program continues to show us there are many caring people willing to contribute to a worthwhile program that focuses on our youth," Kelly added. "Along with their gift, comes the priceless gift of hope that we will be allowed to continue sharing with the teens of Charlevoix county and surrounding communities by providing safe and drug-free activities and entertainment each weekday after school and weekend evenings."

College campaigns for funds

On Thursday, Sept. 5, North Central Michigan College in Petoskey officially kicked off its campaign to raise $1.4 million toward construction of a student and community resource center. The new building will include a 20,000-square-foot activity arena with seating for 2,000 people, physical education facilities, computer labs, classrooms and academic support services.

Pledges adding up to $505,000 have already been raised by more than 75 community leaders who have volunteered to help the North Central Michigan College Foundation with its "Partners in Progress" fundraising campaign: Susan VanWieren of Charlevoix, who serves on the NCMC Foundation Board; Maury Cohen of Charlevoix and Carol Stone of East Jordan, co-chairs of the campaign's Family Division; and campaign cabinet members Mike Stowe and Larry Mattox of Boyne City, Shirley Diller of East Jordan, and Arnie Hudson of Walloon Lake.

"We need to stay competitive with other colleges, and we need to have facilities that provide for a full, comprehensive college experience," said college president, Bob Graham. North Central is one of only a few colleges in Michigan without physical education facilities or a large space for indoor activities.

Some Hurlbut residents don't want Belvedere tec that determined which addresses should be changed to meet standards set by 9-1-1. Monday, helped pass a resolution that changed the Adams' address back from 501 Michigan Ave..

"We have other areas that have exceptions to the rule," Campbell said, noting that the homeowners have invested in the house to make a historic site.

The resolution stated that the change was made because of "special circumstances," including that it won't cause a problem with the numbering sequence, it's a historic site, the end of the block is indeterminate and that there is a 501 Michigan Ave. address in Charlevoix Township.

Adams was represented by attorney Scott Beatty at the council meeting. He told of how an 88-year-old relative fainted at the Adams' home recently and how 9-1-1 identified the home as 429 Michigan Ave. during the distress call. Because the address doesn't conflict with the emergency response technology, Beatty said there is no sense in forcing an address change.

Councilman Butch Russell cast the only no vote for changing the house number back to 429.

Although action was taken on the Michigan Avenue address, residents from Hurlbut are still fighting for their street to be called Belvedere Bluff.

A petition with a majority of the landowners on East Hurlbut was turned into council. Bluff residents were told at a recent committee meeting by Timms and Campbell that if they got signatures from "a majority" of the homeowners on the south side of the street, there shouldn't be a problem changing the name — again.

However, residents who aren't interested in being associated with a Belvedere Bluff address showed up at city hall to contest the change.

"We don't have a bluff. We don't have a heights. We don't have anything," said LaRue Gill, who lives at 106 E. Hurlbut.

Gill said she didn't want to lose friendships with her neighbors, but she doesn't think the petition process has been fair. She said she was never asked to sign.

"Mr. Hurlbut is one of the founders of Charlevoix," Gill said. "The street has been named that since it was platted."

Another opposing resident told councilmembers that the problem involving those who want to be identified with Belvedere is now being made their problem. She takes offense to their calling Hurlbut "a dirty sounding word."

"You could put both names on the sign and let them pick and choose," Timms said, in jest. "I don't think it would cause any confusion."

"Democracy doesn't mean that 51 percent of the people can vote to kill the other 49 percent," said councilman Bruce Reid.

Council scheduled a public hearing for 7 p.m. Monday, Nov. 4, to hear more residents' opinions on the pending change.

Burns Clinic opens family practice satellite

Burns Clinic Medical Center has opened a Family Practice Department in Petoskey.

The Petoskey satellite offers people an even greater choice of locations and types of providers for their primary care," said Dr. Daniel McDonnell, clinic president. For now, some of the doctors are working out of the Lockwood Professional Building, where Dr. Suzanne Wehrenberg has been practicing.

The long-term plan for the satellite office is to move to North U.S. 131, near the Wal-Mart development. The clinic is waiting on township approval of zoning, said clinic public relations specialist, Therese Green.

The new department, McDonnell said, was created in response to requests from patients, physicians, employers and insurers alike.

"Our customers want effortless and timely access to quality care with controlled costs," he said. "Our No. 1 priority has been to make it easier and more affordable for entire families to receive comprehensive care on a regular basis."

"While the clinic has always had a reputation for specialty medicine, we have worked for more than a decade to improve access to services by establishing branch offices where physicians live and work as part of the local community.

Staffing the department are newly-recruited doctors Samuel Minor and Allison Helman, who are working hand-in-hand with Wehrenberg and Dr. Scott Hotchkiss, both long-standing family practice physicians in Emmet County.

The family practice group provides newborn, child, adolescent and adult medicine, pediatrics, obstetrics, geriatrics, treatment for acute and chronic illnesses and minor, office-basis surgical procedures.

"In addition to providing comprehensive, life-long care, family practice physicians also coordinate referrals to other providers when specialized diagnosis and treatment are needed," said Burns' chief operating officer, Eric Thompson. "As such, expanding the base of family care will help support and preserve a full range of specialty services in this region."

For Dr. Wehrenberg, who has been in private practice for 10 years, the new department is a dream come true - for both her patients and herself.

"It has always been my hope to associate with a group of residency-trained family physicians in Petoskey," she said. "I believe this shows a firm commitment by Burns Clinic to the overall health of our local families. Now, my patients can receive continuous care for their entire family by a single group of board-certified family specialists."

"I have known many of the clinic physicians for 14 years and am very comfortable with them as colleagues and with the quality of care they provide," added Dr. Scott Hotchkiss. "I'm excited to be part of the active expansion of primary care — and specifically family practice services in the region, and I believe Burns Clinic is in the best position to respond to the future changes in health care."

United Nations meeting coming to northern area

Saturday, Sept. 28, will be a special day in northern Michigan. Residents will have the opportunity to participate in "The U.N. Women's Conference One Year Later," a follow up to the U.N. Fourth World Conference on Women held last autumn in Beijing, China.

Satellites will link communities across the nation for live, televised participation. The meeting will take place from 1-4 p.m. in conference room A at North Central Michigan College Petoskey.

The Women's Resource Center, Zonta Clubs of Petoskey and Charlevoix and the Petoskey Business and Professional Women are local hosts for the conference.

The meeting is directed nationally by the President's Interagency Council on Women.

Among the participants are First Lady Hillary Clinton, Donnal Shalala, secretary of health and human services and Maurene Regan.

The Beijing conference united countries around the world, including the United States, as they signed on to the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action — a bold step toward addressing the concerns of all women.

This September, the United States. is following through on those commitments as the president's council has asked local nonprofit agencies, private and voluntary women's groups to help United States' policy makers define a National Action Agenda.

The Women's Resource Center, Zonta and Business and Professional Women will bring local issues to the national level at the conference.

Information shared at the September meeting will help determine how America. will achieve its goals for next U.N. World Conference.

There is no charge to attend the teleconference and area residents are welcome to participate. Ample, barrier-free parking is available. For more information call Jan or Michelle at the Women's Resource Center at (616) 347-0067.

Early film producer focuses on Charlevoix teens, events

By Geoffrey Reynolds
Courier columnist

Lights! Action! Camera! These were probably the words of Charlevoix's least known filmmaker and local historian as he began each segment of another film under the Liberty Pictures name. An amateur film company formed not for money, hut for the enjoyment of young adults. A company headed by local movie enthusiast, Louis Edwards.

Deciding in the early 1950s that he would forgo forming a large model train collection, in honor of the larger versions he always would love, Edwards began making films of his travels with the local Boy Scout troop, Charlevoix events and locally written adventure stories. While each script was originally penned by his actors, many were inspired by motion pictures seen at a local theater on Saturday nights. Knowing these films would never be seen by a large theater audience, the actors painstakingly planned, filmed and edited each film in an effort to produce a quality production.

The company consisted of Edwards and a small group of teen-agers. Many of the teen-agers took part in the making of props, writing of script and choosing of a local area for filming. Edwards did all of the filming and editing of scenes that mainly took place near the North Point dunes. Later, with hamburgers and chocolate malts for inspiration, the actors used a reel-to-reel recorder/player to add sound effects to actors' dialogue. While there were only four films produced in all, each taking many hours of labor, they lasted only 12 minutes. During the few showings of the films, Edwards would synchronize the recording made with the silent film, resulting in a sound film presentation.

The first three films made, Mission Secret, Sniper Pass and Escape of Madame Fifi, were based on World War II events. The fourth film The Slip-Up, involved a stick-up at the Edwards' IGA supermarket that later resulted in a high speed chase down the recently completed highway, U.S. 31 north.

The actors of these fine film shorts included local teen-agers such as Douglas and Donald Reynolds, Ethel Gram Reynolds, Charles and Jimmy Dennis, Clarence Peters, Brian and Michael Seymour, and Lois Bergmann. They still fondly remember the films and their producer.

When not making adventure films, Edwards made a practice of filming local Charlevoix events and travels with the local Boy Scout troop. These events included sports, bands, street scenes, parades and the making of the Mackinac Bridge. Each filmed in a clear and documentary fashion using black/white and color 8 mm film stock.

In the fall of 1992 Louis Edwards passed away after being stricken with cancer. Soon after, a few films he had enjoyed making so much, were given to the Charlevoix Historical Society by his family for public viewing. Today, the four adventure films and many of his local events films are available at the Society's Harsha House Museum film library.

School bonds voted down

Mike Holmes takes time Monday to cast his vote on the two school bond proposals that involve a new high school with auditorium and renovations to the two other schools in the district.

Board looking at how to fund repairs, asbestos removal

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

In what may be the largest voter turn out on bond proposals, Charlevoix school district voters soundly defeated two proposals Monday.

The district has about 6,000 voters and 2,258 people showed up at the polls. Both proposals were defeated by at least 60 percent of the voters saying no.

An $18 million request for a new high school and renovations to two other schools was defeated by 532 votes, 1,359 to 827.

The new 700-seat auditorium proposal drew a 63 percent no vote, 1,430 to 762.

Charlevoix resident, Charlie Butcher, was against the proposals from the beginning. "I'm very pleased," he said of the defeat. Butcher was surprised at the number of voters at the polls.

"I voted mid-morning and the polls were quite full. My wife went later in the afternoon and said it was full then, too.

"I think the big turn out was because it's quite an important issue for the area. It's a pleasure to see so many turn out."

Perry Smith, a Charlevoix resident, had voiced his opposition to the proposals.

"The people have spoken," he said. Smith said it made no sense to put the proposals before the voters when the school board had already been shown through a survey that people didn't want the projects as presented.

"When you looked at the long lines at the polls you knew people were either hungry, or wanting to be listened to," he said.

> "When you looked at the long lines at the polls you knew people were either hungry, or wanting to be listened to."
> — Perry Smith, Charlevoix resident

Even the proposals were defeated, the schools have serious repair and updating problems, said district superintendent Roberta Jackson.

"The high school roof needs repair and that's estimated at $200,000," she said. "The arches need major repair, and additionally, electrical repairs are needed."

An asbestos problem in the high school and middle school would have been cleaned up by funds from the bonds. The Environmental Protection Agency has demanded that the asbestos be removed or otherwise taken care of, at an estimated cost of $400,000. The school board will have to find the funding elsewhere, Jackson said.

"Either we'll redirect the budget or go back for another millage," she said. "The EPA left us with no choice."

Dennis VanGuilder is principal at the middle school, which was built in 1927. Approval of the proposal would have moved his students into a renovated high school.

"I'm an educator so I feel bad for the students," VanGuilder said. "I feel the board put forth good proposals, but it was a pretty resounding defeat.

"We need to sit back and listen to people and find out what they would support for the schools."

VanGuilder said that although the school was old, the staff would continue to do the best job of educating the students. "We'll do the best with what we've got," he said.

Board member Ardeth Wieland said it's important that the board find out why the proposals were defeated.

"The board needs to assess what the vote meant," she said.

Butcher said the proposals were too ambitious and frivolous.

"It leads to the conclusion that the school board is not serious," he said. Butcher was especially criti-

Long-time Medusa plant manager gets early start

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Elbert Kaiser began a 40-year cement career while still in high school. He worked afternoons as a shift chemist in a downstate laboratory his senior year.

Before hiring in at the plant, Kaiser had no idea what his father did after leaving the house for work each day. This is still true today of many young people.

To help educate students on the jobs their parents do, career options and the skills they need to be successful in local industry, Kaiser is helping organize the Charlevoix Industrial Fair, which is taking place in the high school gym from 9 a.m.-6 p.m. Friday, Oct. 4.

After 13 years and retiring as plant manager at Medusa Cement Plant, Kaiser has been spearheading efforts to get local companies involved. About 21 businesses will be setting up booths at the fair to give a behind-the-scenes look at what and how they produce goods.

"The average high school student doesn't get much exposure to industry," Kaiser said.

When Kaiser took his job proportioning raw materials for cement, he began his studies to become a chemical engineer. World War II was ongoing at the time. And the cement he was helping mix was being used to build a highway to the Willow Run Bomber Plant outside Detroit. It is now know as I-94.

Elbert Kaiser

Kaiser made his decision to study chemical engineering at the University of Michigan. He graduated with a bachelor's degree in 1950. He worked for two cement companies, in Dearborn and Detroit, before moving north in 1972 to become Medusa plant manager.

When he arrived, many of the plants that now employ local people were not here. He said Charlevoix industry has probably grown 30 to 40 percent since then.

Although Charlevoix is known for its tourism, Kaiser said the town's location and available work force are benefits to bringing business north.

"You can't eat snowballs," he said, quoting a co-worker who emphasized that point when some community opposition was being expressed to Medusa's expansion in 1978. "Resort business is important, but it's seasonal and it's limited.

Many a winter, you can shoot a cannon off on Bridge Street and not hit anyone."

Kaiser believes that for every job created in local industry, eight more are added to the community.

During the industrial fair, he will be showing his support of local industry by helping set up displays and relieving company representatives from booths for break.

Sheriff advises caution when driving

With the falling leaves comes the wandering of the deer.

Charlevoix County Sheriff, George T. Lasater, is reminding motorists that the deer population is on the move. This activity heightens the chance of a car/deer crash. There are ways, however, of avoiding such a crash, said the sheriff.

According to 1995 statistics from the Department of Natural Resources, there were 62,535 car/deer accidents statewide last year. There were 591 in Charlevoix County.

"People have to remember that many areas of our county still offer shelter for deer," Lasater said, "and they have a lot of area to roam."

Statewide, the current deer herd population stands at 1.8 to 2 million.

"Most often, you'll see a deer near dawn or dusk," Lasater said. "Most collisions occur within the first two hours after sunset."

The sheriff advises that motorists take heed of the posted warning signs, either the "Deer Area" signs, or the universal language sign indicating that an area is a deer crossing area.

"The main thing in avoiding a collision," Lasater said, "is to slow down when driving at dusk or at night."

The sheriff also urges motorists to look far ahead, beyond the headlight beam for the eyes of deer that may be near the road.

If you see one deer in the road, he alert for another, Lasater warned. Deer are herd animals and travel in groups of two or up to a dozen. Trying to dodge a deer is not a good idea. The deer may make an erratic move, bounding ahead or running zig-zag across the road. Swerving increases the likelihood of the motorist losing control of the vehicle.

The sheriff advises that people slow down when spotting a deer, flash their headlights or blow the horn to scare the animal out of the road.

Car/deer accidents, however, should all be reported to the sheriff's department or the DNR.

cal of the auditorium proposal. "Since when is the gymnasium not adequate for school events?"

If the school board doesn't come through with realistic millage requests, then voters should look at a new board, including a new superintendent, he added.

The school board met this morning to discuss how to pay for the needed repairs that are awaiting work.

Big Rock Point plant repaired

Big Rock Point nuclear power plant is again producing electricity after shutting down to repair a valve in the reactor depressurization system.

The plant was shut down a week. The plant was restarted about 6:30 a.m. Sunday. Repairs were completed ahead of schedule, said Tim Petrosky, plant public affairs director. However, failure of a pressure regulating device in the turbine automatically shut the plant down again at 2:51 a.m. Monday.

The troubled area of the turbine was isolated and plant workers began trouble shooting for the specific cause of the shutdown. The valve that failed was causing increased pressure in the turbine, prompting the automatic shutdown.

Late Monday the part was replaced, and the plant restarted about 11 p.m. Tuesday.

Events in brief

Teen-agers arrested for drug dealing

Two more arrests have been made in connection with a drug dealing business operating between the East Lansing area and Charlevoix.

Police believe some sales of cocaine, LSD and marijuana were made in the restroom of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce.

Matthew Thomas, 17, of East Lansing and Steven John Ware, 17, of Okemos, were arrested Sept. 9, according to Charlevoix Police Chief, Dennis Halverson. The local department worked with the Straits Area Narcotics Enforcement team and the assistance of the East Lansing Police Department in the investigation.

The teen-agers were arrested downstate and brought to the Charlevoix County Jail, Halverson said.

Previously arrested was Dan Paul Leone, 17, of East Lansing. He was taken into custody Aug. 30 while the other men were being sought.

Police said Leone had about 200 hits of LSD, some pot and a small amount of cocaine in his possession when he was arrested.

Multiple felony charges have been brought up against each defendant. A preliminary hearing has been set for Tuesday, Oct. 1.

Planners discuss second-floor deck downtown

Charlevoix planners will be discussing a request for a second-floor deck at Whitney's of Charlevoix, located on Bridge Street at 7 p.m. today in city hall.

The proposed plan includes a canvas canopy cover over an aluminum tubing frame. Screen panels with drop curtains would provide a viewing area toward the water. Seating for up to 50 people is proposed.

The development plan can be viewed at the city zoning administrator's office in city hall during office hours. Oral and written comments from the public are welcome.

Historical society meeting Tuesday

The Charlevoix Historical Society will host a history program 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 1, at the Charlevoix Depot.

Historian and author, Bob Wilhelm, from Traverse City will present "Timber-r-r-r! Trails, Rails & Tales." The slide program will show the history of the "White Pine Era" in northern Michigan. The program will also include an exhibit of Charlevoix's lumber history using photos from the Bob Miles photo collection, and artifacts donated by local residents.

Bob Wilhelm's unique style and sense of humor brings history alive. He is a published author, history consultant, and is associated with the State History Museum and the Historical Society of Michigan.

The public is invited to attend, and refreshments will also be served.

Heartsaver class comes to Charlevoix

An Adult Heartsaver CPR Class will be held at Charlevoix Area Hospital from 7-9 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 26, in the hospital conference room.

Participants will learn healthy heart habits and lifesaving techniques. Comfortable clothes should be worn. Bring a kneeling pad. The class costs $10. Call the hospital at 547-4024 to register.

Northwest Academy moves into new space

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

Students voices echoed off the shining, white hallway walls as the kids bustled between classes at Northwest Academy.

Construction of Charlevoix's charter school is complete and students began classes in their new building Sept. 16. Opening day was Sept. 3 and classes were held at Camp Seagull until the building was ready. There are 93 students in the sixth- through twelfth-grade public school that has a science and technology emphasis.

Everyone is happy to be in the new building, said Pascale Asbury, from her office in the center of the building. Asbury is the administrator and a French teacher.

One of the nine classrooms is a computer lab and computers are located in each classroom.

The school has 35 computers and is getting more, Asbury said. Because the academy enrollment increased, more computers are needed.

"We want to have one for every two students," she said.

The building, which is located at 105 W. Hurlbut St., cost $350,000 and is owned by a building corporation. The academy eventually wants to obtain ownership.

About 7,000 square feet were renovated at an approximate cost of $180,000. Renovations took about 45 days.

Another section of the building may eventually be developed as an activity area, providing space for sports and gym classes, said Jim Malewitz, who serves on the academy hoard and on the building committee.

The academy will do what it can as finances permit, Malewitz said. We're getting good comments from the students and teachers on what has been done so far.

Local, county, state candidates appear at public forum

Informal sessions for questions

Federal, state and local candidates are expected to attend the Northwest Michigan Candidate Forum Thursday, Oct. 10, at North Central Michigan College in Petoskey.

The public is invited to attend and interact with future public officials who will be representing them, said Jeffrey T. Wendling, president of Northern Michigan Hospital and Healthshare Group, a co-sponsor of the event.

The forum will provide an opportunity for candidates and our community residents to exchange ideas on positions and policies which impact their families, their lives and their businesses in Charlevoix and Emmet counties.

College president Robert Graham hopes area residents take advantage of the forum. It's an important and convenient way to become familiar with the candidates, he said. It gives people the chance to get their questions answered and hear the candidates' views first-hand.

A public reception is planned from 5:30-7 p.m. in conference rooms 1 and 2 for candidates of city, township, county and judicial offices in Charlevoix and Emmet counties. Area residents may discuss issues with these candidates at the informal reception.

From 7-8 p.m. in the college cafeteria, candidates for the 106th and 107th District State House of Representatives are expected to participate in a public question and answer forum.

Candidates for the U.S. Senate and the 1st Congressional District will participate in a public question and answer forum from 8-9 p.m. in the cafeteria.

The audience will be invited to fill out cards with questions for the candidates, which will be posed by moderator Ken Winter, editor of the Petoskey New-Review.

The free event is sponsored by Northern Michigan Hospital and its parent company Healthshare Group, North Central Michigan College, the Petoskey News-Review and the Petoskey Regional Chamber of Commerce.

Candidates attending the forum are up for election at the Tuesday, Nov. 5, general election. To date, this is the only local gathering scheduled that involves government at the various levels.

OPINIONS

Elderly isn't a four-letter word, shouldn't bring shame

EDITORIAL

Being referred to as an elder is no longer a compliment to many. Instead, it is viewed as an insensitive insult.

Age should not be considered a handicap. Rather, people should wear their years with pride. As each year passes, people have more knowledge to contribute to those around them and more experience with which to walk in wisdom.

According to Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary, an elder is a person from an earlier period. An elder is someone who is older, one having authority by virtue of age and experience.

Since the Courier ran a story referring to a 57-year-old and 60-year-old couple as elderly, several readers have contacted the paper. We appreciate the comments. We didn't intend to offend anyone.

Use of the word "elderly" was a matter of respect when referring to a downstate couple who were injured by a local driver as he pulled in front of them on U.S. 31.

Elderly is a reference of being past middle aged, later in life. Again, according to Webster's middle aged is considered from 40- to 60-years old.

We were a bit premature in our reference of the couple, but certainly not meaningfully degrading them in any way.

Today's life spans are extending. Grandparents are sharing much of their grandchildren's lives as they often live to be 80 or more years old. Not only are people living longer, they are healthier and more able to be active in later years.

Acceptance of age appears to be relative. Many people use an AARP cards once they turn 50 years old. They are willing to reap financial discounts on hotels and other goods because of their age. The benefits are obvious because they are affecting a pocketbook or wallet.

However, there are greater benefits to aging, like being able to recall points in history firsthand, being able to see results from personal and career investments and helping younger people make their journey.

Wear your years with pride.

Fund-raiser helps elementary school

Editor:

The Charlevoix Elementary School P.T.O. Community Playground Committee would like to extend their gratitude to the community for their support during the Parent Night Back to School Family Barbecue.

The barbecue was a successful fund-raiser for the playground and a wonderful way to bring families together within the school. Unfortunately, the weather eliminated the outdoor games that were planned for the children.

Warm thanks to all the parent volunteers, teachers, kitchen staff and custodians for their support.

A special thank you to Glen's Market, Subway, Gordon Food Service, Dave's Design, K-Mart, Charlevoix Area Canvas and Belvedere Golf Club for their donations.

The playground committee is excited and looking forward to Saturday, Oct. 19, when volunteers come together to install Phase I of the playground.

Hospice receives golf scramble proceeds

Editor:

The Charlevoix County Hospice, Inc. would like to take this opportunity to thank the management and staff of Vacation Properties Network, Charlevoix, for the check for $2,081, proceeds from their 6th Annual Benefit Golf Scramble.

The benefit was held on Sept. 5 at the Charlevoix County Club. The day was perfect; as were the playing conditions, for the 104 golfers who participated. The great success of this benefit was due to donations of both time and prizes by many individuals and businesses. The Charlevoix County Hospice appreciates everyone who worked so hard to make this a rousing success. I know that everyone is looking forward to next year's benefit.

Sincerely,
Margaret E. Lasater

Community pool still being built

Editor:

People driving past the Charlevoix Community Pool site on U.S. 31 north ask "what's happening?"

As most of us are aware, there's a huge building boom in the Petoskey, Bay Shore and Charlevoix area. Nevertheless, Charlevoix Friends of the Pool is fortunate to have Petrie Construction Co. as its contractor. Jim Petrie assures us that progress will be visible as the pool is enclosed "before winter sets in."

We're also fortunate to have Dale Troppman, LexaLite International Corporation vice president, who volunteered to serve as the board's project liaison with the contractor. Dale's experience as a general contractor for his firm is enormously helpful.

Meanwhile, to complete construction, fund-raising continues. From all indications, friends of the pool will be successful in reaching the final third of its capital campaign goal of $950,000. Pledges and contributions may be mailed to CFOP, P.O. Box 1, Charlevoix, MI 49720.

EDITH GILBERT

Located on the bluff overlooking old Pine River, Cottage No. 1 on the Chicago Club was built in 1881 by John P. Wilson, Sr., a founder of the Chicago Club. Over the years the bluff has eroded, and the present owner, Kitty Rammacher, has assumed the challenge of saving the large, historic cottage from sliding down the hill into what looks like a small stream.

Acting as her own contractor, she arranged to have the large cottage lifted and moved back four feet, placing it on solid ground. Starting last year, the project will take two years to complete.

The little stream, Kitty tells me, is technically an international waterway because it flows from Round Lake into the Channel and Lake Charlevoix. On the other side, it flows past a small, wooded island covering 17 acres, owned by the Chicago Club.

The Rammacher family, including five children, took possession of the cottage in 1970. The large home has eight bedrooms with five small fireplaces built for coal, not wood. The cottage was built entirely of maple, inside and out. The maple floors have been stained black. Bead board covers all the walls, with Kings' coving trim around the 10-foot-high doors and all the windows, which still have the original window panes.

On the first floor, the 40-by-20 foot living room has a gracious window seat to accommodate seven or eight people. Charming Charlevoix scenes by local artists hang on the walls. A long wrap around, 12-feet-wide porch overlooks the little Island, but the pine trees block the view of the Belvedere Club.

One could easily spend the entire summer just on the porch. Far to the right, a swinging bed hangs from the ceiling, that visiting house guests fight for. In the middle of the porch is a comfortable group seating arrangement made up of antique wicker furniture, painted white. Adjacent to this is a gracious dining room set. Beyond that you find a convenient outdoor deck used for grilling.

Originally there was no kitchen because the family ate all three meals at the clubhouse. (The Association rules were changed in 1945 and kitchens were added at that time to most cottages.)

In the hack hall, there still is the space built in the ceiling for an ice chest, and below it hung a silver drinking fountain. No pop machines in those early days. The "call box" to summon servants is still there. too, with Mrs. Wilson's name as well as bells that ring from the nursery, kitchen, guest rooms, living room, etc. The original marhle sink in the maids' bathroom is still in the house as well. The help's dining room is now used as a television room.

A spindle staircase leads upstairs to the sleeping quarters. Originally, there were no bathrooms in the cottage. They weren't added until 1902. Kitty is restoring the eight bathrooms exactly as they were when originally installed. With some delight she showed me the footed tubs, which are temporarily lying upside down in the hall. The date embossed on the tubs is May 23, 1902.

The eight bedrooms are still furnished with old chests, iron beds with the original straw mattresses. Lovely hand-stitched quilts cover all the beds. They were made to order over a number of years by a group of women from the Congregational Church.

None of the closets have doors, only curtains. The master bedroom has the original lighting fixtures around the walls with Lalique glass lampshades. Kitty's only concession to modern conveniences are her plans to replace the five coal burning fireplaces with gas logs.

Although the house was successfully moved back four feet, many of the walls cracked and some floors buckled, therefore much work such as re-caulking, rewiring and painting needs to bring the cottage back to its original splendor.

As a graduate of Northwestern and the University of Cincinnati with a major in applied arts, Kitty laughingly told me how she uses her knowledge in creative carpentry. Instead of replacing a solid maple door as the carpenter suggested, she had it patched at the top to fit the frame perfectly. She's had wood milled to match the old floor widths exactly.

Kitty has given this old house all the love it deserves. And when she is finished, it will glow with pride, hopefully, for another hundred years.

Volunteers needed for school program

Editor:

Listening to the evening news and reading the newspaper paints a sad commentary of today's world. Are you someone who feels that it's time to come forward and make a difference in a young child's life? Do you have an hour or more to spare in your week? If you answered YES to these two questions, then read on.

The Charlevoix Elementary School will begin the STAR Program (Success To All Readers) this fall. The program matches volunteers with elementary children to encourage reading and friendship. Lessons are preplanned so the format is easy to follow.

An in-service will be set up to train volunteers. Contact Joan Carson if you are interested in becoming a volunteer or would like further information.

A volunteer's work is unpaid not because it is valueless, hut because it is priceless.

Thank you for caring about our students and their future.

We are now starting our second year. We need your help. We need more volunteers. Please Call!! 547-3219.

Theater group coming to town

The Charlevoix Council for the Arts has invited the Arm-of-the-Sea Theater to Charlevoix Thursday, Sept. 26, for two performances at the schools.

The group will be performing an original drama called Dreambones and Lightning. The play has been called an "archeo-theatric dig into the turbulent strata of our nation's home turf." The play brings to the surface a few fragments of the past and builds a story from their possible meanings. Its main theme is the struggle in our national psyche between conquest and coexistence, destruction and creativity, invention and compassion. Two characters are simply referred to as "Mind" and "Heart."

Arm-of-the-Sea is a theater of visual poetry, made by hand and put to music. Rather than actors speaking dialogue, the group uses the power of masks and large puppet figures to hold the attention of the audience and tell stories that move freely between mythic realms and the concerns of everyday existence.

The arts council is funding the show with the money it raises each summer from the Charlevoix Waterfront Art Fair, according to member, Mary Lou Smith. The group has previously performed for students in Charlevoix.

The public is welcome to attend the performances, which runs about 70 minutes for each show. The group will be in the high school gym at 10 a.m. for the elementary students and 1 p.m. for high and middle school students.

Weddings

Irene and Sean Ferguson

Irene and Sean Ferguson were joined in marriage June 8, 1996, at the Immaculate Conception Church in Yuma, Ariz.

Irene is the daughter of Ruth Olague, of Yuma, and Sean is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Ferguson, of Charlevoix.

About 300 guests attended the double-ring ceremony, which was performed by Father Martin Martinez. The bride was given in marriage by Jose Angel Valenzuela, her grandfather.

Obituaries

A. Gregg Smith

A. Gregg Smith, 82, long time northern Michigan newspaper publisher and writer, died Saturday, Sept. 21, at Grandvue Medical Care Facility.

He was born May 1, 1914, in Boyne City, the son of Sophia and Phillip Smith. He graduated from Boyne City High School in 1932 and Michigan State University (then college) in 1937 with a degree in journalism.

On March 28, 1941, he married the former Margaret Bridget Gallagher, of St. James, Beaver Island.

A World War II veteran and naval line officer, he participated in many of the invasions in the South Pacific. In 1946 he resigned his naval commission for permanent appointment as Lt. Cmdr. in the U.S. Navy Reserves.

The Smiths then returned to Boyne City, where he was a writer and later editor of the local newspaper the "Boyne Citizen." Over the next 14 years he became a columnist for several outdoor magazines, northern correspondent for the "Grand Rapids Press," and roving feature writer for the Booth Newspapers, a downstate chain of metropolitan daily newspapers. He also worked as special assignment writer for Time, Inc.

With the building of the Mackinac Bridge in the late 50's, his bylined stories and photo coverage appeared in papers and magazines throughout the country, resulting in a popular pictorial book "The Mackinac Bridge Story," which is still in print.

In 1960 the Smiths purchased the "Citizen," and with a talented and loyal staff built a multi-publication firm, Gregg Publications, headquartered in Boyne and publisher of community newspapers, resort and shopping guides in five Northwest Michigan counties. Under his guidance, many of these publications and their staffs received national and state press association awards and recognition over a 17-year period that culminated with the Smith's retirement in 1977 and sale of their company.

He was past member of the Boyne Chamber of Commerce, V.F.W. and American Legion Posts, Rotary Club, Avalanche Commission and Mid-Florida Chapter of the Retired Officers' Association. He also was past president of the Boyne Sportsman's Club and Michigan Outdoor Writers' Association, as well as treasurer and long time member of Delta Chi Fraternity, Michigan State University.

Family survivors include his wife, Margaret, a resident of Boulder Park Terrace, Charlevoix; also, Michael A. Smith of Ft. Thomas, Kentucky; Dr. Timothy V. (Lynn) Smith, M.D. of Holland; Gregory P. (Dee) Smith of Interlochen; and four grandchildren.

A memorial mass to celebrate his life will be held 10:30 a.m., Thursday, Sept. 26, at St. Matthew's Catholic Church, Boyne City, where the Smiths were long-time parish members.

Memorials may be made to these groups and charities: The Boyne City Historical Society, Albert Applegate Scholarship Fund, Department of Journalism, Michigan State University. Frs. Deters/Kerner Scholarship Fund and St. Matthew's Catholic Church, Boyne City.

Cremation has taken place.

Arrangements were handled by the Winchester Funeral Home, Charlevoix.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

Beacons of Blessing

By Rev. Bruce Hamilton

Sometimes our court system puzzles me. A decision was handed down by the federal court of appeals that serves California that made no sense to me at all. At issue was the question of free speech. More specifically, it dealt with the right of a professor of college English to use pornography as a part of his teaching techniques.

For starters, why, when we have such marvelous classics by Shakespeare, Dickens, Poe, Hemingway and so many others, would anyone want to use things like Playboy and Hustler to teach the basics of our language? That was the first part of the puzzle. Why, knowing that there are more than a few folks in this world that are not crazy about such things, would you want to bring them into the classroom where the influence a teacher over young minds is really supposed to be a sacred trust?

The student involved in the court case objected when she was asked to write an essay defining pornography. She requested an alternative assignment. The professor not only turned her request down but also gave her a failing grade for the class. When she appealed to the college, they sided with her and reprimanded the professor. When the professor appealed to the courts, they sided with him saying his actions were considered protected under the First Amendment of the Constitution.

If you wonder why things seem to be going downhill from time to time in our nation, this could possibly be one reason why. Have we forgotten what the real principles were that our forefathers built this nation on? The Puritans of Massachusetts knew. The Quakers in Pennsylvania certainly remembered. The Methodists of Savannah would tell you some stories. God was at the heart and soul of our country's birth.

The separation of church and state that so many argue eloquently over was not to keep the church from interfering with the state but to keep the state from interfering with the free practice of our faith, whatever that faith may be. People left the old world because they were not free to follow the calling the Lord had laid on their hearts. People left the old world because kings and queens dictated what the church could and could not do.

In our pursuit of freedom, some have tried to silence the holy conscience within them that clearly tells each person what is right and what is wrong. We cannot lament the changes that are taking place in society unless we are willing to stand up for what we know to be right, holy and true.

I am all in favor of someone's right of free expression to a point. I have trouble any time the voice of man tries to overrule the voice of God. As teachers go, I'm kind of partial to the apostle Paul's techniques. He offered wisdom that I don't think should be all that hard for any of us to follow. He wrote, "whatever is true, whatever is noble, whatever is right, whatever is lovely, whatever is admirable - if anything is excellent or praiseworthy - think about such things."

If more of us would pass on those feelings to the generations that are following us, we'd have far less to worry about in our future.

These volunteers lead the students through hands-on activities, which are designed to educate and inspire young people to value free enterprise, understand business and economics and be workforce ready.

The seventh-grade students of the Charlevoix Middle School will participate in Junior Achievement's Personal Economics Course. Under the guidance of a business volunteer and their classroom teacher, the students will assess personal skills and interests, explore career options, learn job hunting skills and most importantly discover the value of their education as it relates to future career options. They will also learn about budgets, personal and family financial management, and the use and abuse of credit.

Funding for this program is provided by businesses, service clubs and individuals who realize that this addition to the school curriculum pays dividends in the form of community oriented citizens and better prepared workers for the future.

Last year Junior Achievement Programs were also available to fifth-grade students in Charlevoix. Repeat of that program awaits the results of continuing fund-raising. Contact James Connaughton, vice president of FMB Northwestern Bank in Charlevoix at 547-0881 to contribute to the program.

Island students help save rain forest

The students at Beaver Island Community School have something extraordinary to celebrate this year — they are participating in the largest private land acquisition for conservation ever.

The ninth- and tenth-grade global science class is taking part in a Rain forest Adopt-An-Acre project that is being conducted in more than 10,000 schools across the country via a special network of educators called Earth Foundation. By selling environmental T-shirts, the students will raise money to help double the size of Noel Kempf Mercado National Park, in Bolivia.

This is the third year for students to sell shirts for Earth Foundation. The first year they were able to protect 7.9 acres of rain forest in Belize's Rio Bravo Conservation Area. Last year, they were able to protect 8.9 acres in the Pantanal region of Brazil. This year's goal is to sell at least 100 shirts and protect more than 10 acres of the Noel Kempf Mercado National Park, in Bolivia.

According to Earth Foundation, a Houston-based environmental education organization, rain forests need rescuing. At present, half of the world's rain forests have been burned and bulldozed. The rest are being destroyed at an alarming rate of 35.2 million acres a year-or 67 acres a minute. At this rate, tropical forests will vanish within 30 years.

In the balance lie thousands of plant and animal species, indigenous tribal groups and the health of the planet. Rain forests affect weather, prevent global warming, reduce erosion, and provide hardwoods, rubber, food and medicines. (Pharmacologists have identified more than 2,000 tropical plants with cancer-fighting properties.)

The foundation believes the next generation brings hope. Students learn about the impact of consumer choices on rain forests, how recycling helps and ways to express their concerns and opinions to governmental leaders and corporations.

To help with the fund-raiser, contact a ninth- or tenth-grader to purchase one (or more) of the T-shirts. Each shirt is $13, and will arrive in time for holiday gift giving.

There are several designs, colors and both children's and adult's sizes to choose from. Sales begins Tuesday, Oct. 1, and ends Tuesday, Oct. 22.

Boat shop businesses change with seasons

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

Irish Boat Shop workers operating a lift to gently bring a 27-foot Catalina sailboat out of the water is a clear indication of the end of summer.

The boat will be cleaned and winterized and then transported to its new home in Bay City. Most boats being hoisted out of Lake Charlevoix stay in storage at area marinas.

To prepare the boats for winter, boat companies wash and clean them. The engines are drained and winterized and the water system is drained.

The boats that customers do not want put in storage buildings are shrink-wrapped for protection. Most of the boat work is for people from other areas who spend summers in Charlevoix, according to workers from various boat shops.

Irish Boat Shop and other Charlevoix marinas that winterize and store boats see their business accelerating as fall approaches.

"We start taking them out of the water at the end of August," said Don Pero, the yard manager at Irish. "Some come out as late as December."

> "Some come out as late as December."
> — Don Pero, yard manager at Irish Boat Shop

Pero said they are currently taking about four to five boats out of the water each day. October is the busiest month, and Irish handles about 350 to 400 boats a season. It can service boats as large as 70 feet and weighing almost 50 tons.

Don Ward, of Ward Brothers Charter Boats Inc., said his company is busy now and expects to stay busy through the first part of November.

Ward owns the business with his brother and father. It has been in operation for more than 60 years, and started storage and maintenance in 1982.

Kirk Post, owner of Boat Work of Charlevoix, said most of his business comes in September and the company works on about 125 boats a season.

The boat companies spend winter months doing various work on the boats. Engine tune-ups and other service work is common, and some boat owners want cabinetry or varnishing jobs completed.

The work keeps employees busy until April or May when the marinas begin to put boats back in the water for another season.

Irish Boat Shop employee, Brian Vandeyacht, prepares the lift to get a boat out of the water and ready for winter Thursday. The lift holds up to 50 tons of weight and works with straps that fit under a boat then hoists it out of the water. Vandeyacht has been with the company for nine years.

Businessmen attend sound seminar

Buday's Sound Advice of Petoskey and Charlevoix, sent Edward Buday, Jr., and Doug Buday to the annual Custom Electronic Design and Installation Association (CEDIA) conference, held Sept. 4-8, in Dallas, Texas.

"We are committed to keeping abreast of the continuing developments being made in the design, installation and calibration of home theaters, whole house music systems, home automation networks, and lighting control systems," said Ed Buday, Jr., marketing director for the firm.

"We attended classes in project management; advanced system design, documentation, and integration; wiring homes for the future; and project management," said Doug Buday. "With the various subsystems in a home becoming more complex, it is vital that correct design and documentation protocols be followed. With home theaters beginning to resemble commercial theaters, our experts can assist our clients with the design process: room layout, lighting, acoustics, seating and wall covering."

Buday's Sound Advice is a founding member of installation conference. The family-owned business specializes in the design, layout, and installation of custom audio systems, media rooms, lighting controls and system integration for residential clients throughout the state.

Girls' basketball takes on a new look

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

The season started slow. But the Charlevoix girls' basketball team is picking up steam.

The team lost its first four games, facing a 0-4 record with a new coach and several experienced players.

The trend changed at a Sept. 17 game when the Rayders topped the Boyne City Ramblers, 57-51, on their home court.

"The difference between this game and Ellsworth, when we lost, was that the kids did the right things at the right time," said varsity head coach, Hank Wagner.

The game was close throughout the four quarters. As the final buzzer drew near, the Rayders made strategic passing choices under pressure.

"Our press did a good job," Wagner said.

Against the Ramblers, Lisa Parish racked up 22 points and Julie Gregory scored 14. Good rebounding and defense by Angie Potter was also key in the win, Wagner said.

The Rayders went on to prove their win wasn't a fluke when they defeated Traverse City St. Francis Thursday, 50-36, at home.

In the first quarter, the teams swapped baskets. Parish rallied up and down the court with her teammates to rack up Charlevoix points. The first quarter ended with the Rayders having a slight lead, 11-10.

Charlevoix picked up pace in the second quarter, adding to the point spread.

"The press made the difference in the second quarter," Wagner said. "We had a burst of scoring and defense, and we were up by nine at halftime.

"That was kind of the game."

Parish scored 20 points in the first half of the game, the same amount the entire St. Francis team scored.

In the second half of the game, the Rayders scored 21 points while the Gladiators shot for 16.

"This was the first game we actually played together, as a team," Wagner said. "Some gelling has been happening."

In the second half of the game, Parish was shut down by St. Francis, which double teamed her. She passed the ball to open players, and the Rayders maintained their lead.

"We starting to play ball," the coach said. We're starting to get a little confidence."

That confidence has come from persevering through the losses.

"They can do it," Wagner said. "They have to decide when."

Parish led the Rayders with 24 points against the Gladiators while Julie Gregory and Amanda Eaton each scored 10.

The team is now 2-4. However, they have a 2-0 conference standing. Tough teams to watch are Harbor Springs and Kalkaska. They are both 5-0 for the season.

The junior varsity team lost to St. Francis Thursday, 29-23. Andrea Arnold and Jamie Gowell each scored nine points for the Rayders.

The Rayders next game is 6 p.m. Saturday, when the junior varsity and varsity teams face Kalkaska at home.

Cross country teams fare well in Petoskey

By Tim Tebeau
Courier special writer

The gruesome initiation into the 1996-97 Cross Country season provided by the Charlevoix Classic Course prepared the Rayder cross country team to achieve success at the Petoskey Invitational Saturday.

The 5K semi-hilly course is considered monstrous by some regional standards. It presented no great difficulty for the Charlevoix team.

The eleventh- and twelfth-grade boys finished third overall with senior runner, Nate Martin, leading the pack in fourteenth place with a time of 18:5.

When asked about his opinion concerning their victory Martin said: "Our work as a team is really starting to pay off."

In addition to the victory by the upper classmen the ninth- and tenth-grade boys finished seventh in their division.

Even though star runner, Candice Vandergriff, did not race, the girls' team secured a fourth place finish, with sophomore runner, Tricia Hodge, taking seventh place with a time of 21:43.

Coach Ken Plude said he is extremely proud of his team for the extreme effort and sportsmanship they put forth.

"Both the boys and girls are showing great cooperation during the races and are learning to run as a pack," Plude said. "This will be the key to our success. The entire team has banded together to help each other improve, and we have a very optimistic outlook concerning the upcoming races.

Charlevoix's next race will take place 4 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 26, at the Belvedere Golf Course.

Golf team defeats Traverse City

Charlevoix's high school golf team is 5-0 in the conference after winning a conference tri-meet against Traverse City St. Francis and Mancelona Sept. 18 at the Belvedere Country Club.

Medalist for the day was Keith Grunch, who shot a 39, according to Rayder coach, Jim Glynn. Dan Pardee shot 42, Ryan Murdick 46 and Jason Vincent 48.

The team's next match is away against Inland Lakes and Grayling today.

Varsity Rayders top Harbor Springs Rams

The Rayder football team defeated Harbor Springs at Ottawa Stadium Friday, 18-6. The team is 2-1 for the season and 1-0 in conference play.

David Manker ran for 228 yards, three of those following a 64-yard pass from T.J. Carey, bringing the Rayders a touchdown. Chris Dominic went into the end zone after a 61-yard run, and an interception deep in Harbor Springs territory set up Manker for another touchdown.

Junior varsity set precedent for varsity

The junior varsity football team defeated Harbor Springs Thursday during a home game. Final score was 18-16.

The Rayders led, 18-0, until Harbor scored in the third quarter on a 65-yard interception return by Scott Hall. A 35-yard run put Harbor on the board with less than a minute remaining.

A collection of accomplishments, awards and praises of Charlevoix area people

Tom Ochs, a 1986 Charlevoix High School graduate, helped earn the Program Excellence Award by the International Technology Education Association award for the technology department of Byron Center High School this spring. He is head of the technology department.

Only one high school, one middle school, and one elementary per state receive this award each year. Before consideration, a program must first receive the Program Excellence Award from the ITEA affiliate program. Byron Center High School received the Program Excellence Award from the Michigan Industrial and Technology Education Society in the spring of 1995.

The program Excellence Award recognizes outstanding programs in technology education. These programs focus on the process the student uses to create products and solve problems.

"We are proud to have received the program excellence award, "Ochs said. "It is always encouraging to know that we are on the right track and going the right direction. This award further inspires us to update and improve our program and make Byron Center Public Schools a model school district throughout the state and the nation."

Hail and farewell to passing ships

In the above picture the two queens of the great lakes meet in Round Lake Harbor for the last time. To the left, is the palatial Sylvia, unquestionably the most beautiful yacht to grace the waters of the inland seas. To the right, the Isle Royale, formerly the Magnificent Manitou, finest of the old commercial liners in the era of the waterways.

The Isle Royale would soon come to an ignoble end in a fire at Manistee.

The Sylvia would soon go to war, never again to be seen in the home port of Charlevoix.

James Ochs begins walking down a lane of wartime memories prior to his gathering this weekend with his fellow World War II fighters. Ochs spent 17 months in Europe during the height of the war and witnessed mass graves from the Holocaust.

Memories

Charlevoix man hosts wartime reunion

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Nobody can ever tell James Ochs that the Holocaust didn't happen.

As a young man during World War II, his eyes saw the horror of mass graves that were discovered by American soldiers. He witnessed the skeletal conditions of those left to rot in the wake of war.

"When you're in the war and driving down the road, you see bodies half covered with water — that's part of war," the 74-year-old said. "You grow up and become an adult quickly."

Ochs spent 38 months in the Army after he was drafted in 1942 — two years after graduating from Charlevoix High School. Instead of being miles from his friends while attending college, Ochs found himself four to 10 miles from the front lines.

For 17 months, he did his duty in Europe during one of the most destructive times in history. His company of 250 men strung telephone lines, transported radios and delivered messages between troops.

Now, a small group of those same soldiers are coming to Charlevoix to visit their buddy with which they've developed a special bond. Fifty years after their duty ended, they gather to remember.

The reunion in Charlevoix follows several that began about eight years ago. They are held annually in different cities. This time, Ochs is being an ambassador for the home he loves, the place where he returned to after retiring as a financial analyst for Ford in 1980.

The members of the 39th Signal Company arrive today and will stay in the area through Sunday, Oct. 6. The 20-some guests, including wives, are coming from cities throughout the country.

The men were part of the first convoy that traveled directly from the states to France after the invasion of the beaches. They were put into combat in France under Gen. Patton's Third Army. When on their way to the Battle of the Bulge, Ochs was clueless as to the severity of what was about to happen.

Survey predicted bond election results

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

The outcome of the bond election was predicted. And now that results have verified expectations, school board members are taking another look at a community survey conducted earlier this year.

"It mirrors what our results were," said school district superintendent, Roberta Jackson, during a special school board meeting Sept. 25.

The survey was conducted in May by the School Public Relations Consultant Services, out of Menominee. Kathy Feaster presented the information collected randomly from registered voters during a school board meeting.

"There's not enough (support) to pass an election," Feaster said, following her June presentation.

Results showed that 55 percent of the voters survey would support construction of a new middle and 37 percent would support a new high school. However, about 52 percent of the people polled said they would vote against a $26 million bond proposal.

Prior to the Sept. 23 vote, the school board brought the request down to two proposals that equaled about $23 million. They included a new high school, turning the current high school into a middle school and renovating the elementary school.

At least 60 percent of the voters said no to each of the proposals. A record amount of voters turned to the polls to have their say.

During the springtime survey, voters polled told the company reasons why they would vote against a proposal. They include:

School board forced to look at "what now"

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

In the wake of two failed millage proposals, the school board is evaluating its next step in dealing with maintenance, renovations and construction of a new school.

"I don't think we should move forward until our house is in order," said district superintendent, Roberta Jackson, referring to presenting voters with a new bond proposal.

"We don't want to be viewed as doing something just to be reactionary," said school board president, Mary Lee Campbell.

Jackson did strongly suggest that the district move forward with securing land for a future building project.

"That's been a frustration in the community," she said, of people voting on a proposal Sept. 23 for a new school without knowing where it would be built.

Larry Sullivan, a community member who attended the board meeting, said people's first question about the election was where would the new school be built. And, the board has earlier stated that a location would be released before the vote.

"The perception was, they were lied to," he told the board.

The meeting was originally scheduled to provide a time to pass a resolution to proceed with building plans. Instead, the board discussed why the proposals failed and what should be done now to better accommodate the K-12 students in Charlevoix.

"People aren't going to say I didn't have enough information, so I voted no," said board member, Allen Telgenhof. He called the campaign for supporters an uphill battle.

"People look at the board as trying to tell them what's best," he said. "The perception is very difficult to change."

Bond proposal too much

— Having too much information in one proposal — the school board wants to do too much at one time,

— There's no need to build a new high school,

— Taxes are high enough now, and

— Can't afford more taxes.

Once Feaster calculated a "mushiness index" into people's attitude about the upcoming vote, she said there was about a 39 percent "solid support" for a bond proposal, not enough to get one passed. At the time of the survey, solid opposition was estimated at 24 percent.

Since then, the school board and other community members set out to show people the validity of the proposal the board voted to present. It was thought that there were at least 1,000 solid "yes" votes for both proposals.

When taxpayers entered the polls, only 827 out of 2,186 people voted for the $18 million request for a new school and renovations to two others. And 762 out of 2,192 voted for the 700-seat auditorium.

During the hoard meeting, Jackson referred back to the survey, saying that people voted no for three reasons: They don't want an increase in taxes, the proposals involved too much at one time and that many people want to see a new middle school built.

Unemployment reaches record low for state

Unemployment in Michigan in August tied the record low of 4.5 percent, set in June, falling from an already strong 4.8 percent in July. Last year's August rate was 5.3 percent, according to Michigan Jobs Team.

Thanks to the strong economy, employment grew by 13,000 jobs last month and 4,613,000 people are now working. Michigan has now stayed below the national average for 32 straight months. The largest increases in August employment were in manufacturing, retail trade and services.

Events in brief

Whitneys gets planner approval for second-floor deck

Whitney's Oyster Bar is one step closer to gaining a second-floor dining deck.

City planners approved a 491-square-foot deck on top of the restaurant. The recommendation for approval will go before the city council 7 p.m. Monday, Oct. 7.

If approved, up to 39 people can dine upstairs.

Restaurant owners, Chuck and Gina Whitney, will pay into the city's parking fund to use the additional spaces required for the expansion.

The deck is proposed to have screened panels and drop curtains.

Planner Shirley Gibson asked if the deck would be enclosed for year-round use. City planner, Gerry Harsch, said the deck could be enclosed, but it didn't make sense to do so because it's being built over the existing roof.

Candidate forum coming to Charlevoix High School

Candidates for Congress and the Michigan State Legislature have agreed to participate in a forum 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 16, at Charlevoix High School.

Incumbent Congressman Bart Stupak, D-Menominee, and his opponent, Republican Bob Carr, are seeking to represent the first Congressional District of Michigan in the general election Tuesday, Nov. 5.

Incumbent state representative Beverly Bodem, R-Alpena, is being challenged by Democrat Bob Fournier for the 106th District seat.

Mona Bergeon, president of the local chapter of the League of Women Voters of Michigan, which is sponsoring the event, will act as moderator.

The local group is a non-partisan grass-roots organization which seeks to inform citizens about political issues and candidates for election. There is no charge to attend.

Alzheimer's Association to meet Oct. 8

Carlene Peregrine, program director for the Northwest Michigan Chapter of the Alzheimer's Association, is speaking at 1 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 8, at Charlevoix Area Hospital Building in Central Lake, on the corner of M-88 and Park Street.

Peregrine will dispel some of the myths about Alzheimer's disease and talk to caregivers about stress and coping strategies. The public is invited. There is no charge. The program is offered as a part of the Charlevoix Area Hospital Community Outreach Program.

Spaghetti dinner Friday before football game

The publications class at Charlevoix High School is hosting an all-you-can-eat spaghetti dinner from 5-7 p.m. Friday, before the home football game against East Jordan.

Donations will be accepted for the dinner. Money raised will be used to help the class pay for production of the yearbook and newspaper.

Seat open on library board

The school board will be considering an appointment to the District Library Board at its 7:30 p.m. Monday, Oct. 7, meeting at the high school. The school is allotted one chair on the board, as is the City of Charlevoix and surrounding townships.

Anyone interested should send a letter of interest stating why they would like to be considered for the seat to district superintendent, Roberta Jackson, 208 Clinton, Charlevoix, MI, 47920.

Letters should be at the school office by Friday.

Aerobics reunion at Charlevoix fitness

Candy Smith wants some closure. The aerobics studio she leads at Charlevoix Fitness Studio was closed suddenly when the studio went out of business Sept. 13, Friday the 13th.

Because the Charlevoix Fitness Studio closed with such an abrupt ending, many of the members and staff did not get a chance to mourn the loss of a great place with great memories and great people, Smith said.

In an effort to create some closure and continued camaraderie, Smith and the Vital Options Instructors (with the help of former studio staff members) invite anyone and everyone to a potluck at noon Saturday, Oct. 5.

Steps from the aerobics class will be stacked high and used for a table. The luncheon is being held in the fitness studio. Bring a dish to pass and a beach blanket for dining.

The aerobic, step, and strength classes are continuing to be held at the Charlevoix Fitness Studio location, Smith said.

Local lifesavers prepare for future emergencies

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

It was only a test, but the Fire Department Emergency Medical Services and Jaws of Life training Sept. 24 had a definite air of the real thing.

Ambulances and fire trucks, with lights blazing, surrounded two cars crunched together in a simulated rollover accident. Firefighters and emergency medical technicians moved quickly from the trucks with rescue equipment at Irish Boat Shop on West Carpenter.

One vehicle was overturned and sitting on its roof, broken glass and hubcaps were strewn on the ground and a simulated downed power line snaked out from under one of the cars.

The rolled car was fortified with wooden blocks to prevent it from moving and technicians entered the cars to stabilize the volunteer victims and talk with them, said shift commander, Joe Schwartzfisher.

A bright orange tarp was placed on the ground and workers brought out the Jaws of Life equipment. Hydraulic tools were used to cut and drill through metal. Doors, glass or other obstacles were moved out of the way.

Twelve-year-old Bobby Roloff hung upside-down inside the overturned car for about 45 minutes while he was being rescued. He was strapped in with a seat belt while rescuers worked to free him and three other volunteers trapped inside the two cars.

"It was a little awkward being upside down for so long," Roloff said. He is the son of a city firefighter and has previously volunteered to act as an accident victim. He said it was helpful to have an emergency medical technician get into the car to talk with him while rescuers worked to free him.

Charlevoix Fire Chief, Doug Carver, was on the scene assessing the performance of the emergency personnel.

"It's a good drill," he said. "They're learning what they should. Now they know they need to be aware of electric lines."

Two workers had not noticed the downed power line under one of the cars and touched the car or the power line. They could have been killed if it was an actual occurrence, Carver said,

The fire department conducts fire drills and rescue training frequently for its personnel. Other rescue training includes confined space rescues and ice rescue.

The wrecked cars were donated by Holm Auto Sales and were brought to the site by Charlevoix Towing.

City firefighters and emergency medical technicians work at a Sept. 24 training session to free a volunteer victim from a wrecked car. The training sessions, conducted by the fire department, are held to familiarize personnel with a variety of rescue situations. Each exercise presents a different situation.

Defeated county commissioner to write-in for election

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

County commissioner, Richard Gillespie, doesn't think the people had their say in the primary election. He lost his chair by 43 votes to fellow Republican Shirley Roloff.

Gillespie hasn't given up. He's running at a write-in candidate in the general election, Tuesday, Nov. 5.

"I don't think the best interests of Charlevoix and Beaver Island are going to be met," he said. "I'm just not satisfied that my opponent can do the job for both communities."

Gillespie is a Beaver Island native. He has served on the county board for four years.

He is challenging Shirley Roloff, who defeated him in August.

Roloff has lived in Charlevoix for 23 years. The district for which the two are competing to represent includes both the island and the city.

"I can do as good of a job representing the islanders as Richie can representing Charlevoix," Roloff said.

She believes the people have had their say. Still, Roloff is not taking Gillespie's challenge lightly.

"If he wants to run he can," she said. "But I won't take it sitting down."

Both candidates are planning campaigns that will pick up as the election approaches. Gillespie said he will be going door-to-door, advertising and talking to people one-on-one. The strategy is designed to remind people of his experience with the county board.

"I think my record speaks for itself," he said. "I've enjoyed this job and I hate to give it up for a poor turnout in the primary."

Roloff will be the only name listed on the ballot as a candidate for District 6. However, Gillespie plans to be at the polls handing out stickers for people to use when they vote.

Instead of walking away, Gillespie said he wants to see through the renovations of the county building and the installation of a new computer system.

Because the primary was poorly attended and the spread of 43 votes isn't enough to convince him that his constituents want a new commissioner.

In the Beaver Island election, Gillespie said that 50 ballots were spoiled, mostly by people trying to vote split ticket. That creates enough doubt in his mind that he could have won.

"This is not a knock on her," he said, "but I feel I'm a better candidate.

"We'll let the voters decide in November if that's true."

Mixed messages being sent through "kiss" incident

"I kissed a girl on the cheek."

These are the words of a 6-year-old as he explains why he's been separated from his classmates, denied a reward for perfect attendance and been thrust into a swarm of curious, international reporters.

There's been a high price to pay for Johnathan Prevette's bold expression of affection at school.

A segment of America is standing by the rigid rules that back the paranoid discipline of an innocent boy who kissed his classmate because he loved her and they are friends.

They seem to have forgotten what it's like to be a child, to jump into your parents arms and be washed clean of any hurt by their kisses. Aunts, uncles and friends of the family are free to show their affection to a 6-year-old by hugging and kissing the radiant face of a child.

The message this North Carolina school board is sending to the world is that America no longer has room for innocence. It no longer exists. There is sexual innuendoes to every physical act between a male and female — of any age.

"The student was disciplined for violation of the general school rule which prohibits unwarranted and unwelcome touching of one student by another," they said, denying that a 6-year-old was in trouble for sexual harassment.

EDITORIAL

While the general public rallies behind the boy, they need to look seriously at what brought on such rash action by a school board, a group of elected people who are always on the lookout for lawsuits. Following rules is the best way to legally back decisions, sound or unsound.

The attempt to educate our nation on appropriate physical contact between males and females is beginning to backfire. The pendulum, which took a far left swing during the sexual revolution of the 1960s, is now swiftly swinging to the other extreme.

Men and women are no longer allowed to be affectionate — unless they have an intimate sexual relationship. People from both genders now become uncomfortable if a coworkers extends a hug, even when it is offered in purity. Pastors have become specialists in one-armed, side embraces with their parishioners to avoid misunderstandings.

People should be empowered to make decisions that will keep them from becoming victims of maniacs who have no sense of decency. However, true empowerment includes wisdom and discernment of each situation. It should include freedom to give and receive natural affection from other people.

There was no fair evaluation of Johnathan's act, just cold-hearted action. And as people specialize in extremes, the media has put a young boy under an international spotlight, where he's being rewarded for just being what every 6-year-old should be — innocent, affectionate and honest.

Two wrong messages are being sent to Johnathan and all young children through this situation. The first we already mentioned, grow up quickly because adults can't comprehend innocence. The second, authority figures are ridiculous and you can be the hero when getting in trouble at school. What conflicting messages.

We need to be better at setting consistent examples. Maybe that would be possible if we spent time thinking about the messages we send instead of just reacting, being swayed to and fro with every situation.

Boss right to speak out on Peanut League issue

Editor:

I cannot believe all the ridiculous flack you are getting because of Ike Boss' letter.

I have also coached young kids for six years. I thought the pictures being taken instead of giving first-, second-, and third-place ribbons made every team feel equal.

How do the other kids feel when they see one team's picture in the paper and not theirs? I also had a great team, as I think I do every year.

I was glad to see Ike make it clear why only one picture was in the paper. And that's all he did!

How many more letters does Mrs. Fisher need in her defense?

I guess when you've lived in this area longer you will learn who's toes you're not supposed to step on!

Look at alternative ways of funding new school

Editor:

The Charlevoix School District, in the defeat of the proposed $21,000,000 package, has collectively made its wishes known. I am hearing many heated statements which are, on further investigation, not completely true. Now is the time for the board of education to re-think and evaluate what went wrong.

I heard on a television newscast (Channel 7&4) re: bond proposals: "Charlevoix hasn't had a bond issue in twenty years!" What does that statement indicate?

The board of education has not been future minded. If they were, they would have wisely invested some of their money over the past 20 years so there would be available funds and the citizens wouldn't be slam-dunked with such a huge amount of money.

I personally took time to look at middle and elementary schools, and I asked questions. I was given some good feed-back.

I called David Disler, business manager of the Battle Creek Public School System, and discussed their method of operations. Having had children attend and graduate from Battle Creek, I was quite familiar with the system.

The Battle Creek School System has a very impressive program which reflects financial responsibility.

— This plan has been in existence for forty four years.

— They do not tear down buildings, they renovate.

— They maintain their schools constantly.

— 1 mill is levied continuously for the maintenance and renovation of their buildings.

— If a new building must be built, 3 mills is levied for a period of five years. At the end of five years, the building is paid for and the 1 mill is resumed. Because of their ability to control their finances, the people respond well.

— The city library also houses the school administrative offices. The building was built in 1904. It has been well maintained and is in excellent condition. Mr. Disler also pointed out to me that one of their buildings was built in 1926 and another in 1932. They are in excellent condition.

I urge and challenge the board of education and Roberta Jackson to think seriously about this. This plan can work in our own system, and the time to implement it is now!

Mr. David Disler welcomes inquiries regarding this plan. He can be contacted at Business Manager Battle Creek Schools, 3 W. VanBuren, Battle Creek, MI, 49017. His phone number is 616-965-9465.

Let's become accountable! One other observation — the elementary school definitely needs renovation! The chaos of open classrooms is a great distraction for teachers and students alike!

Sincerely,
Suzanne M. Miller

Golf benefit success for area hospice

Editor:

A short note of appreciation to the many participants and generous donors who helped make the 6th Annual Vacation Properties Network Golf Benefit, held Sept. 5, an overwhelming success.

Thanks to the efforts of everyone at Charlevoix Country Club, the host course for the event, playing conditions were superb and all 104 golfers had a great time while generating more than $2000 for this year's non-profit beneficiary, Charlevoix County Hospice. This type of success is not possible without many donations of both time and prizes by many individuals and businesses. Our sincere gratitude to all as we look forward to next year's benefit. Thank you!

Support Proposal C in November election

Editor:

As a veteran of military service, one of eight in the Michigan State Senate, I would urge your readers to support Proposal C when they go to the polls on Nov. 5.

Unfortunately, the Michigan Veterans' Trust Fund has been used in the past to balance various state budgets. Proposal C, a constitutional amendment, would prevent this from happening in the future and would protect the trust fund so that funds could only be used to benefit veterans and their families.

Michigan veterans have protected us in the past — you can help protect their future. Vote YES on Proposal C!

Local swimmer supports Charlevoix Community Pool

Editor:

I'm writing as a swimmer formerly embarrassed by my Timor Aqua Frigidus. I don't like to swim in chilly water. I wade in slowly, then go on tip-toe; you know all the symptoms. I've even tried wearing a wet suit to play in the water. Lake Michigan and Lake Charlevoix have beautiful, clear water, which is sometimes warm enough for comfortable summer swimming.

I finally realized I wasn't alone when I read about the Charlevoix Inn Natatorium, built in 1896. With it's heated water, it was very popular with the summer visitors and local residents. In 1896, there must have been thousands of summer visitors and townspeople who wanted to swim but found the lake waters too chilly for fun; like me.

There still must be a multitude who think the lakes are often a mite too chilly to swim, even in summer.

Will everyone who wants to swim in warmed water, in any season, please fess up and contact the Charlevoix Friends of the Pool. Make a financial pledge to build this grand resource for us all.

Tell school reps why you voted "no"

Editor:

A note of thanks is due to our school administrators and teachers. They worked very, very hard to get financing for school upgrading. They felt their plan was best for our students and our community's future.

But before someone jumps off the bridge in a fit of Post Election Depression, let's count our blessings.

Our greatest asset remains undamaged — and stronger than ever — our teachers. Heaven bless them all.

Our community can rely on them, whether our schools are torn down, burned down, or go unbuilt. They will continue doing what they love to do, teach.

Many would say they are the best.

Most in the district agree that more classrooms are needed. But, how do we give teachers the buildings that the community can support with good will as well as money? But, how to design a creditable package and then how to market that package? As Shakespeare said "That is the Question."

One answer might be to shift the new rooms effort from school administrators to lay people.

What if an ad hoc citizens group were created? It could include, by mandate, the critics who wrote against the defeated plan.

Their logic was sound, obviously, to those "outside the loop" who voted no. This new group should be nonexclusive. Every one of age should be invited: Clergy, laborers, teachers, administrators, entrepreneurs, farmers, small businessmen and professionals. An example is the Chamber of Commerce super group for the 1996 Industrial Fair.

Bern Cannan developed a magnificent, understandable action planning guide system for the fair.

Starting from projected student population, the same approach might be used.

First, let's not rely too much on experts. One can always be hired to give the answer wanted, and that can lead one up the rosy trail. The administration will probably agree to that, now.

Second, the charge should be to design three price levels; 1) A get by, patch together, minimum cost program. 2) A cut above bare minimum, and 3) A trimmed down Golski plan. The preliminary draft should be ready next spring. A funding plan ready by late fall 1997.

Third, selling time Guidelines! Lots of open meetings, no hype, no pages with signatures, no letters to the editor, just straight forward information. Citizens care. They will decide.

Thank You,
Jim Hiscy

Downtown cornstalks are dangerous

Editor:

The cornstalk decorations scheduled to be put up in the downtown area are dangerous to Charlevoix's famous ducks. Many photos are taken of them, including two that were printed in the last issue of the Charlevoix Courier.

Last year at least one duck was killed while crossing to get to the corn on the other side. We also witnessed kids picking corn and pitching it into the street to deliberately tempt the ducks into traffic. We implore the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce to please consider less lethal decorations.

Local snowmobile club forming

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

Blazing a new trail for snowmobilers has begun by members of the newly-formed Charlevoix Snowmobile Club and other volunteers.

The trail head is on U.S. 31, just past the old railroad spur, near the city dump. The trail is planned to be 13 miles long and 16 feet wide and will hook up with the Jordan Valley trail out of East Jordan. It has been approved by the Department of Natural Resources.

Before sleds can rip through a winter wonderland, much work is needed to clear the way before winter.

The club is open for memberships and encourages participation in clearing the trail so it will be ready for this winter, said Patti Christ, club secretary.

"We'll be working on the trail every Saturday," she said. "We're going to be having fund-raisers, too."

Way Transportation and Waste Management are donating the use of equipment to help clear the trail, but funds are needed for lumber to build gates, bridges and signs. Lighting will be installed at the trail head.

The snowmobile trail and club is supported by the chamber of commerce. Restaurants, motels and gas stations are some of the businesses that will benefit by bringing snowmobiling into Charlevoix, said Jacqueline Merta, chamber executive director.

The club meets on Mondays at city hall. People may call Patti Christ at 547-6601 for more information.

Local graduate first to receive soccer funds

A 1996 graduate of Charlevoix High School has been selected to receive the first area scholarship designated especially for soccer players.

Theresa Taylor Johnson, a freshman at Olivet College, was chosen as the Alberto Moreno Memorial Scholar and awarded a $250 grant for the 1996-97 academic year.

Theresa, who was captain of her soccer team, plans to study political science. She is the daughter of Judy and Dougherty Johnson.

The Alberto Moreno Memorial Scholarship Fund, part of the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, was established earlier this year by local descendants of the immigrant who — although poor — instilled a love of learning in his children.

The scholarship honors Moreno and seeks to encourage students who share his devotion to learning.

Each year, the Moreno Scholarship will be awarded to a young female graduate of Charlevoix High School who has lettered at least one year in soccer and plans to attend a liberal arts college.

60 years of marriage

Mr. and Mrs. Rex F. Supernaw, of Charlevoix, observed their 60th wedding anniversary at an open house given by their family in Romeo, Mich.

Rex Supernaw and the former Irene Martin were married at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Charlevoix, on Aug. 25, 1936. Their attendants were his brother and sister, Ruel "Charlie" Supernaw, of Rochester, and the late Mrs. Ralph (Renabelle) Shapton.

The couple first made their home in Franklin, Mass., and in 1946 moved to Rochester, where they lived until 1973, when they returned to Charlevoix to live.

Mr. Supernaw was born in Atwood, moved to Charlevoix as a child and graduated from Charlevoix High School. He graduated from Michigan Technological University in 1934 as a chemical engineer, and was employed at National Twist Drill & Tool Co. in Rochester from 1934 until he retired in 1971.

Mrs. Supernaw also attended Charlevoix High School. During the years they lived in Rochester, she was a volunteer at St. Andrew Catholic School. Both were members of St. Andrew Church in Rochester and are members of St. Mary's Church here.

Mr. and Mrs. Rex F. Supernaw

The couple have two daughters, Marie Johnson of Romeo, Mich., and Martha Meyer-Raffin of Macomb Township, Mich.; three grandchildren, Michael Voccia of Rochester, and Jim and Kara Meyer of Macomb Township; and one great-grandchild, Carrissa Michael of Rochester.

Charlevoix organist-composer featured in concert Sunday

Elizabeth Humphrey, organist-composer will present a concert, 4 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 4, as the second program in a series of concerts to be presented at the First Congregational United Church of Christ of Charlevoix.

Humphrey has served as organist at the Charlevoix church for more than 18 years. She is also an accomplished singer.

After college Humphrey won a fellowship to the Juilliard Graduate School of Music in New York, where she studied voice with Mdrne. Schoen-Rene and Queena Mario, as well as composition with the well-known composer, Vittorio Giannini, who encouraged her to write.

While at Juilliard, she was honored with a close second in the prestigious Naumberg award.

Fred Patton, music director at Bay View, hired Humphrey as soprano soloist and she sang there for five years.

Following Bay View she toured as soloist for community concerts, also appearing with major symphonies, including the Chicago under Arthur Rodzinski, Cleveland, Detroit, and Indianapolis, as well as major Bach festivals and numerous oratorio appearances across the country.

Humphrey's program will include some popular classics and contemporary works, as well as two of her own compositions.

There will be a "Theatre Organ Sing-Along" (sorry, no bouncing balls.)

A reception honoring Humphrey will follow the concert, and the public is cordially invited.

The next concert in the series will be Mozart's "Requiem" to be performed 4 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 3, at the church with various Charlevoix area chorale orchestra and soloists.

Crop walk another step closer

This year marks the 50th year of CROP Walk and the 13th year in which Charlevoix County has participated. Saturday, Oct. 5, walkers will once again take part.

Walkers in Boyne City, Charlevoix, and East Jordan will meet at designated areas in their community and "take a hike" to the Ironton Congregational Church, a six-mile trek for each group.

In Charlevoix, the designated meeting spot is the high school parking lot, where brief remarks will be made concerning safety and a prayer offered. At Ironton the walkers will be served hot dogs and soft drinks before being driven back to town.

It is hoped to better the $13,540 earned last year by 134 walkers in the county.

Proceeds will go to help Church World Service/Christian Rural Overseas Project, helping to fight hunger here and abroad. One-quarter of the money is returned to three local food pantries. Last year Charlevoix received $1,129.94.

"We walk because they walk," the CROP Walk motto, refers to people in developing countries who must walk daily for clean water and work in the fields. In keeping with that motto, the only wheels permitted for the event are necessary ones such as wagons for children, strollers and wheelchairs.

If you wish to join the walk or pledge a walker, call Mary Helen Riggle at 547-9515 or Kay Smith at 547-2920.

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Bruce Hamilton
Community Church of God

I'm getting ready to perform a wedding in a couple of weeks. Even though the ceremony will take place up in Alanson, the bride and groom are both from my church family. Tari Schlappi and Guillermo Herrera are the blessed couple.

If you took a good look at the groom's last name, you might get a hint as to why this wedding is something to write about. It is going to be bilingual. I'm looking forward to it, too because I happen to speak just enough Spanish to share in the fun.

In Spanish, the word for wedding is "casamiento." That roughly translates to "a joining of houses." It kind of fits when you think about it. A bride and a groom each bring unique traditions to their marriage and by God's grace they mold them into one.

In English, we speak of our "spouses;" the word is quite similar in Spanish, "esposa." But if you know me, you know I look for preaching possibilities in everything and when I see "esposa," I also see "the one I espouse or believe in."

It never ceases to amaze me how God reaches out across cultures and across languages to convey His message of love. In English, we say "let's pray." In Spanish, it is "vamos a orar" or "we are going to speak with God." In Spanish, it is called a "bendiga" or "gift from above." You and I know it as a blessing.

When I stand before Tari and Bill's families, I hope to convey the amor de Dios (love of God) in a fashion that everyone will sense and understand. When the last of the prometias (vows) are done, I hope all will sense not just the Lord's presence but also His paz (peace).

My happy couple was surprised to discover that their pastor spoke Spanish. God wasn't. God knew the day would come when we would all come together to celebrate their love, and he made the arrangements. I am sharing all this with you as a living reminder that God is very much in charge, and He wants to use you as well in ways that you might never have considered to share His love.

And when God does arrange things for you to share His grave with someone, it will be in a situation that you too will have everything you need to do the job.

You may think the time will never come when you will have an opportunity to share the Lord's love, but you will. When it happens, you will discover there is no more exciting or alive moment in life than the one in which the Lord has used you to pass on a divine blessing.

I hope you'll remember Tari and Bill on their upcoming wedding day. I hope that you will be praying, too, for the day you get to use a talent that you had forgotten about or didn't realize you had in sharing God's love with someone who crosses your path. You watch. You wait. You'll see. It will happen if you are available! Dios te bendiaga! (God bless you!)

Differences between school board members, voters discussed

Campbell said the struggle is between what students need and what the community wants.

Board member, Joan Buday, said it would be "fiscally irresponsible" for the board to go to voters with a request for a new middle school while a new high school is believed to be the best move.

Listening to what the people want and getting a building program off the ground is one way board member, Jerry Owens, said will get the community behind supporting expansion and renovations.

He said the board should consider swinging its thinking.

"It's not up to me to say let's build a new middle school because that's what will pass," said board member, Sulane Hamilton, noting that a new high school is best for students.

The board could present a new bond proposal to voters in three months if it is changed by 20 percent or more in costs. However, the board has yet to decide on how long, or which type of proposal, should go before the voters.

What has been decided is that another option must be presented. Telgenhof said there's a risk in waiting too long to give voters another chance to pass a proposal.

In addition to the failed proposals, the board faces finding funding for several high-dollar maintenance projects.

"We need to start keeping house," Campbell said. "We keep saying the bond will cover that."

Jackson listed immediate needs of the district on a "must do" list. It's estimated that $1 million dollars will be needed to cover the projects, which include: $400,000 to remove asbestos from the high school, $20,000 more to take it out of the middle school, $150,000 for the middle school and $200,000 for the high school roofs, $150,000 to fix the arches on the high school gym, $120,000 to update electrical needs and rewire the high school and about $25,000 to replace steam lines at the 9-12 building.

> "We need to start keeping house. We keep saying the bond will cover that."
> — Mary Lee Campbell, school board president

Without a millage, the district is looking at using its fund balance to pay for the repairs, some of which have federal time limits, such as asbestos removal.

The board reviewed an updated budget with a fund balance as of July 1, 1996, as $2 million. A five-year budget plan shows the district being $380,000 in debt by the end of the 2001 school year, without the maintenance being paid for out of the general fund, according to Judy Boss, district coordinator of business services.

Ordinary operating expenses are expected to take about $300,000 out of the general fund this year. Included in budget estimates is the closure of Big Rock Point nuclear power plant and the loss of the students from those families.

The million-dollar maintenance needs identified by Jackson add to a surplus of expenses, leaving the district in a projected debt of $1.4 million by 2001.

Options will be discussed at the school board's next meeting, 7:30 p.m. Monday, Oct. 7, in the high school.

"Maybe this was the first step in a process," Campbell said of the election. "We have to look at it as a first step."

Charlevoix man participated in The Battle of the Bulge

"Every road was vehicle after vehicle — bumper to bumper," he said.

The company stayed until the bulge was cleaned up. The war shifted as a result of the allies victory there, and Ochs and his fellow fighters were transferred to Germany and later to Czechoslovakia and Austria.

One of the jobs of the company was to evacuate people to secure the area. This included running families out of their homes so they could be used by Americans.

"That's wartime," Ochs said. "You have no rights if you're on the opposite side."

As Ochs recounts his years in the Army, he mostly passes by the tragedies. He recalls the guys, the foreigners he met and the famous sites he visited and photographed at the end of the war. And as the former soldiers gather this week, they will focus on fun and the stories that are more easily told.

"I'm not a hero," Ochs said. "You're there and you're doing your job."

> "I'm not a hero. You're there and you're doing your job."
> — James Ochs, WW II veteran

Men from his era understand that reasoning better than most. However, generations since can think differently of a man who survived the battles, saw the guy sitting next to him hit with shrapnel during dinner and came home to marry and work as a professional.

Although decades have passed between Ochs experiences in the war, he continues to remember. He treasures the worn scrapbook that has his dog tags taped on the inside cover. The tags hung around his neck for more than three years. He is preparing to take his weathered photo album to the reunion. Handwritten names identify many of the men in green fatigues. Some of the photos were developed by Ochs in his crude darkroom, one in which is held a light up to the exposed film to project prints onto film paper.

"It's part of your life," he said of the books. "Everything in them has meaning."

After coming home at the beginning of 1946, Ochs used the G.I. Bill to pay for the rest of his college. He graduated from Michigan State University in 1948 with a bachelor's degree in business administration. He had years of experience as clerk in the company's message center.

In 1950 he married his wife, Marion. She, too, was home after serving in the U.S. Navy during the war.

Ochs came home on a ship after the war. It's much different than the ferry he and his friends will take to Mackinac Island this week.

The closest they will get to World War II is recounting their experiences. However, much conversation will be spent catching up on the current lives of those who come together decades later.

There will be no uniforms, no rank and no guns.

Local Eastern Star group holds membership meeting

Worthy Matron Rosalyn Goldstick presided at the Sept. 19 meeting of the Charlevoix Chapter #72, Order of the Eastern Star.

The charter was draped in memory of Robert Emrey, who died Sept. 8. A resolution of respects was read by Ann Hufford, and a copy will be sent to the family, with sympathy from the chapter. Communications were read and bills approved for payment. The secretary read the names of those who have not paid their dues for three years, and it is hoped that all will pay promptly to prevent suspension according to state by-laws. All members are urged to pay the 1996-97 dues as soon as possible. A report was given by Ann Hufford and Sara Sievertson on serving 24 members of the Masonic Lodge at a dinner in September. Patty Christ and Carla Spencer volunteered to serve the Masonic dinner in October.

Associate matron, Dorothea Kelley, reported for the Sunshine Committee that chapter members sent 43 cards and made 21 calls this month to the ill and shut-ins. Information was read regarding the Grand Chapter "Humanitarian" Session to be held in Saginaw on Oct. 8-10. Local delegates to attend the session will include Rosalyn Goldstick, Thomas Carey, Dorothea Kelley, Robert Kelley, Esther Carey, Sarah Sievertsen, Ann Hufford, Walter Hufford, Janada Chingwa, Hazel Rehkopf and Mary Lee.

It was voted to contribute $100 each to the Eastern Star Villa, to the Relief Fund, and to the Educational Fund. Worthy Matron Goldstick presented certificates of appreciation to Robert Kelley, Walter Hufford and Thomas Carey for their cooking expertise at the recent pig roast at Ferry beach. All others were complimented on the foods they provided for the dinner.

All September birthdays were acknowledged. A card was presented to Alice Bellinger with an original poem she had written, in honor of the 65th wedding anniversary of Alice & Charles Bellinger. The card was signed by all present. Alice recently received a pin for 71 years of service to Eastern Star, and Charles received a pin for 60 years service to the Masons. As a closing melody, Alice played an organ number "Ebbtide."

The next meeting is Wednesday, Oct. 16. A pot-luck dinner will be held at 6:30 p.m. with a business meeting following at 7:30 p.m.

Businesses move into common site

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

Two Charlevoix businesses will celebrate their new location with an open house from 5-7 p.m. Friday, Oct. 4.

Performance Engineering and ImageCrafters, Inc., recently moved into a renovated building at 406 Petoskey Ave. The building was originally constructed around 1940 as the Bar-B-Q Restaurant. Before becoming new office space, it was home to a variety of businesses, including House of Jewels, Gordon's Port and a farm market.

Jim Malewitz, president and founder of Performance Engineering, bought the building in January. The company is a civil engineering firm that works on such projects as streets, roads and sewers. It is also working on site plans for Glen's Market and on the Mercer Street renovation.

Dianna Phillips is the president of ImageCrafters, Inc., a company that supplies imprinted items, ranging from invitations and greeting cards to custom printing on golf balls and coffee mugs. The company also designs logos, provides corporate incentives and puts together presentations for other companies.

Phillips had been operating her business out of her home before moving into the building. The new location is closer to town and is a more professional environment, she said.

"We're into growth and needed the space for equipment and staff," Phillips said. The company clients are local and global.

Malewitz said the 1,500 square-foot space is working out well and that there is room for expansion.

Retail business picks up as parents outfit students

Back-to-school shoppers were more in a buying mood for clothes, computers and other electronic equipment.

For August, apparel retailers buttoned up their best year-to-year performance since February and computer/electronics retailers logged on to their best month of the year, according to the Michigan Retail Index, a joint project of the Michigan Retailers Association and the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago.

Meanwhile, the state's entire retail industry recorded stronger year-to-year sales in August. Fifty-five percent experienced increased sales and 30 percent saw sales decline, compared to 54-31 percent in July and 50-36 percent in June.

The index showed that 52 percent of Michigan's apparel retailers recorded better sales compared to August 1995. It was their best performance since February, when 60 percent reported increased sales.

For most of 1996, only 30 to 40 percent of apparel retailers have been registering year-to-year sales gains.

"Nationally and across the state, apparel sales have started to show new life after many months of lackluster sales," said Larry Meyer, CEO of the Michigan Retailers Association and former director of the Michigan Department of Commerce.

"We're looking forward to this positive trend continuing into and through the holiday season."

Fifty-seven (57) percent of computer and electronics retailers reported increased year-to-year sales during August. That number has never been higher than 50 percent all year and sank as low as 10 percent in March.

Northern Michigan must package tourism better to compete

Northern Michigan must improve the packaging of area travel destinations if the region hopes to compete for tourism dollars in the 21st century.

Public and private experts repeated that warning often during the second annual Northern Lower Michigan Legislators' Conference on Tourism. The September event at Crystal Mountain Resort in Thompsonville gave state legislators and job providers an opportunity to share concerns and devise a blueprint for the future.

"Communication and cooperation are the keys of any successful tourism strategy," said Rep. Beverly A. Bodem, R-Alpena, chair of the House Tourism and Recreation Committee. "Northern Michigan's travel industry has a tremendous reputation, but it faces enormous challenges in the next few years. "Although we have desirable destinations, visitors are being lured elsewhere by our competitors. We're working together to reverse that trend."

Michigan Travel Bureau Director Tom Altemus echoed Bodem's sentiments during a conference seminar on packaging northern Michigan.

"Michigan grew 6 percent last year, but others are performing faster and better than we are," Altemus said. "There is five times as much product as there was 10 years ago, and Michigan is losing market share."

Today's touring customers take shorter vacations and plan them about 21 days in advance. Thus, they seek more diversity and the convenience of one-stop shopping.

If northern Michigan properly packaged its destinations, Altemus said both goals can be reached. But he believes tour operators and others are needed to put these products into the sales pipeline.

"Packaging can go across entire regions," he said. "We have to think across our borders."

That's why industry leaders at the state and local level are using the Internet and other technology to push popular vacation activities like golfing, snowmobiling and diving.

Ken Ferrere, director of data networking for AT&T Michigan, said there are 9.5 million people nationwide with access to the Internet and half of them came online during the last year. Although this is a small amount of the total population, most are in the 25-45 age bracket with lots of disposable income.

Charlevoix grad top college runner

Daniel Keehn, a 1996 graduate of Charlevoix High School, has found his place as a top runner for Alpena Community College.

"It is good to have someone like Dan here from a solid program like Charlevoix has," said cross country coach, Richard Lessard. "He has good skills and knowledge of the game. Once he gains more experience at this level, I'm confident he will do very well."

At a recent meet at Saginaw Valley State University, Dan improved his time by 51 seconds over the four-mile course.

He is presently nursing a sore knee, but so far, he has been a solid performer for the "Lumberjack" harriers, Lessard said.

While at Charlevoix, Dan lettered in cross country, track and basketball.

Keehn is majoring in architecture at Alpena Community College.

Rayder football team falls to Elks

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Elk Rapids got a slow start, but when momentum took hold, they blew by the Rayders Friday during a game at Kipke Field.

Charlevoix lost 21-6.

"We just didn't play our best game," said Rayder head coach, Roger Gowell. "We just couldn't get anything going on offense."

The Rayders opened the game with a touchdown in the first quarter. The lead was accumulated by a 12-play, 80-yard drive downfield. David Manker came into the end zone on a five-yard run, said Todd Klinger, Rayder assistant coach. Included in the drive was a 40-yard run by Manker.

Charlevoix went into halftime with a 6-0 lead. But the second half was dominated by Elk Rapids.

"They came out and scored and we didn't," Gowell said.

With about seven minutes left in the third quarter, the visitor began its charge downfield, getting the first touchdown on a two-yard run. The team's second touchdown came with about 10 minutes left in the game. The final accumulation of points involved a seven-yard run by the Elks, with about five minutes remaining for play.

Gowell said this is a game the Rayders would have liked to have won. But the team sported too many mistakes, too many turnovers.

"We felt the game was within our reach, and we just didn't get there," he said.

Manker was the Rayders' leading rusher, having traveled 76 yards on 12 carries during the game, Klinger said. Roger Pittman racked up 39 yards on six carries while Chris Dominic ran for 38 yards on 13 carries.

T. J. Carey completed six of 17 passes for a total of 65 yards.

In receiving, Manker led the team with three catches for 41 yards. Steve Spiegl had one catch for 11 yards and Steven Felter caught a 12-yard pass.

For the defensive line, Bob Anzell and Josh Skeel each had 15 tackles. Pittman and Spiegl each made one interception.

With Friday's loss behind them, the Rayders practice this week with a 2-2 record for the season. They are 1-1 in conference play.

Friday, Oct. 4, the Rayders face off with the East Jordan Red Devils at 7:30 p.m. at Kipke Field.

Gowell said the team is going to have to minimize its mistakes if it expects to win the conference match. This week is being spent preparing the offense and defense to offset East Jordan strategies.

"We've always said that we can't look past anyone," Gowell said. "We taking them one game at a time."

Norwood family related to creator of gasoline engine

By Nancy Ritsema
Courier columnist

Nestled in the trees along the Lake Michigan Shore near the northern Michigan community of Norwood is the cottage of retirees Harold and Beth Bates. Harold and Beth built their lakeshore cottage in 1970 and have considered this area their permanent home ever since.

Harold Bates at his home near Norwood beside an original Bull Dog engine his father, M.F. Bates, designed and built in 1902.

A unique nugget of Michigan history is uncovered in talking with the couple, which is all the more significant in this 1996 centennial year of the automobile. One hundred years ago Harold's father, Madison Bates, was well-known among automobile pioneers Henry Ford, the Olds and the Dodges.

Madison F. Bates designed and built the first patented gasoline powered engine. He traded his invention for 150 shares in Pleney F. Olds and Son, becoming the first person outside of the Olds family to acquire company stock.

Madison and Pleney's son, Ransom E. Olds, applied for a patent for the gas engine in August of 1895 and were awarded the historic patent August 11, 1896. Most folks said Bates should be credited in the joint patent application as the engine's designer, while R.E. Olds deserved credit for authorizing the Olds Company to move into the gasoline engine field.

The first use made of the gas engine by the Olds family was to power their yachts on the Grand River in Lansing. At that time there was a constant demand for improved marine engines.

"In the 1890's the early inventors were all in competition to come up with horseless carriages and were always sneaking around corners to steal each others ideas," Harold Bates said. "My dad kept urging Olds to attach the gasoline engine to a buggy, and the rest is history."

Ransom E. Olds received a patent for a gasoline-powered automobile in 1897, which was to be the forerunner of his curved-dash Oldsmobile.

The young Madison Bates is described as a blacksmith's son, born in Calhoun County, Mich. in 1869. He was granted his first patent in 1887, at the age of 18, for a log "land-roller." He and his father made and sold several hundred of the rollers.

Full of inventive ideas, Madison moved to Lansing to work for the Olds Motor Works in 1893. He quickly became a machinist and an expert draftsman, making and remaking patterns and drawings, especially of gasoline engines to replace the unwieldy and often dangerous steam engines.

In 1899 Madison and another Olds employee, James Edmonds, left the Olds Motor Works and organized the Bates and Edmonds Motor Company. Edmonds was the bookkeeper and Bates the inventor-designer. Their company and their products were influential contributors to the development of gasoline-powered cars, trucks and tractors.

In 1902 they built the well-known Bull Dog stationary engine. More than 40,000 of the engines were shipped all over the world.

Bates designed and built the Batesmobile with the slogan "Buy a Bates and Keep Your Dates" from 1903 to 1905. It sold for $2,000. Like many of the early car designs it proved unsuccessful as an affordable, practical automobile.

> "Once he got the engine to run, the first problem to be solved was to figure out how to control it."
> — Harold Bates

The Bates tractor, painted orange with black lettering, was marketed successfully for several years beginning in 1911. Bates and Edmonds Motor Company also manufactured and sold trucks, auto and truck replacement parts and gun barrels for American troops during World War I.

"My dad was a successful businessman by then and he refused to take any money for gun barrels his shop made," Harold said. "He donated them to the war effort."

Madison Bates died from cancer in 1926 at the age of 57. At that time R.E. Olds bought out Edmonds' share in the Bates and Edmonds Motor Company. Fred Wohlert, Jr., shop foreman for the Bates company, and Madison's son, Ralph, ran the business for the next few years, calling themselves the Bates and Wohlert Company. In 1933 Wohlert became sole stockholder.

Today, the Wohlert Corporation in Lansing, named after Fred Wohlert, Jr., has annual sales of $48 million, and its engine components are found in foreign and American cars, trucks and tractors.

"As a boy I never heard my dad swear or saw him take a drink," Harold Bates, recalled of his pioneer, inventor father. "He was a very religious man."

"Dad lost his arm in a steam engine accident while employed at the Olds Works. The steam engine blew up and the force of the blast threw my dad against a brick wall. His arm eventually had to be amputated. He could still get dressed faster than any one else in the family," Harold laughed.

"Dad took courses from the Scranton Night School and studied books as a young man until he knew more about running a business and until he became a machine expert.

"He worked on building his historic gasoline engine after work hours at the Olds Works and on his own time. The engine had a hot-wire ignition. P.F. Olds thought Dad was onto something good with his design, but his son Ransom told him he was wasting his time.

"After Dad built the engine, no one really thought it would run. Dad got a real kick out of watching the disbelief on everyone's faces when he finally got the engine started," Harold continued.

"Once he got the engine to run, the first problem to be solved was to figure out how to control it. It started jumping and going in circles and Dad couldn't get it stopped."

Charlevoix hospital receives $50,000 grant

A grant application for $50,000 for Charlevoix Area Hospital has been approved by the Health Care Financing Administration.

This is the third year for the Rural Hospital Transition Grant project for the hospital. The funds will be used to expand the in-home respite programs of the Charlevoix and Antrim counties' commission on aging.

In addition, $7,500 has been earmarked to provide matching funds to establish an adult day care center in East Jordan under the Brookdale Foundation grant, which has been awarded to Charlevoix Area Hospital and The Living Room, in Petoskey.

"These programs are the culmination of two years of study by hospitals, health care organizations, and health departments in 21 counties to determine health status and needs," said Richard Krueger, hospital president. "Their findings were handed over to task force groups in each county to determine priorities. Both Antrim and Charlevoix Counties said elder care and health needs were a priority in their areas. We are happy that this grant will allow us to help them as they endeavor to improve services."

Apples and more

Annual festival welcomes fall to town

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

Coming out of the brisk, cold air into the small, warm kitchen at Friske Orchards gives one's senses pleasurable feelings. The comforting warmth blends with the delicious aroma of apple pies and apple dumplings, hot from the oven.

Without missing a beat as she arranges baked goods on the wooden tables, Judy Kehr, daughter of Richard and Olga Friske, talks about harvest time and the upcoming Charlevoix Applefest.

"We'll have 10 varieties of apples at the festival," she said. "Usually we have 12, but everything is late this year."

Not only is harvesting late, but production is down. A hard winter and freeze damage are a couple of reasons, but last year was a bumper crop and apples tend to cycle, Kehr said. If production is high one year, it is generally down the next.

But the later-than-usual harvest and lower production won't affect the number of bushels of apples Friske Orchards will take to East Park this weekend. About 300 to 400 bushels of varieties such as Northern Spy, Ida Red, Delicious, Cortland, and the ever-popular McIntosh will be offered to the public.

Friske Orchards have been part of Applefest for 15 of the festival's 17 years. The orchards are a family operation and everyone works on the harvest, the farm market and the festival.

Richard and Olga Friske started the orchards in 1962. About 50,000 bushels of apples are produced each year on their 125 acres. Their son, Richard, Jr., runs the orchards with his wife while Richard, Sr., still tends to the trees. Olga bakes. Her specialty is apple butter. The orchards also benefit from the help of other family members, including a third and younger generation.

Young Heidi Friske takes on a good deal of responsibility with the fresh energy of a 9-year-old. She helps with the farm market, selling items and running the Friske giant, apple-shaped balloon the family sets up downtown for children to play in.

Friske and other area orchards will haul crates of apples and boxes of jams, apple butter, honey, cider, dried cherries and other goodies to East Park where booths will line the park.

The Apple Festival comes at a busy harvest time, said Richard Friske, Jr., but they wouldn't miss it for the world.

Professional group buys abandoned Clark gas station

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

A corner of U.S. 31 and M-66 has grown quiet. The Clark gas station unexpectedly closed the first week of September. Pumps were pulled and lines strewn across the entrances.

According to Krista Shepard, spokesperson for Clark's main office in St. Louis, Mo., the store has been sold to a group known as the Charlevoix Professional Center, L.C.C.

"We sold it to someone in the local community," Shepard said, noting that adjoining property was also purchased by the group.

The owner of Clark's former land is Bob Kern, a local realtor. The land is bordered by vacant lots, all of which are owned by CB North, according to city records. The bank has not been approached about selling its property to the local group, according to Brownie Flanders, CB North president. The bank owns about 3.5 miles that borders the property.

City officials, like many people in town, have been wondering why the Clark station closed up so quickly and quietly.

According to Shepard, Clark does not plan to open a new station in town. The former site has been open since the 1960s. She did not say why the station closed, just that it was a good business decision that would benefit the company and the buyer.

Gerry Harsch, Charlevoix city planner, said the lot on which the station is located is about one acre and is shaped in an odd triangle.

"It's pretty unusual that someone gives up a station site," he said.

There have been no requests for zoning explanations or parking requirements presented to the city for the land. City notification is not required when a business leaves town, said Linda Weller, administrative assistant for the city manager.

"The only time you need city approval when closing a business is if you have a going-out-of-business sale," she said.

According to the Charlevoix County Register of Deeds office, Charlevoix Professional Center has purchased two lots, the one on which the gas station is located and a small triangular piece that runs along U.S. 31.

Development plans for the land are not being released.

Homecoming slate full of school fun

Charlevoix High School's homecoming festivities are filling this week with a flurry of activities.

Spirit Week is organized by the cheerleaders. Students come to school dressed in clothes patterned after different themes each day. Monday was pajama day, Tuesday was hat day, today is jeans overalls day, Thursday is class colors day, and Friday is maroon and white day.

Float construction by grades nine through 12 takes place throughout the week, and judges will evaluate the floats between 4:30 and 5:30 p.m. Friday.

The street parade begins at the middle school at 6 p.m. Friday, and travels downtown. Entrants are asked to assemble at 5:30 p.m.

The middle school homecoming pep assembly is at 2 p.m. Thursday.

The high school homecoming pep assembly is at 1 p.m. Friday.

The varsity football game begins at 7:30 p.m. on Friday at Kipke Field. The Rayders go up against the Boyne City Ramblers. The homecoming court will be presented at half time and the king and queen will be crowned. Spirit Week winners will also be announced.

A bonfire and pizza party follow the game next to the field. This event is sponsored by Little Caesar's Pizza, Oleson's and Charlevoix Sports Boosters. The cost is $1 per person, and the event is open to parents and community members.

The week wraps up with the homecoming dance organized and sponsored by the junior class from 8 p.m. to midnight Saturday at the elementary school.

Foundation better able to meet local needs

Charlevoix County's education, environment, civic, cultural, and human service programs can look forward to some extra support in the next year.

The Frey Foundation has awarded a grant of $115,000 to the Charlevoix County Community Foundation to help underwrite operations, build a bigger endowment, and increase the local organization's charitable grant making.

This is the fifth consecutive year that Frey has extended support to the community foundation, bringing the total of its financial assistance to $500,000.

"We're extremely pleased that the Frey Foundation has continued its generous support," said Mike Stowe, president of the local foundation.

"Their funding has been critical in getting us off to a great start and allowing us to have an immediate impact on the communities we serve," he added.

Events in brief

Local woman injured in three-car crash

A three-car accident at 11:15 a.m. Wednesday sent one Charlevoix woman to the hospital.

Laura Dhaseleer was treated and released from Charlevoix Area Hospital after the car she was driving was rear-ended, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

Charlevoix police chief, Dennis Halverson, said Dhaseleer was heading north when she stopped on Bridge Street, waiting to turn left onto Wood Street. Jerry Owens, also of Charlevoix, slowed as he approached Dhaseleer's vehicle when he was hit from behind by Darren Farmer, 29, of Charlevoix.

Farmer was determined to be at fault in the accident, Halverson said. He was ticketed for failure to stop.

Power lines down on Petoskey Avenue

Traffic was stopped on Petoskey Avenue for about an hour, beginning at about 3 p.m. Thursday, when an unknown vehicle pulled electrical wires down on the road.

City police chief, Dennis Halverson, said he isn't sure how the wires were brought down, but it's possible that a trailer pulling a boat or large item snagged the lines in front of Frank Zednicek, at 536 Petoskey Ave., near the intersection of Petoskey and Fairway Drive.

The fire department was called out to reroute traffic until the pole was repaired.

Halverson said it was fortunate that traffic stopped before anyone drove over the live lines.

Farm bureau seeks help fighting gas charges

The Charlevoix County Farm Bureau members took action on a issue important to area farmers and landowners at their county annual meeting, held Sept. 28, at Whiting Park.

Over the past few years, individuals that have leased their oil mineral rights have complained that, as a group, they are losing millions of dollars in royalties as a result of overreaching oil and gas operators that have withheld post production costs from royalty payments. Not all private mineral owners agreed to these deductions.

The Charlevoix County Farm Bureau Policy Development Committee has been working with area land owners to find some relief from this situation. In a motion, adopted unanimously by the 100-plus farmers present Saturday, the group is asking for intervention from the attorney general to address the situation.

School conferences set

Parent-teacher conferences will be held at the high school from 1-3 p.m. and 5:30-8:30 p.m. Monday, Nov. 11. An arena-style parent-teacher conference will allow parents to visit without an appointment. Parents will arrive at the high school, pick up their students' report cards in the trophy case hallway and then enter the gym to see the teacher of their choice.

The conferences will only last about five- to seven-minutes each. Coffee and refreshments will be available. Call the high school office at 547-3222 for more information.

Donations sought for school stage

Northwest Academy is holding fund-raisers for a state for the new school on W. Hurlbut Street. A car wash was held Friday. Donations are being sought for the stage. They can include money, props, costumes, pain or lumber.

Donations can be dropped off at the school, 109 W. Hurlbut. Ask for Pascalle Asbury or Ted Fuller.

New license plates coming

New commemorative license plates have been designed for Michigan by Richard J. Watkins of Bay City. The design features a sunrise over the Straits of Mackinac, the Mackinac Bridge and the slogan "Great Lakes Splendor" in hues of blue and orange.

Watkins referred to the bridge as a visual identifier for the state.

The new license plate will go on sale Jan. 2, 1997, for a $5 fee, over and above the annual vehicle registration fee. The Great Lakes Splendor plate will be available in personalized, handicapper and veteran versions.

The city airport is close to taking off into its new management style.

After years of consideration and an opportunity to review two proposed management plans, Charlevoix's airport committee no longer faces choosing between two bidders. The withdrawal of Island Airways' proposal leaves Tom and Sandra Mort as the only management company in the running to lead Charlevoix's airport into the future.

When the parties were vying for the position, each presented detailed reports on their philosophies on running the airport and steps they would take to improve and expand service there. A list of questions were presented to them by city officials.

City manager, Mike Wiesner, said Island Airways never returned the questionnaire, and instead sent the city a letter withdrawing its proposal. The company has managed the airport for the past 12 years.

City mayor, Josh Barnes, said a contract is currently being negotiated with the Morts to run the airport.

Monday, city council passed a new airport ordinance. The ordinance is fashioned after one used by the city of Holland and the airport in Pontiac, according to city attorney, James Young.

"It is designed to properly regulate the airport, while providing flexibility to the city council and manager in negotiating contracts with persons who have businesses at the airport," Young said in a memo to the city manager.

Councilmember Gabe Campbell said the ordinance is similar to the one previously used by Charlevoix. The ordinance will be posted for public inspection and will be discussed at a public hearing 7 p.m. Monday, Nov. 4, at city hall.

According to Barnes, there are two steps in the management change. The first will involve a cooperative effort between the Morts and Island Airways for about four months, from Jan. 1 to April 1, 1997.

"The whole idea is to give them a start together," Barnes said.

There are a number of improvements needed at the airport. And dis-

School board continues to contemplate bond defeat

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

Still licking its wounds from the bond proposals' defeat, the school board bantered about the possible reasons that voters said no, and future options at its meeting Monday.

A large number of voters showed up at the polls on Sept. 23 and turned down an $18 million request for a new high school and renovations to two other school buildings, and a request for an auditorium for more than $3 million.

"Maybe instead of trying for a grand slam or a home run, we should try for a single."
— Dennis VanGuilder, middle school principal

One reason for the defeat was because the board had not revealed the land site for the new high school, said board member Joan Buday.

Middle school principal Dennis VanGuilder agreed.

"We had told people we would let them know prior to the election, and we didn't keep that promise," he said.

Member Allen Telgenhof said the board didn't listen to people. The people agreed that the district needed a new middle school, but then the board proposed a new high school in addition to that.

"Let's not keep pushing things on people when they've said what they'll support," Telgenhof said.

The board generally agreed to a two-pronged approach for future action. Conduct a survey of voters to find out why they voted as they did, and to find out what they would support.

Telgenhof said he was tired of asking people what they wanted the board to do and then not following through.

"I won't support any future survey until the board promises to follow what people want," he said.

Member Sulane Hamilton said she still believes that what was on the ballot was the best for the district, and that it was a well-reasoned proposal.

But VanGuilder said the proposals asked for too much from the people.

"Maybe instead of trying for a grand slam or a home run, we should try for a single," he said. "We need a positive in this district bad."

The school board also discussed asbestos removal from the high school and the middle school, electrical rewiring at the high school, and roof repairs at the high school and middle school. These are some of the expenses the board still has not decided how to cover.

The recent bond proposal defeat means that the board must find another way to fund the expenses, estimated at $830,000.

Paying for the repairs and asbestos removal is more important than a new building, said board president Mary Lee Campbell. Perhaps the board should have a bond issue just for these expenses, she said.

In other action the board:

— Approved a resolution that the district library is no longer part of the school system, but is its own entity. Mary Ann Chew was appointed to serve on the district library

Charlevoix elementary school hosts family affair

Garnet and Maggie Zimmerman traveled all the way from Big Rapids Friday to spend the day in school with their granddaughter. They left home early that morning and pulled into the elementary school about 11 a.m. to have lunch with little Lori Zimmerman.

The second-grader must have felt among Charlevoix's most important people as her grandparents took the time to maintain what has become a family tradition.

There are few traditions as important as those that invest time in family. We commend the effort and commitment of the elementary school staff for pulling together to create a day that welcomes another kind of learning.

Time with grandparents — the stories exchanged and memories created — cannot be compared to an hour at the computer or even brainstorming on a group project.

Most of the children attending the school were honored by the presence of family members. Other young people were paired with buddies who gave them special attention during the luncheon. Some school staff ate several lunches as they covered for families who couldn't be at the school.

Charlevoix Elementary School was filled with generations of learners Friday. Golf carts — donned with signs for "Grandparents' Express" — transported visitors from roadside parking down several blocks to the school's front door.

A documented 453 people visited the school. Some ate the school lunch, which was served from both sides of the cafeteria to minimize the waiting that was experienced last year. Other grandparents brought special requests, which included Subway, Taco Bell, McDonalds and hand-packed favorites.

Jane Hand brought her 7-year-old granddaughter Taco Bell. They sat together, talked over the cartoons found on the fast-food cups and enjoyed homemade chocolate chip cookies that were sold as a fund-raiser for the school. Jane has come to grandparents' day for years. The granddaughter who introduced her to the special day is now in high school.

Grandparents' day has been held annually since 1974. We hope that it continues for generations to come. We also hope that employers and family members will make special efforts to enable people to attend the north-side gathering that brings so many smiles to young faces.

Three generations — great-grandmother, Eleanor Marshall, second-grader, Sasha Spencley and her grandmother, Sharlene Spencley dine in the elementary school cafeteria during Grandparents' Day Friday.

Letters to the editor

Fair board lauds community

Editor:

Since becoming the Emmet/Charlevoix County Fair manager in January 1996, an expression of "thanks" is the most pleasant task I've had to accomplish. My heartfelt thanks and appreciation goes out to a team of many players whose time, talent and treasures made our fair a great success in 1996.

The fair has many "players." The fair board, Emmet and Charlevoix County Commissioners, Emmet County office and maintenance personnel, our fair secretary, information office, grandstand, grounds and gate crews, my ever supportive family, department superintendents, 4-H and open class participants, parents, leaders and extension staff, donors of good services, sponsors and buyers of market animals and numerous volunteers combine months and months of work to pull the fair together as a "Showcase of Agriculture" for all to come and enjoy.

The fair board's personal "thanks" goes out to: the City of Petoskey and its ever helpful personnel, Lisa Dines of the Petoskey News-Review, Frank Rose and the Camp Pellston crew, Seeley Printing of Charlevoix, Top Rank Disposal Service, Holiday Inn, Flynn's Trenching, Steve Kircher and Ed Grice of Boyne USA Resorts, John Lamont and LifeLink Ambulance service, Debbie Slocum and her crew for the marvelous goat barn art work, Bert Notestine, Leo Bemben, Ed McCune, Dr. Bill and Tom McCullough, Mike and Mary Keem, Sherwin-Williams Co., Gary High of Hi-Tech Computers, Hinkley Produce, Burnin' Daylight Tack Shop and everyone else who may have donated time and talent to the fair to make it a success.

The fairgrounds is quiet now. The hustle and bustle gone, the plants and flowers finishing a blooming season, the buildings settling in for the winter, but the team of players are already planning for the 1997 fair. Meetings, contracts and work bees are all part of our teamwork effort to make 1997's fair even more exciting for all to enjoy. New team members are always welcomed. Just contact us at 347-1010 to volunteer in any area. See you at the 1997 Fair!

Our congratulations to Bern Cannan and the Industrial Fair committee for an interesting, well-organized event.

Charlevoix Friends of the Pool was pleased to be a part of the Industrial Fair held at the high school on Friday, Oct. 4.

We are especially grateful that the community pool project has received more than $131,000 from Charlevoix industries.

It was a pleasure to be in conversation with representatives of these industries and the many interested students from the different high schools who attended this worthwhile event.

People have offered to pay as much as $100 or more for a copy of Bob Miles' book, "Charlevoix," if they could only get their hands on a copy — but unfortunately it is out of print. Published in 1976 by the Charlevoix Historical Society, the book sold then at $25 a copy. Filled with historic pictures of the area that Miles lovingly collected over many years, it is now a treasured collectors' item.

Another popular Charlevoix book, "Summer Resort Life, Tango Teas and All," was also originally published in 1976. Still in great demand, but out of print until last year, a local bank, CB North, underwrote a revised, new edition. This book focuses primarily on the social life of summer visitors during the 1920s, 30s and 40s. According to the Bridge Street Bookstore, its current popularity "has been incredible and we have shipped copies all over the world."

Now a new book to be treasured, entitled "East Jordan Remembers" has just been published by the Portside Art and Historical Museum Society. It is filled with wonderful old photographs, particularly of the lumbering and railroad era. Of special interest to me were two articles and photographs of the little steamer called the Hum. Charlevoix oldtimers have often told me about the Hum, which carried passengers and freight several times a day between East Jordan and Charlevoix. The Hum advertised proudly, "We stop on signal at all docks along the route." You will now understand how delighted I was when Jack Ewing showed me a photograph taken around the turn of the century of his grandparents seated on the Sequenota dock with their neatly wrapped bundle of laundry. They were waiting for the Hum to pick up their laundry, take it to the Charlevoix laundry, then have it returned to them by boat the following week. Too bad this picture wasn't in the East Jordan book as well.

The Hum was built in 1876 as a steam yacht for Truman H. Newberry, a prominent Detroiter. She was 87-feet-long and 16-feet-wide, powered by a 50-horsepower, compound-condensing steam engine. With her clipper bow, two tall masts, and lots of rigging, but no sails, she was designed only to resemble a sailing yacht.

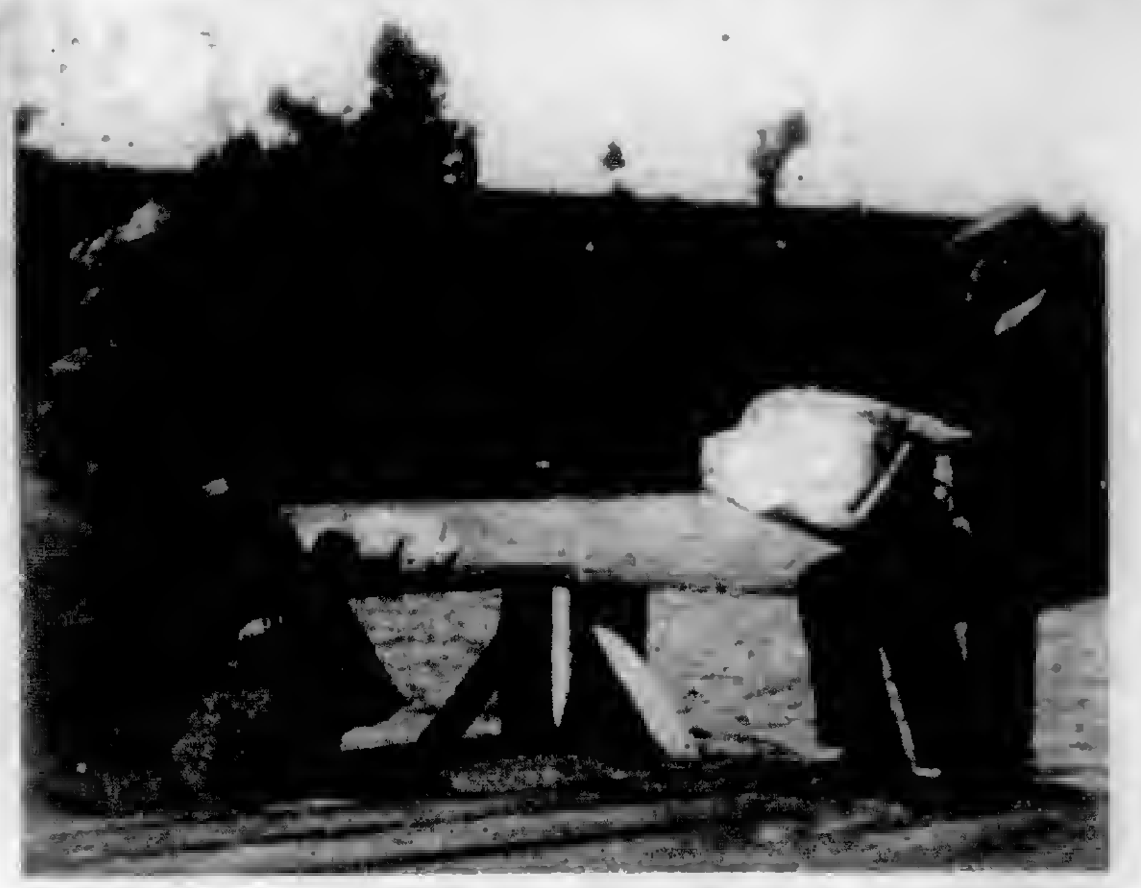
Reading about my legendary friend, and respected fly fisherman, Teddy Kotowich, brought back pleasant memories. He started guiding people down the Jordan River way back in 1928. I'm afraid it was at my suggestion during 1960 that Nate Cummings, then chairman and CEO of Sara Lee Corp. and summer resident in Charlevoix, invited his house guest, general Mark Clark, for a day of trout fishing down the Jordan. One customarily sat on a flat bottom boat, chain dragging, and floated down the swiftly flowing river, casting into likely looking spots for the elusive trout.

Businessman Cummings had no idea what he was in for and took his briefcase with him. Teddy told Nate firmly to forget about his briefcase and to sit down and keep quiet, while he and the general proceeded to have a wonderful time reminiscing all day about their mutual adventures in World War II. Fortunately, Nate forgave me.

Peggy Midener, who is well known as a Michigan artist and lives in our area, writes about her English great-grandfather. He built the Loveday Opera House in East Jordan. Then there are additional nostalgic tales about the hard life of early (Czech) Bohemian settlers, and the positive contribution to the area made by the Germans, Norwegians, Irish, and Polish immigrants, who worked as railroad men, farmers, loggers, storekeepers, dairy farmers, teachers and nurses.

Although you can't get a copy anymore today of Bob Miles' Charlevoix book, you might decide to collect copies of the aforementioned books which will, in time, also become collectors items.

"Summer Resort Life" is now available in the Bridge Street Bookstore and "East Jordan Remembers," which supports the Portside Art and Historical Society, is available in Charlevoix through the FMB Bank near Kmart. We are indeed fortunate that there are thoughtful people around here, who will share their precious stories and recollections with us.



At the turn of the century, this couple waits for the Hum to pick up their laundry from the Sequenota dock.

Agencies connect to improve service

On Friday, Oct. 11, the Charlevoix-Emmet County Human Services Coordinating Body will hold an information summit for human services professionals and the public at large. The coordinating body is made up of area agencies and service providers who provide the bulk of social services programs throughout the two county area.

The summit will be held at the Community Reformed Church in Charlevoix. More than 20 public and nonprofit agencies are expected to share information about the services they provide.

"In an era where the face of human services is ever changing, the need for providers to be aware of available services is very critical," said Jan Mancinelli, who sits on the summit planning committee.

The summit is intended to focus on area providers in order for them to have ample information about services to better inform their clients about community services and to make good referrals. The planning committee is looking to increase attendance over last years' number of 160. There are an estimated 300 staff working in human services agencies who have direct dealings with people every day.

Pat Fralick, another summit committee member said: "Even people who have worked in the community a long time can benefit, because the face of human services keeps changing and new services are always being added."

The Summit will begin at 9 a.m. with concurrent presentations running every half hour. During the morning schedule attendees will be able to participate in six different sessions. The public is invited to attend.

For more information, contact Jan Mancinelli at 347-0067, Pat Fralick at 347-6014 or Gloria Halligan at 547-9947.

Beacons of blessing

If you ever wondered about the power of prayer, there was a very fascinating story in the news last week that should make you stop and think. He was a young businessman from Spain and known to all his acquaintances as a very devout Catholic. His work took him on a trip to Stockholm for a few days. While there, as was his custom on most any trip he took, he planned on going to church for a little personal time of prayer.

On the day he went to pray, he noticed that there was a casket at rest in front of the church. He decided to spend his time in prayer for the one who had died and his family. As he left the church, he signed the book of condolences that was there and noticed that his signature and address was the first and only name listed. He just assumed that they had not held the memorial service yet.

Imagine his surprise when he returned home and found that there were lawyers from Sweden looking for him. You see, the man who had died had no family or relatives whatsoever and in his will he specified that all his money and possessions were to be given to "whoever prays for my soul."

The man was a 73-year-old real estate tycoon and our faithful businessman from Spain was given 35 million dollars by this gentleman he had prayed for.

Prayer is probably the single most underestimated resource God has given us as His children. Yet the more you examine what prayer can do, the more holy power you will find awaiting you. Jesus said a long time ago that if you had enough faith you could tell a mountain to go move into the sea and it would. Most of us struggle because we expect that mountain to get up and move right away. Sometimes the way God moves mountains in our lives is one pebble at a time. It may be slower, but if that's what He has in mind, we need to learn to trust Him.

It shouldn't take too much imagination to think of the possibilities that prayer offers. When you honor God in your life, you might be surprised at the ways He seeks to encourage you. When you place the spiritual well-being of others near the top of your priorities in life, you might be amazed at the blessings that will bring to you. When you search your own heart and seek God's wisdom, never be surprised at the places where His help may come from.

What so fascinated and blessed my heart about the adventure of the Spanish businessman was that he was known as a devout man. All God's people should be known for the faith they hold in their hearts! What's stopping you? Prayer doesn't just change things. It changes people. Prayer brings you holy comfort. Prayer reminds you that you need never feel alone. It may also be the key to open the windows of heaven to blessings you never dreamed would ever take place in your life. When was the last time you had a real heart to heart talk with your heavenly Father?

Beaver Islander companion closer

The Beaver Island Boat Co. is closer to getting a new ferry to travel between Charlevoix and the island.

The new ferry is being built in East Boothbay, Maine, by Washburn and Doughty. The boat will be about 140 feet long and able to transport 300 people, 20 vehicles and 100 tons of freight. This compares to the capability of the Beaver Islander, which can carry 200 people, 10 cars and 42 tons of freight, according to Lynn DeGrow, Beaver Island Boat Co. manager.

The new ferry is expected to cost $3.6 million, 80 percent of which is being funded by the federal government. Another 10 percent is being covered by state grants. The remainder will be provided by the Beaver Island Transportation Authority, which will own the boat.

The boat company has been contracted to build, operate and manage the ferry for the authority.

Delivery date is Sept. 1, 1997.

The new ferry will not replace the Beaver Islander. It will add to the company's capability to connect the island with the mainland.

Open house scheduled

Grey Fox Mount by Dhaseleer Taxidermy & Gallery is hosting an open house party from 6-10 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 12, at 15794 Paddock in Charlevoix.

The public is invited and refreshments will be served.

Grants help with jobs

The Michigan Jobs Commission today announced statewide awards totaling $9,267,046 in School-to-Work grants. Grants were awarded to help statewide School-to-Work Partnerships support national and state school reform and workforce development efforts.

The Northwest Michigan Council of Governments, based in Traverse City and serving Antrim, Benzie, Charlevoix, Emmet, Grand Traverse, Kalkaska, Leelanau, Manistee, Missaukee and Wexford counties, was awarded $273,790.

Grants totaling $808,242 were also issued to the council to help people get off welfare through individual employment plans. The program includes education and allowing workers to keep the first $200 they earn each month, plus 20 percent over that without affecting their benefits.

17th Applefest falling from Charlevoix trees

but we love it," he said. "It's a lot of fun meeting people. We keep expanding from year to year. You won't believe the crowds. The lines are tremendous and people are grabbing up all kinds of things."

The most popular apple at the festival continues to be the McIntosh, said Richard, Jr. But there are many good newer varieties, too. Olga's apple butter is always a favorite, and the best sellers for baked goods are the apple pies and apple dumplings.

This year's Applefest begins at noon on Friday and runs through Sunday. The Friskes will take their booth home late Saturday to honor the family's Sunday day of rest.

In addition to apples, this year's festival will boast bushels of produce, homemade scones and pie, cider and a petting farm.

Bushels and bushels of baskets will be on sale at Applefest this weekend as a variety of orchards bring their fall harvest to town. The festival is a tradition in Charlevoix and accompanies the changing leaves, cool weather and quieter days. Friday is the festival kickoff, with it coming to a close at dusk Sunday. Applefest events scheduled from Friday to Sunday

East Park to be filled with fresh fall harvest

Charlevoix's 17th Annual Apple Festival begins Friday, Oct. 4, and fills East Park with apples, produce and crafts from area orchards, farmers and craftmakers through Sunday, Oct. 6

Applefest runs from noon to dusk Friday, from 9 a.m. to dusk Saturday, and from noon to dusk Sunday.

Music will fill the air as people walk around the park and enjoy the food and craft booths.

A petting farm will be in the park Saturday, and horse-drawn carriage rides will be offered Friday evening and Saturday from 1 p.m. until dusk.

Farm market booths will line the park to sell a variety of apples, including Jonathan, McIntosh, Spartan, Red Rome and Northern Spy.

> The festival draws between 10,000 and 15,000 people each year.
> — Charlevoix chamber

Service clubs and other local organizations also staff booths to sell apple delicacies. Other fall harvest foods available will be pumpkins, squash, apple butter, jam, honey and cider.

The Applefestival Craft Show features high-quality, unique items and special gifts for the holidays.

The musical group, Collecting Consort, will relate historical monologues about various crafts, as it blends classical and folk music into the event.

The Applefest began in 1980 to bring attention to the agricultural community in Charlevoix, Antrim and Emmet counties.

The Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce brought the harvest to the people in response to requests from residents and visitors for information on local produce. The festival draws between 10,000 and 15,000 people each year.

Airport management changing

cussion is needed to determine who will be responsible to pay for each of the steps to be taken.

By summer, Barnes said he hopes to have the new airport management in effect and a revised, improved or replaced terminal built. More hangars and an additional 200 feet of runway are also at the top of the city's priority list.

Mort's ideas as presented in his initial proposal to the city include making Charlevoix's airport one that will draw and service an increased number of private and industrial flights, according to the document submitted to the city. Bay Harbor and other area developments are providing the potential clientele.

Mort has been a pilot for 20 years, has owned and maintained three aircraft for the past five years and has experience as a civil engineer. He envisions the construction of new offices and additional hangars, expansion of the runway, and improved parking, according to his proposal.

If Mort officially receives the city contract to manage the airport, Island Airways will no longer have a management role. However, they could still operate the charter business that is a major lifeline between Beaver Island and the mainland.

Council acts on variety of business

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

City council acted on many issues Monday as it met for a regularly scheduled meeting. They include:

— Approved a lot split for Mary Feindt on land running from 104 Park Avenue back to an alley. The split will allow her to sell the house at the front of the property while retaining the garage she currently uses for her surveying business, Charlevoix Abstract & Engineering Co., near the alley.

Feindt said renting the house has been a problem and the business wants to retain the parking area provided by the garage. The property line was moved slightly to provide the lot on which the house sits space for two parking spaces.

— Gave Whitneys of Charlevoix, 305 Bridge Street, approval to build a second-floor deck for summertime serving. The deck will provide additional seating for about 32 people.

— Made the new Bridge Park Drive a one-way from Bridge Street to the Clinton Street intersection. Traffic can only travel north to south on the street because of the narrowness of the road. Parallel parking is restricted to only the west side of the street.

— Adopted former Acacia captain, Lt. Cmdr. Steven Corporon an honorary citizen of Charlevoix for taking pride in Charlevoix and flying the city flag in all ports en route and returning from duty in Haiti. Corporon had the flags encased and presented them to city officials before his transfer.

— Gave city officials approval to pursue fencing of the public works area with fences and slats. About 1,200 feet of fence should be purchased for an estimated $18,000. The fence will be six feet tall and not allow entrance to the property from the north.

Councilmember, Gabe Campbell, said he expects the change to make residents in the area happier than they have been looking at the works site.

— Appointed Sherman Chamberlain to the city planning commission to fill a term vacated by Julia Tucker, who moved outside the city limits. The term will expire in April, 1998.

— Reappointed Ray Wood to the compensation commission for a five-year term ending Dec. 31, 2001.

— Accepted a cable television rate settlement between Varnum, Riddering, Schmidt & Howlett and TCI Great Lakes, Inc. The agreement saves Charlevoix subscribers about $5,000 per year. The reductions are on non-programming charges such as converters, installation and service calls.

— Voted in support of the formation of a district library. The school district and Eveline, Charlevoix, Hayes, Marion and Norwood townships will also be voting on whether to officially become part of the agreement. Mayor Josh Barnes said the city should help assume the responsibility since a new state law prohibits school districts from overseeing community libraries.

Drug charges progress against teens

Two defendants arrested for dealing drugs in Charlevoix have been bound over to 33rd Circuit Court, while a third defendant's case remains in 90th District Court.

All defendants are from the Lansing area and were arrested around Labor Day through the joint efforts of the Charlevoix Police Department and the Straits Area Narcotics Enforcement (S.A.N.E.) team.

Matthew M. Thomas, 17, of East Lansing, filed a written waiver of his arraignment in front of Judge Richard M. Pajtas Friday. His attorney, Harry Golski of Charlevoix, filed the papers. Thomas stood mute to the charges and requested that the court enter a plea of not guilty. He is charged with conspiracy to deliver LSD, a hallucinogenic drug, conspiracy to deliver cocaine and conspiracy to deliver marijuana.

His case has been set for a scheduling conference at 8:30 a.m. Friday, Oct. 18.

Steven J. Ware, 17, of Okemos, also waived arraignment in circuit court, stood mute to the charges and demanded a trial by jury. His attorney is John D. Fershee of Petoskey. Ware faces the same charges as Thomas. He is scheduled to plead in front of Judge Pajtas at 9 a.m. Friday, Oct. 18.

Dan Paul Leone, 17, of East Lansing, was in possession of approximately 200 hits of LSD, and a small amount of cocaine and marijuana, according to police, when he was arrested on Aug. 30.

Leone's preliminary examination in 90th District Court is scheduled for Nov. 5. Attempts are being made to resolve the case, said S.A.N.E. special prosecutor Maria Barton.

Police charge that some of the deals occurred inside the restroom at the chamber of commerce. Chief Halverson said the trio was probably trying to establish an on-going drug trade between the Lansing area and Charlevoix.

"I'd call it a fledgling organization," Halverson said. "We think they were up here more than once for the purpose of selling drugs, and that they were trying to establish a foothold."

Halverson credits the cooperation between his department and the Straits Area Narcotics Enforcement team with the successful bust. He anticipates further arrests stemming from the operation.

Rayder football eases past Red Devil challenge

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Consistency in both offense and defense pushed the Rayders past the East Jordan Red Devils Friday. They topped the neighboring team 31-8.

"The kids played a good game," said Rayder head coach, Roger Gowell. "It was an excellent showing for them."

David Manker ran for 173 yards, including two touchdowns to boost the team to its win. The game advanced the Rayders into its 2-1 league record and 3-2 overall showing for the year.

The Rayders had 387 total yards and more than doubled the number of offensive plays over the Red Devils. Tackle Mike Rautio had four solo tackles and six assists, while noseguard Josh Skeel had two solo hits and six assists.

The first quarter ended with the Rayders threatening to score. They came out big in the second quarter, scoring 16 points. The team converted a fourth down with 1 yard to go to keep their drive alive, eventually scoring on a 2-yard run. A two-point conversion put the game 8-0.

The kickoff provided East Jordan's only opportunity to score when Scott Haley captured the ball and carried it from the 25-yard line to the end zone. A two point conversion tied the game.

Before heading into the locker-room, the Rayders upped their score by 8 points.

The Rayders scored again in the third and fourth quarters to build their point spread.

A key to Friday's win against East Jordan was teamwork, Gowell said. The defensive line shut down Devil advances while the offensive line blocked well enough to make room to run the ball.

The team was more consistent during Friday's game, the coach said, than in any other game this season.

With a good showing behind them, the Rayders face a homecoming challenge from the Boyne City Ramblers, who lead the conference 3-0 and are undefeated this season. The game is 7:30 p.m. Friday, Oct. 11, at Kipke Field.

"We just want to come off this game and continue to play good football," Gowell said, noting that the team needs to be aggressive and not give up the big play on defense.

Having extra spectators and activities for homecoming doesn't affect the coach, Gowell said. He said he needs the players to focus on the game in addition to all the other activities.

The Ramblers topped Harbor Springs at their homecoming 17-0 Friday.

Halftime at Kipke Field will be extended from 15 to 20 minutes to provide for the crowning of the king and queen.

Golf team splits recent meet, still 8-2

Charlevoix High School's golf team split a conference match on Oct. 2, winning against Boyne City, but losing to Harbor Springs at Harbor Point. The Rayders shot 176. Boyne City shot 226 and Harbor Springs shot 162.

Against Boyne City, Dan Pardee shot an 82, Ryan Murdick, 87, Keith Grunch, 82, Bob Summerfeld, 90, and Jason Vincent, 88.

The team took third place among 11 teams at the Traverse City Invitational Friday. Dan Pardee and Keith Grunch played the low scores at 82.

The Rayders are 7-2 in conference and 8-2 overall. The conference race is close, said coach Jim Glynn. Elk Rapids is 9-0, Harbor Springs is 9-1 and Inland Lakes is 8-2.

The conference championship will be played today at Shanty Creek. Regionals follow on Oct. 11 at Indian River Country Club.

Girls' cross country first, boys fourth

The varsity boys' cross country team came in fourth out of six teams Saturday at the Martin Invitational. The meet, hosted by Charlevoix at the Belvedere Golf Club, included classes A, B and the Big C division, Nate Martin ran the fastest time on the 5K course at 18:21.

The varsity girls came in first out of 11 in the C-D division. Medalists for the Rayders were Candice Vandergriff, who placed second with 21:18.

Third place medalist was Tricia Hodge at 21:26. The eleventh-place medalist was Liza Gorkiewicz at 22:41. Rachael Newcomb took fourteenth at 22:50, and Monica Browe fifteenth at 22:52.

The varsity girls' team scored 45 points. A perfect score is 15 points. Rudyard came in second and scored 87.

"The girls had an outstanding day," coach Ken Plude said. "The boys didn't have enough depth against the class A and B schools."

The boys and girls' teams are 1-0 in dual meets and are in Kalkaska today for another dual meet.

Varsity soccer loses two weekend meets

The Rayder soccer team was defeated by Elk Rapids Friday, 5-0, and to Sault Ste. Marie Saturday, 1-0, at Kipke Field.

The team currently carries a 5-7 season record. Its next match is 5 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 10, at Kipke Field. This is the team's last scheduled home game.

Basketball team loses lead

The Rayder varsity basketball team lost its tie for first place in the conference by one free throw in overtime during a match against East Jordan Thursday.

The game ended 46-45. Red Devil player, Amanda Pepin scored the winning point with no time left on the clock. The teams went into overtime at 38-38.

The Rayders are 4-5 overall and 3-1 in conference play. They were 15 points behind at the half.

Lisa Parrish was the team's high scorer with 16 points.

Charlevoix's junior varsity football team defeated East Jordan, 31-6.

Colin Carr is credited with making three touchdowns, grabbing two interceptions, forcing two fumbles and kicking an extra point on the Red Devil home field.

Quarterback, Mark Rager, completed eight of 12 passes for a total of 122 yards and three touchdowns.

Tom Cunningham led the team in receiving with four catches for 65 yards.

The team is now 3-2.

They will meet the Ramblers in Boyne City Thursday.

Bakeline open for holiday cooking tips

There's a nip in the air and the aroma of holiday baking wafting through homes everywhere. And that can only mean one thing: It's time for the holiday baker's best friends, the Land O'Lakes Holiday Bakeline home economists, to head to their phones and "officially" open baking season Nov. 1. For its seventh season, the Bakeline expects to help thousands of callers bake tempting treats and sensational sweets and avoid baking blunders.

"At the Bakeline we know that you don't have time to waste when you're facing a culinary crisis. Your fudge is failing, your dough is dry or your gingerbread house is caving in," said Lydia Botham, Director of Consumer Affairs and Test Kitchens at Land O'Lakes, Inc.

With a call to the Land O'Lakes Holiday Bakeline, 1-800-782-9606, from Nov. 1 to Dec. 24, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., holiday bakers receive baking advice and season's greetings from home economists trained in the Land O'Lakes Test Kitchens.

Last season, a record-breaking 44,000 people called the Bakeline for advice and inspiration. Throughout the years, the Bakeline has helped experienced and novice bakers alike with queries ranging from ingredient substitutions to how to recreate grandma's special gingerbread cookies.

"Every year we hear many heartwarming stories, tales that truly convey the spirit of the season," says Botham. "We were especially touched last year by a call from a woman who was inspired by the Bakeline to bake again after the tragic loss of her mother, who had taught her the joy of baking.

Tap into Disney's secret to success

Lately, Disney has been packing up its unique brand of magic and personally delivering it to cities all over the globe. Now comes a glimpse at a side of Disney that most people never get to see. The business side.

Disney University Professional Development Programs is bringing "The Disney Keys To Service Excellence" to Traverse City for an exclusive one-day presentation to business professionals.

The two "key" components of the presentation focus on management and service, Disney style.

The session will be presented at 7:15 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 22, at Interlochen Center for the Arts' Corson Auditorium in Traverse City.

The fee for "The Disney Keys To Service Excellence" is $130 per participant, which includes a continental breakfast.

Showcasing how Disney's unique style of management and service can be adopted in other organizations is a "key" part of the program.

As the program unfolds, participants realize that Disney strategies really can be used in their workplace, regardless of the type of industry or size of organization.

Inspired by Disney's success, participants leave the program armed with ideas for turning theory into action in their organization.

Pacesetters help United Way

Last year, United Way introduced the Pacesetter program by enlisting eight local companies to conduct their campaigns in early September. This year, six local companies were selected to "set the pace" for the 1996-97 campaign.

These Pacesetters are: FMB Northwestern Bank, CB North, Boyne City Public Schools, United Parcel Service, J.C. Penney Co. and the City of Charlevoix. FMB Northwestern Bank as a Pacesetter company has more than doubled their employee campaign this year. The company offered a bank match incentive to employees who contributed to make their contributions worth even more.

J.C. Penney kicked off their employee campaign Friday, Sept. 13, with an early morning pancake breakfast, served by the store manager, and an afternoon hot dog roast. Special events like these help to motivate employees and provide them with information about the CharEm United Way they may not otherwise know.

"We find more and more that if employees understand what our agencies are doing to make our community a better place, they generally are more willing to contribute to our annual campaign," said executive director Lisa Ashley.

"We are excited with the response we have received from our communities and the Pacesetter companies. The CharEm United Way is off to an exciting 1996-97 campaign." said campaign committee chair/United Way board member Penny Hardy.

The mission of the organization is to encourage people to care and support the human service needs of their friends and neighbors in Charlevoix and Emmet counties through reliable stewardship of community funds. Last year more than $169,000 was raised for local non-profits. This year, led by Linda Hume and Dennis Halverson, the CharEm United Way hopes to raise $195,000.

board. She was chosen by random draw because all seven applicants were qualified, superintendent Roberta Jackson said.

— Gave the go-ahead to 19 students from the high school for a trip to Washington, D.C. for the 1997 Inauguration. The trip prompted some discussion because it falls during exam week.

Principal Gary Grundman said that arrangements have been made for the students to take exams upon their return, or to write a term paper in lieu of the exam.

— Elementary school principal, Richard Swenor, presented a video on the school. The video is part of the school's annual report and will be used to introduce the school to new community members.

— Approved Marlynn Hughes as the new adult education coordinator. Hughes has an extensive background in adult education and will be instrumental in increasing adult education in the district, Jackson said.

Planners gather to discuss future of greater Charlevoix

Working toward comprehensive plan

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Charlevoix area buildings, streets and parking lots could begin to look more alike if planners adopt like policies.

However, it's likely that the individuality of the rural and town areas will remain.

City planner Gerry Harsch is spearheading efforts to discover the desires of planners — and the people they represent — in five surrounding townships: Charlevoix, Eveline, Hayes, Marion and Norwood. Throughout the process, community goals and objectives are hoped to lead to policies for the larger community.

"It's like a neighbor caring that the property next door is taken care of."
— Gerry Harsch, Charlevoix planner

Harsch defined the greater Charlevoix area as effecting the school district, spanning the area covered by city utilities. That area crosses into all five of the townships invited to a planning session Monday at city hall.

The group of planners is working on updating the area's comprehensive plan that was passed in the early 1980s. Members attended a meeting at city hall Monday.

"We're trying to get the planners from five townships and the city to come together to get some consensus of the area," said Barb Fels, recording secretary for the City of Charlevoix's planning commission. "In time, it could get more uniform."

An example of how development requirements differ within the Charlevoix area are parking lot requirements between the city and Charlevoix Township. Glen's parking lot is required to use landscaping to soften the parking lot. Kmart parking lot, which is located in the township, was not.

The city has invited the townships to become involved together because they are all neighbors.

"It's like a neighbor caring that the property next door is taken care of," Harsch said Tuesday. The townships are the corridors to the city. And to Harsch, the process of identifying community desires for and concerns with planning is more important than a written comprehensive plan.

Planning is a continuous process that evolves with the community and the people who live there, Harsch said.

Members of the area-wide group identified two main concerns: continued affordability of the community and the protection of the rural character of the area.

Included in the discussion was landscaping, historic preservation, appropriate signage, cultural facilities, public safety through a possible area-wide fire authority, transportation, a marine port, senior and affordable housing, preservation of wetlands, removal of radioactive material, recycling and energy efficiency.

Planners will continue to explore the desires of the community. The next step is for Harsch to take the feedback he received from planners Monday and organize it into responses that will again be presented to the planning group.

The members will then go through responses and rank them on whether they agree and it should be carried forward into a draft plan. This should lead to a draft comprehensive plan for greater Charlevoix.

Harsch said he hopes to submit a draft plan to city officials by summer.

Search begins for dock space

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Charlevoix is hoping to triple their dock space.

Boaters are being turned away as summertime visitors flock to city docks.

"We're open to options whatsoever to increase docking," said city mayor, Josh Barnes.

The overcrowding has created problems with boaters not anchoring correctly, which enables boats to swing into each other, Barnes said.

One option that is in preliminary stages of being considered is a linear mooring system. Barnes said literature has been received and city officials are asking for a meeting with the Michigan Department of Natural Resources regarding the possible plan.

"Some would much prefer that you could walk out to your boat."
— Josh Barnes, Charlevoix mayor

A mooring system of this type enables boaters to tie alongside each other. They would have to use dinghies to reach land.

City manager, Mike Wiesner, said a system to expand dockage should be presented to city council by mid-January, when the annual budget presentation is made. Officials are looking at various systems, possible locations and whether such a plan is feasible.

Barnes said spaces need to be added for transient boaters who want to stop off in Charlevoix. However, there are differing opinions as to whether the added space should require use of a dingy or enable boaters a slip attached to the mainland.

"Some would much prefer that you could walk out to your boat," he said.

County to interview for administrator

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

Boyne City will host the county commission board at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 23, at city hall. The commissioners meet in Boyne City once a year for the convenience of area residents.

Chairman Phil Johnson and commissioners Richard Gillespie and Don Smith will meet at 5 p.m. at the Tannery Saloon & Restaurant to interview Shannon Stumbo, a new applicant for the county administrator position. The full board plans to make a decision on whether or not to offer Stumbo the position at its Wednesday, Nov. 13, meeting.

At its Oct. 9 meeting, the board agreed to change the agreement with Bergmann Center to reflect the federal increase in the minimum wage of 45 cents per hour. This increases the county cleaning bill at the center by $30.50 per year.

Keith Ogden of East Jordan was appointed to fill the two remaining months of the late Bill Korthase's term on the county road commission. Ogden will also fill the following six-year term. Also appointed to the road commission was Doug Way, Sr., of Charlevoix. Way will fill the two-year term that Tim Boyko will vacate Nov. 20, when Boyko resigns to become Hayes Township Supervisor.

The appointment of a new administrator for the community corrections program went to Murray Kilgour. Kilgour lives in Charlevoix and owns Hausendorf & Hilbert, a research and consulting firm. He is a mediator with Citizen Dispute Resolution Services, Inc., and has a background in law enforcement services.

Jerry Meggison's wife, Babette, was inadvertently left out of information provided to the Courier for Donald and Helen Meggison's 50th wedding anniversary. The announcement ran in the Oct. 9 issue.

Homecoming winners announced Friday

Homecoming brought a close football game to Rayder fans, shivers to the Homecoming Court and victories to varying classes as high schoolers competed during Spirit Week.

The junior class won for best float, The Bridge to Victory. The float portrayed Charlevoix's sometimes bothersome drawbridge.

Throughout the week, classes earned points for assembly games and dress-up days, which included the shopping cart relay, caterpillar crawl, competition yell and a lip sync. The overall winner was the senior class, with sophomores second, freshman third and junior fourth.

Charlevoix businesses help by hiring special employees

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

Patsy Zoulek keeps things clean and shiny at Charlevoix's McDonald's Restaurant. Burger King, McDonald's and about 10 other local companies employ people with disabilities. The ninth annual Investing in Ability Week is commemorated around the state from Sunday-Saturday, Oct. 13-19.

Patsy Zoulek wipes down the counter area at Charlevoix's McDonald's restaurant and talks about her job. One day kids had spilled pop on the counters, the tables and the floor.

"That pop was all over the place," she said. And then there are the teenagers who spill French fries.

But Zoulek takes it all in stride and manages a smile for everyone, said Chuck Klooster, McDonald's manager.

"She's good with the customers," he said. "She's enthusiastic about her job, and she's good at seeing what needs to be done."

Zoulek is one of several employees with disabilities working at about 12 Charlevoix-area businesses.

"I really like it here," Zoulek said. She began her job early this summer and she works about seven hours a week, helping out at busy lunch times.

Klooster, who has been the manager for seven years, sees advantages to hiring people with disabilities.

"In the long run they can be better employees than otherwise," he said. "All of them have a great attitude. They're excited about being independent."

Klooster hired Zoulek through the Supported Employment Services at Northern Michigan Community Mental Health Services. Kim Rapin of the agency evaluated Zoulek's skills, abilities and interests before placing her.

After Zoulek was hired by McDonald's, Rapin conducted on-the-job training with her. When Zoulek became familiar with her duties, Rapin gradually backed off, letting her become independent in her job. Rapin continues to stop in occasionally while Zoulek is working to see how things are going.

The support from Rapin and employment services have been instrumental to the success of Zoulek's employment, said Klooster.

"The key is the involvement of community mental health," he said. "It's been a real good program."

The first 20 hours of Zoulek's employment was reimbursed by community mental health. This practice allows the employer an opportunity to evaluate the employee before making a commitment.

Rapin said when companies hire people with disabilities it's a win-win situation. A job gives the worker income and self-esteem.

"I've seen so many people insecure and nervous when starting a job. After about a month they're feeling confident," she said. "It's wonderful to watch them blossom, to gain that confidence."

Most employers are very satisfied with their employees, Rapin said. They have workers who show up for work, work hard and take their jobs seriously.

This week commemorates the ninth annual statewide Investing in Ability Week. Rapin hopes to see more employers hire people with disabilities.

"People just need the opportunity," Rapin said.

Information on hiring workers with disabilities can be obtained by calling 347-0740.

Three locals injured in nearby two-car accident Saturday

Three people were injured in a car accident on U.S. 31, near Boyne City-Charlevoix Road about 10:20 p.m. Saturday.

Raymond N. Honson, who was driving a 1977 Chevrolet, was cited for following too closely when he rearended a two-door Ford, driven by Annette Vandermey, of Boyne City, according to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department.

Prior to the accident, two motorists tried to pull an injured deer to the shoulder of the road. Vandermey approached from the north and stopped when seeing the deer in the road and the men. Honson, of Interlochen, then hit Vandermey's car. The impact caused considerable damage to the rear of the small car, police said. Vandermey received a leg injury. Her mother, Jeanette Dustin, received an injured leg and sore back. Charles Vandermey, 10, Bethany Vandermey, 7, both of Boyne City, and Kristi Potter, 15, of East Jordan, were passengers in the back seat. Kristi Potter complained of pain and was taken to Charlevoix Area Hospital with the other passengers.

Thieves violate family fun at weekend Applefest

EDITORIAL

An unexpected storm moved in on Charlevoix's Applefest this weekend.

The storm didn't include rain drops and cold winds as in past years. Instead, it churned with dark clouds of greed and high winds of theft.

Friday evening, someone or a group of people, entered three display tents and lifted nearly $2,500 worth of handcrafted jewelry, leather belts, wooden pipes and eyeglass cords.

We have a message for the thieves who selfishly chose to take from their neighbors: Even if you don't get caught this time, you're traveling a road that will only bring destruction many times worse than what you have gained. It may sound trite, but crime doesn't pay. It takes you farther than you want to go, keeps you longer than you want to stay and costs you more than you have to pay.

Stealing is not a game.

The extra stature you think you've created by collecting someone else's property is taking you lower than you ever dreamed of going. While you joke about stealing, and either sell or give away your newfound treasures, there are artists left to somehow absorb the loss. You've stolen a peace that should be theirs when they come to Applefest to sell their creations and enjoy a warm, family atmosphere. You have robbed some of the enjoyment they found in spending hours stringing beads, imprinting leather and shaping medals.

Applefest is known as a time for families. Dogs are allowed to join in the weekend's activities. The sounds of conversation and local musicians fill the fall air.

Cider is served. Caramel apples abound. Service groups raise money for community needs. The smell of apples, German roasted almonds and hot dogs welcome passersby into Charlevoix's first post-summer bash.

Although the stealing has been done, we ask that it doesn't end there. Whether the thieves are ever caught, Charlevoix can refuse to let this experience taint its enthusiasm for the Applefest or other events.

Crime can either breed mistrust or challenge people to band together and refuse to bow to intimidation. We urge Charlevoix to continue to hosting its seasonal celebrations, and to never let the wrongful acts of a few rob the community of all that brings families together for good food and good fun.

Letters to the editor

School district should look at more than fixing buildings

Editor:

The recent election turning down the Charlevoix school board proposals shows conclusively that the voting public is greatly concerned about the direction of its school system.

The fact that the board saw fit to separate the auditorium proposal from the main buildings proposal indicated that they were not serious about the auditorium; put another way, the auditorium was not as compelling an issue to them as the new high school issue.

Also, maintenance items, like roof repair or replacement, asbestos removal, gym repair, should never be lumped in with major capital items, such as new buildings. Maintenance items can and should be separate items, which can be paid for by a low tax millage for a short term. Why should the taxpayers have to pay interest for 20 years as part of a bond issue?

Recent information indicates that the Charlevoix school system has lost nearly a hundred students to schools of choice, which are charter schools or Petoskey Public Schools. This means the loss of over a half million dollars in state aid to Charlevoix schools. This tells me that there are a significant number of parents and students who are dissatisfied with the Charlevoix schools, and it has nothing to do with buildings or the lack there of.

I suggest to the Charlevoix school board that they find what the enticement is that leads parents to send their Charlevoix students to other schools of choice; this is no trifling matter!

Whether we have children in Charlevoix schools or not, we taxpayers expect the Charlevoix school system to provide an excellent education to every student who wants it.

I am a firm believer in the public school system. My first 12 school years were in a southern Michigan town about the size of Charlevoix today. The academic ciricula there prepared me for enlistment into the United States Air Force and later the University of Michigan, where I earned a degree, which lead to a professional engineer license.

I don't pretend to be an expert in education, but we are faced with some obvious problems, facts and conditions for which we need to find answers.

Sincerely,
Charles Butcher, P.E.

Make use of Charlevoix's old houses

Editor:

Let's keep Charlevoix beautiful and do something with the houses in Charlevoix that need T.L.C (tender loving care), like have Haunted Houses for Halloween.

I am sure one of the clubs or other community members in Charlevoix could make money to Keep Charlevoix Beautiful so that the eye sores that keep Charlevoix from being beautiful could give money back to the city or the beautification committee.

The house on Ferry and Eaton would be a start. Better yet have a house on each side of the bridge.

A big thanks to Greenleaf Gardens for our most beautiful flowers this summer. Many hearts were touch.

C.J. Winnell interviews participants of the 1996 Charlevoix Industrial Fair as one of his business ventures.

High schooler makes an early start of entrepreneurial future

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

A Charlevoix student took his love of movies and made a business out of it.

"I've always loved movies and finally I thought, why not do something with it," said C. J. Winnell, a high school sophomore. He purchased his first video camera and began recording events. In June, he began his business, VID Productions.

Winnell said he tried to get his parents to buy the camera, but when they wouldn't, he worked to raise the money.

"I mowed a lot of lawns — it's another one of my businesses," the Charlevoix native said.

Winnell's parents encourage his business ventures. His mother had her own business and gave her son practical advice about getting started.

Winnell may attend college and major in film-making and directing. He wants to make action-fiction movies, movies that keep people on the edge of their seats.

But for now, Winnell is filming conferences, fellow students' activities and weddings. He filmed his first wedding in September.

"I heard them (friends) talking about a wedding and I said 'I could tape it for you.'" That gave him his first experience with a wedding and he said he learned a lot from it.

"Weddings have an element of surprise because something always goes wrong," Winnell said. But anything that does go wrong is fixed quickly, he added.

Along with the filming, Winnell enjoys the equipment. He considers himself an expert with cameras.

"I can touch any camera and within five minutes know it all," he said.

He uses his expertise to advise friends in purchasing cameras and video equipment. He also gives advice about audio equipment and helped the middle school principal, Dennis VanGuilder, decide on the selection of a sound system for the school.

"He's a young entrepreneur," VanGuilder said. "He seems like one of the types to be in business for himself. He's a young guy with a ways to go, but he has special skills in working with people."

> "Weddings have an element of surprise because something always goes wrong,"
> — C.J. Winnell

Winnell attended a conference near Crystal Mountain in September, through the Student Entrepreneur Program of Charlevoix. The program pairs up students with business people and professionals to provide mentoring to entrepreneurial students.

The conference was filmed by a professional company and he enjoyed watching the filming technique. The idea of being a part of a large film company appeals to him, but he also likes working independently.

Winnell said he wants to work at video filming for the next several years, at least.

"I enjoy it," he said. "It's something I like. Many people work and don't enjoy what they do."

The young entrepreneur's advice demonstrates his business sense. "It's good to establish your name early on, so when you turn professional people say, 'I know him, he does good work.'"

In 1924, Eunice married Ivan Coolman, and they celebrated 49 years of marriage in 1973, one year before he died.

Eunice has one son, Norman, who lives in Charlevoix with his wife, Phyllis, and one daughter, Carol Gooch, and husband, Orv, of Swartz Creek. She also has three grandsons: Gary Coolman and wife, Debbie, of Ellsworth; Glen Coolman and wife, Marge, and their two children of Walloon Lake; and Erik Ernst, of Swartz Creek.

She has worked for many years in area canning factories. However, she most recently worked at the Charlevoix Senior Center, retiring in April of this year.

Variety show Saturday

Skits and songs are being prepared to entertain area residents at the Charlevoix High School Fine Arts Department's Fall Variety Show. The presentation revolves around the moon. Original scripts and stories from literature will be used.

Music will range from "The Cow Jumped Over the Moon" to Uppers Night at Deer Camp. Old times songs "Moon River," and "By the Light of the Silvery Moon," will be joined by newer numbers from "Arabian Nights."

The show is 7 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 19, in the high school gym. Adults will be $4, and students and senior citizens $2 at the door.

The variety show is the first in a series of fund-raisers to help cover the cost of competition. A Halloween bottle drive will also be held.

Applefest brings crowds to town

A day of sunshine, hot dogs and caramel apples was fine with Kristy Martin, 4, (left) and Katy Martin, 6, of Charlevoix. The girls were enjoying the Applefest Saturday with their aunt, Amy Martin. The 17th annual Apple Festival was held on Friday-Sunday. Sunshine and warm temperatures brought crowds of people to East Park to enjoy the food, art and music. The festival brought record sales to many of the orchards that set up booths in the park.

Cropwalk draws local steppers

The oldest walkers take steps to stomp out hunger locally, and around the world, are Phyllis Beck (left) and Mary Helen Riggle, both of Charlevoix and in their 80s.

Oct. 5 turned out to be a cool day with a brisk wind, but that did not deter about 173 enthusiastic walkers from raising money for the hungry during the county Cropwalk.

People walked six miles to the Ironton Congregational Church from three directions. Boyne City walkers started at Whiting Park; East Jordan from Elm Pointe and Charlevoix participants gathered at the high school parking lot to make their trek.

The 64 Charlevoix walkers were of varied ages and sizes, and represented many different churches, according to Rosemary Horton.

The oldest two walkers were Phyllis Block and Mary Helen Riggle, both in their 80's. They declined a ride when they were 3/4 of the way to Ironton and said "it's all downhill from here."

Linda Matchett walked with her children. Lily Ann, 5 months, rode in a carrier on Matchett's back while Mia, 7, and Isaac, 8, walked for $77 in pledges each.

John and Anna Young wheeled a stroller with Chris and Katie all the way to Ironton, uphill and down.

Michael Smith came loping into the high school parking late. However, he quickly registered and then ran almost the entire way to Ironton. Naturally, he was the first to arrive.

Carol Sneathen, of Boyne City, was accompanied by her little dog, Molly.

Last to arrive were Phyllis Block, Mary Helen Riggle, Mary Ann DeYoung, and her son, Kenny Grant. Despite sore feet, they arrived, tired but smiling and satisfied. Along the way, Charlevoix walkers found a nice surprise — a huge basket of Snickers bars at the side of the road with a sign: Thanks for Walking!

Beacons

of blessing

By Rev. Bruce Hamilton
Courier columnist

Have you ever found yourself listening to some story about something so basic, so simple that it is almost crazy and found yourself thinking, "now why couldn't I have thought of that?" Well, the name Milton Levine probably won't ring any bells with too many folks but he's spent 40 years laughing all the way to the bank. You see, this week is the 40th anniversary of his company, Uncle Milton's Ant Farms, Inc.

Back in 1956 when he came up with the idea of putting plastic in a couple of wood frames, filling it with dirt, and selling the ants to go with them, he charged $2.98 per unit. Today, they sell for $11.98 each and he only mails the ants on Monday because he doesn't want them sitting in the post office getting lonely over the weekend.

Back in 1956, he figured if he got a couple of years out of the fad, he would have done very well. Forty years later, he's put all his children through college and is working towards a more than comfortable retirement, basically because he had the courage to believe in something everybody else thought was impossible, if not a little crazy as well.

Sometimes it takes courage to believe. It takes courage when everything around you challenges your dreams. It takes courage when the odds are against you and those you think ought to be there shoulder-to-shoulder with you give you a hard time. It takes courage but if you know Jesus as your Savior and Lord, I want to remind you of something. It's worth it!

One of my favorite gospel stories finds a father seeking help from the disciples for his sick son. The symptoms he describes sound remarkably like epilepsy, but that's not really the point. The father loved his child so much that he would go anywhere, do anything in order to find someone to bring his boy some hope and help. He thought the disciples might hold the answer. But they couldn't do it. In fact, the disciples got into an argument with the Pharisees about why they couldn't do it and the poor sick boy kind of got forgotten about.

That's when Jesus came on the scene. The father turned to Christ for help with a tearful plea. Jesus shook his head in sadness and frustration at how his disciples had so easily lost sight of where their power really came from. He told the father, "All things are possible if you are willing to believe." The father replied with one of the most honest statements I've ever seen. "I believe, help me with my unbelief!"

Of course Jesus helped that father and son. I want you to know that Jesus stands ready to help you with the impossible things in life, too. When the disciples asked the Lord why they had failed, he gave them the key. "Some things can only happen through prayer and fasting." Take your prayer life seriously! Take the keys to the kingdom God has given every believer through Christ seriously. If you will believe, you will be amazed at how God will help you handle your unbelief!

10 tips for farmers who have a crop loss claim

Nearly all farmers buy insurance to protect against losses and guarantee the loans necessary to buy equipment and plant crops. Not everyone with crop insurance is able to collect in the event of a disaster. Attorney John Tallman, of Grand Rapids, offers these 10 tips for farmers to ensure they get the most out of their insurance coverage.

1. Understand your insurance. Know what damages for which you are insured, and those for which you are not covered.

2. Maintain all pertinent records, receipts and data required to justify a claim. If you believe you have a loss and do not have the required records, carefully reconstruct all you can to verify the conditions which led to your claim. You must report a loss in a timely manner.

3. Have your agent clearly explain how the company determines whether you are or are not eligible for loss reimbursement. Who makes the determination? What factors are considered? Do external consideration — such as disaster designations or other declarations — play a role in determining whether your loss is eligible for reimbursement?

4. Make certain you clearly understand the conditions under which you have purchased crop insurance, and who will collect damage payments if you make a claim. Will all payments go to your lender? Will they go to you first? Will you and your lender share in the damage award?

5. Contract with a credible agent and insurance company. What is the agent's track record? How does the recommended insurance company stack up against its competitors? Have they paid claims filed by friends and neighbors? What was their experience? Were their dealings with the agent and insurer business like and even handed, or did they have to fight to win their damage award? How many claims have ended up in court for a particular agent? How many has he or she lost?

6. Insurance companies base their consideration of damage awards in part on "normal and reasonable agricultural practices." If the farmer does not follow procedures considered normal practice by the insurer, claims may not be paid. Know all of the practices considered to be normal and reasonable by the insurer, and be able to document your adherence to these practices, or explain your departure from prescribed standards.

7. Stay informed about what is happening on the farms around you. Ask your agent if others have filed claims. Clip newspaper and magazine articles detailing unusual weather occurrences which impact your ability to farm, or of state and county actions to collect federal disaster assistance for farmers in your region.

8. Review limits of your insurance policies each year with your agent. Do the reimbursement limits cover your loans? Do they cover the losses you would incur if the crop failed? Do they cover all the crops you have planted? Report your acreage in a timely manner each year.

9. If you are asked to sign a form, make sure you receive a copy of it and file it with other pertinent papers.

10. Know your options if there is a claim disagreement. One option is arbitration, if you and the company disagree upon the amount of award recommended by the adjuster. Another option is a lawsuit filed with the assistance of a reputable attorney who has experience in agricultural insurance loss claims.

Trademark Clothiers enters next era with new owners

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Trademark Clothiers has some new faces behind the counter.

Barney and Kris Way are new owners of a business that's lined Bridge Street for 16 years — Trademark Clothiers. The couple took over ownership of the business Oct. 1.

"We were looking for a family-type business that we can involve our whole family in," Barney Way said. He is a Charlevoix native who has spent the past nine years working for Waste Management. He was a division president.

The Ways have five daughters. And as the years progress, they hope to offer them career opportunities through the retail clothing shop.

Neither Barney nor Kris have retail sales experience. They've chosen on-the-job training. No major changes to the store are planned for now.

"We're going to run it for a little while, get a handle on the business and maybe do some decorative changes during the winter," Barney said.

The business was sold to the Ways by Fred DiMartino, who has owned it since 1980. He bought the business from Bob Lieberman in 1980, after working as a manager at Kadens Emporium for six years.

DiMartino still owns the three-story building in which the store is located. There are also 15 offices between the two top floors. He will remain in the area and serve as landlord of the building under the name Trademark Properties, a limited liability corporation.

At 43-years-old, DiMartino has completely renovated the building himself and is ready to pursue another adventure. However, he plans to stay in Charlevoix and spend the next year or two with family "doing the important things in life," he said. "I'm ready to change gears and get on with something else."

The business went up for sale unofficially. DiMartino said he had mentioned his desire to move on to some key people in town. The Ways heard about their own chance for change. Conservation has led to next steps for two local families.

Way said he's grateful for the reputation DiMartino has established for the business.

"Fred has always been honest and good to deal with," he said.

In his departure, DiMartino offers thanks to the people of Charlevoix who have helped his business succeed.

"I appreciate all their business and friendships," he said.

50 years at work for Charlevoix firm

Hats are off to Art Emmons, who is celebrating his 50th year of service with Charlevoix Abstract & Title Co.

For his first 25 years with the company, Emmons worked outside with surveying crews.

He then moved inside, where he has worked on title exams. He is now employed part-time to proofread title commitments.

Emmons

Emmons was valedictorian of his high school class, and he served in World War II.

When not working, he enjoys traveling, working crossword puzzles, taking in stray cats, listening to compact discs and working in his yard.

Emmons family consists of his wife, Helen, daughter Deborah, who lives in Torch Lake, and son, Mark, who is stationed in Bahrain with the U.S. Navy.

Business in brief

Housing starts down for August

Michigan 1996 housing project starts were up 13.2 percent in August over the same month in 1995. However, August projects are down 10.7 percent from July of this year, according to the Michigan Association of Home Builders.

"The residential impact of the number of starts in May, June and July, coupled with the high demand and short supply of skilled labor was bound to have an impact on August," said Jerel Konwinski, association president. "But August was still a good month. It was only 133 starts down from 1995's peak month of June."

The pressure of rising lumber prices was countered by a decrease in interest rates. Fixed-rate mortgages fell to 7.88 percent in August from 8.42 percent in July. Lumber prices for 1,000 board feet of framing lumber rose to $429 in August from $396 in July.

National pharmacist week coming up

Pharmacists are being recognized during National Pharmacy Week, Sunday-Saturday, Oct. 20-26.

The public is being encouraged by the Michigan Pharmacists Association to "Team Up and Talk" with their local pharmacists to develop a health care team. Customers can ask pharmacists to record and review their medical profile of medicines, including prescription and over-the-counter drugs.

By having medications on file at one pharmacy, the pharmacist can recommend the right drug and dosage.

Hospital's class deals with fraud, abuse

Charlevoix Area Hospital will sponsor a talk titled "Fraud and Abuse Prevention" 1 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 24, at their Central Lake Building, on the corner of M-88 and Park Street.

Participants will learn how to avoid some of the most common frauds, scams, and swindles. Tips will be offered on how to respond to telemarketing fraud and action steps given to stop this from happening.

Chris Curtin, geriatric nurse at the hospital, will explain how to prevent yourself or a family member from becoming a victim of elder abuse. Elderly people are commonly victims of fraud and scams.

The talk is free of charge and reservations are not required to attend.

Rayders lose tough homecoming game to undefeated Boyne

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

This year's homecoming will be remembered by some as an 8-0 loss to the Boyne City Ramblers. Others, however, will remember one of the best games of the year, a game in which defensive lines ruled.

When the players walked off the field to their respective locker rooms Friday, they left everything they could on the field.

"They played their best," said Charlevoix head coach, Roger Gowell. "Both teams played good games."

> "They played their best. Both teams played good games."
> — Roger Gowell, Rayder head coach

The game was scoreless for the first half, with Boyne City missing a field goal attempt in the first quarter.

Throughout the game, fourth downs forced punts. Interceptions turned over possession.

A blocked punt set up the Rayders at the 39-yard line to start a new drive. However, Charlevoix's offense couldn't break through for a touchdown.

Throughout the game, the ball was moved more easily inside the middle 60 yards of the field. Interceptions and rushing brought each team close to their end zone several times. However, once in critical field position, defenses became walls of steel inside the 20-yard line.

Only once, in their first drive of the third quarter, did the Ramblers break through to score on a 62-yard drive.

A two-point conversion upped the score to 8-0. The Rayders gained possession of the ball with 1:38 remaining in the game. However, an intercepted pass by the Ramblers clinched the win as game time ticked away.

The game ended with a Boyne City sacking Charlevoix's quarterback. The Rayders slipped to 3-3 while the Ramblers remain undefeated.

Gowell said Charlevoix's defense was consistent throughout the game and didn't give up the big plays.

"Offensively, we did move the ball, but we just couldn't punch in and score," he said. "We couldn't get the yards when we needed them.

"We couldn't crack their offense and get any points."

Rayder halfback David Manker was held by Boyne's defense to 64 yards rushing and receiving. Fullback Chris Dominic led Charlevoix with 78 yards rushing on 14 carries. Quarterback T.J. Carey completed five of 14 passes for 44 yards.

Roger Pittman led Charlevoix's defense with eight solo tackles and two assists. Manker had six solos and three assists, Bob Anzell five solos and five assists and Joe Grundman had four solos and five assists.

Grundman and Steve Felter made interceptions.

The Rayders next face Traverse City St. Francis Friday, Oct. 18, in Traverse City. Traverse City is ranked second — behind Boyne City and in front of Charlevoix — in the Lake Michigan division standings.

The remainder of the season presents Charlevoix challenges as they face Traverse City, Rogers City and Petoskey. The team is currently 3-3.

"We just have to look at our scouting reports and put our game plan together and work to make sure we're prepared to play each team as we meet them," Gowell said.

The team's last home game is 7:30 p.m. Friday, Nov. 1, against the Petoskey Northmen, a nonconference game.

Rayder soccer team avenges two early season losses

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

The Rayder soccer team is picking up steam. Neighboring teams that have walked off the field with a Charlevoix loss to their credit have tasted defeat by Rayder players.

Over the past week, the team has outscored both Cheboygan and Sault Ste. Marie to even up its record, 7-7.

"They're playing more like a team," said soccer coach Josh Block. "They're not 11 individuals out their doing their own thing. They're a single unit."

Saturday, the team played Sault Ste. Marie on the road. They won the game 2-1. Goals were made by Sean Stockman and Skylar Handy. They assisted each other, also.

"We were hungry for it, and we needed the victory," said soccer co-coach, Tom Shelton.

The win was the second consecutive game in which the Rayders showed improvements to gain a win. The first came when the team beat Cheboygan at home Thursday. Running through biting winds, the Rayders topped the visitors, 3-2.

"That was another loss we needed to avenge," Shelton said.

The game was close with the final goal being made with minutes left to play. Goalie Drew Belding intercepted many of Cheboygan's attempts to score.

"It was the most exciting game I've seen in a long time," Shelton said.

The beginning of the season brought new coaches, a slow start for practices and a young team. Block said the players passes and handling of the ball have improved.

"The last two victories have shown that," Block said.

Senior Steve Carland, who plays center halfback, is a strong defensive player for the team.

"He's quick and excellent at handling the ball," Block said.

Freshman Sean Stockman is also a strength on the driving front.

With the team making strides into becoming tougher competition, Block said he only sees a stronger soccer program in years to come. Only two seniors will leave the team in the spring.

"I think we're going to be a super strong team in a couple of years," Block said.

The team's game is 5 p.m. Thursday in Petoskey against the junior varsity team. Block expects to continue the teams' upbeat finish to the season.

Walls go up on community pool

The time is ripe to launch the final phase of the Charlevoix Friends of the Pool capital campaign for construction of the Charlevoix Community Pool on U.S. 31 North.

"Although the friends have paid out over $200,000 for basic work to date, progress hasn't been visible unless visiting the site," said campaign chair, Bruce MacArthur. "Now that people can see the building from the highway, we believe further gifts and pledges will be forthcoming."

The organization has raised $1,250,000 for both construction and operation. It seeks new money for construction and accelerated pledge giving.

"We can borrow money if we need to," explained MacArthur, "but we want to avoid the burden of interest payments."

For pledge forms, call the pool office, 547-6960.

SCRAPBOOK

Architect captures local history

By Geoffrey Reynolds
Courier columnist

Earl Young of Charlevoix is well remembered for his unusually designed stone houses and commercial buildings, personality and active promotion of Charlevoix. But little has been written about his immense film collection, created by a 16 mm camera and a yearning to record moments and people in his life. Those moments are now historically valuable as the demand for moving and still images of Charlevoix increases.

All filming was done with a camera that Young purchased in the late 1920's. According to his daughter, Louise Gill: "It seemed he always had his camera with him. He was taking movies of the family and the things around town constantly. I remember this because I carried it many times for him."

In his camera he used both black and white, and color, Kodak film exclusively. Black and white pictures still retain sharp and show a remarkable ability to stand up to the heat, humidity and time. Colorful movies, due to the instability of color film, show signs of color deterioration today that will eventually ruin the original and priceless images.

Young's notes on the original film boxes recorded his subjects and dates of filming and when it was sent to Chicago for processing. Upon shipment each original box contained 100 feet of exposed film. After it was returned, processed and ready for projection, Young spliced together many shorter films to form longer reels. This allowed him more time to enjoy the films and less time changing reels.

Earl Young

While some of Young's scenes are out of focus and overexposed, most of the 81 reels, totaling 13,000 feet of film, are priceless because of their invaluable scenes of Charlevoix during the late 1920s and continuing through the 1950s. Almost 30 years of Charlevoix's social history was documented accidentally by a man thrilled with filming his surrounding.

Examples of Young's films include the many winter activities held at Mt. McSauba, fishing in Round Lake, the Loeb Farm, U.S. Coast Guard spring demonstrations and the fires that destroyed the Belvedere Depot and Charlevoix Hotel.

Eventually the film camera gave in to age and Young's other interests, which included real estate, still photography and researching Charlevoix's history. While the history project was never seen by the public in written form, his photography is well documented in travel and real estate brochures promoting Charlevoix to potential tourists and buyers.

After Young's death, his films were given to his grandson, Drew "Skip" Young, Jr., due to his interest in preserving them. In 1994, after learning of Young's past filming career from his grandson, I decided to transfer Young's original 16 mm films to VHS video. This not only preserved the images on another medium, but also allowed the collection to be accessible to the public for the first time.

Eventually the project yielded five volumes, or 520 minutes of videotape, now accessible at the Charlevoix Historical Society's Harsha House Museum film library. There visitors can use a detailed subject index to search for particular scenes for individual research or simply view the films for their entertainment, as did historian and documentary cameraman Earl Young.

Watch for new driveway

A new, temporary driveway is being installed at the main entrance of Northern Michigan Hospital because of ongoing construction.

The new driveway will accommodate patients and visitors entering and exiting the main lobby throughout the construction project. Part of the permanent driveway is being used for construction vehicles entering and exiting the courtyard, where the first phase of the project is slated to begin.

The Christmen Company of Lansing has been selected as the construction management company to lead the project. The first phase of the project includes:

— A structural shell to house new additions including obstetrics, neonatal, endoscopy, and radiology's special procedure room and CT scan room. Initial site preparation work has begun in the courtyard, where some of the new addition work will take place. Steel for the "shell footprint" is expected to arrive soon.

— Renovations to Level II, the cardiovascular unit and the diagnostic rooms in radiology are also included in the first phase of the project.

Patients, family members and visitors are asked to pay attention to posted safety notices and areas that are off-limits, and to be aware of additional construction traffic around the hospital.

State, national candidates gather for local debate

Stupak vs. Carr

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

As national candidates entered the Charlevoix League of Women Voters debate Wednesday at Charlevoix High School, they were asked about their stand on federal standards imposed on states, the national deficit, the death penalty and use of firearms, term limits, college tax credits, the international flow of drugs and militias.

Stupak

"This is democracy at work," said moderator, Pat Ranger, prior to introducing the participants of the timed debate.

Congressman Bart Stupak, D-Menominee, who has served for two terms, said federal standards aren't needed in every area of life, but they are necessary.

Carr

"Pollution doesn't have respect for counties or communities lines," he said. Other areas where federal guidelines are needed are to uphold food and drugs and medical research to cure diseases.

"Government has a responsibility to their citizens," he said. "And citizens have a responsibility to their government."

Republican challenger Bob Carr said that federal standards are not all that's needed. He said that if a community is having a problem, it's their congressman's problems. He called Congress an umbrella or safety net for the people.

"Congress can be the orchestra leader," he said.

Carr doesn't see the value in wholesale cutting of programs to reduce the national deficit.

"I can't waive a magic wand, but I'll try to pinch pennies," he said.

For example, he said rural

Bodem vs. Fournier

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

During the debate, Rep. Beverly Bodem, R-Alpena, and her democratic challenger, Bob Fournier, squared off while answering questions prepared by the league and those in the audience.

Bodem believes the role of government is to set policy regarding issues concerning the people. She supports more flexibility for business and education, noting that the House has recently done away with more than 2,000 outdated rules and regulations.

Bodem

Fournier also supports less government.

"Less government means less regulation, less laws," he said. "Let the people do their jobs."

Fournier added that one way to lower taxes is to move to a part-time legislature.

Fournier

"State government can be improved without spending more money," he said. Bodem said she would reduce state spending by continuing to cut costs within state de-

Two candidates compete for one city council seat

Two candidates are running in November's election for a seat on city council.

The retirement of council member John Cross, III, opens the third ward seat, which covers the southeast area of the city. Cross has served six years.

Bernie R. DeVries, 51, has served on the city planning commission for two and a half years. He is running for city council because he would like to contribute more to the community. He said he has enjoyed his experience on the planning commission, but would like to become more involved in the city's operation.

DeVries

DeVries is married and has two children and four grandchildren. He is employed at Medusa Cement Company. He served in the United States Air Force and is a member of the American Legion.

"I would like to see Charlevoix preserve that small-town feeling and continue to be a great place to raise a family," he said.

DeVries is concerned about senior citizens.

"With more people retiring here now, we have to pay special attention to the needs of our senior citizens," he said.

He said Charlevoix cannot depend on tourism alone, and would like to see it continue to draw new industry with sufficient wages for people in need of jobs. He wants Charlevoix to continue improvements to its infrastructure and to complete its sidewalks.

DeVries said he has worked in management and in labor and is always willing to listen and keep an open mind.

"I would welcome the chance to work closely with the other council members to continue to make our city a better place to live, and try to see that our tax dollars are spent wisely," DeVries said.

City council to get new member in November election

Walt Hufford, 62, is a past chairman of the city planning commission and a former county commissioner. He was director of the chamber of commerce and the Charlevoix Area Hospital. He is running for city council because, he said, public service is a privilege and an opportunity to repay the community.

Hufford is married and has four children and nine grandchildren. He is part owner of Key Controls Electrical Service, and serves as director of CB North.

"My experience in local government and private business will enable me to reach mature, well-reasoned and fair decisions," Hufford said. "I intend to serve as a constructive force to preserve our quality of life and provide for our children's future."

He believes that Charlevoix is doing well and would like to see improvements in infrastructure continue. Charlevoix must do what needs to be done at the most reasonable cost, he said.

Hufford said his decision to run is not a decision he takes lightly, especially after having raised his family in the city for more than 30 years. He believes that if elected he will benefit the city.

"If you're not part of the solution, you're part of the problem," he said. "And I want to be part of the solution."

The non-partisan seat is a two-year term and the newly elected council member will take office at the council meeting following the election Tuesday, Nov. 5. The third ward is the only race among the three wards in the city.

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department is investigating the death of a 56-year-old Grand Rapids man about 2:05 p.m. Saturday, in Marion Township.

James A. Codman was cutting trees in a wooded area in preparation for deer hunting when he was struck in the head by a tree that was cut by a friend. Codman died at the scene of massive head injuries, according to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department.

The Sheriff's department was assisted at the scene by the Charlevoix City Ambulance and the Charlevoix Fire Department Rescue units.

Working to build play space

Construction of the Landscape Structures was supervised by professionals who designed the playground after talking with students about what they wanted.

Bill Trubilowicz peeks through a surveying tool while helping about 50 other volunteers construct the elementary school playground Saturday. Parents and community members installed parascopes, circular slides, swings, parallel bars, bridges and a red fire engine throughout the day, from 7:30 a.m. to evening. Today is the first day of play on the new equipment, which is being funded by donations. Money is still being raised for phase two of the project, which will include more equipment.

School board contemplates new survey on needs

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

The fallout of the failed bond proposal continued to plague the school board during its recent meeting.

The bulk of their time was spent discussing ways to obtain information as to why voters resoundingly voted against the proposal. They focused on the idea of once again surveying the voters, but did so with trepidation.

One problem is cost. The board has already done its share of surveys and a new one may cost $2,000. Some expressed doubt that spending on another survey will not offer new information.

"Spending more money has the potential to backfire on us," board member Larry Levengood said.

Member Jerry Owens voiced concerns that not only would another survey cost too much, but that it might face an apathetic response from taxpayers.

"They'll see it and think 'well they didn't listen to us the first time,' and in the trash it goes," he said. "We need to get off our duffs and say this is what we want to do and do it. I don't want to spend $2,000, $1,000, or even $500 to have the community tell us what to do again."

Another drawback of conducting another survey was that when facing board members voters may not be as forthcoming.

> "We need to get off our duffs and say this is what we want to do and do it. I don't want to spend $2,000, $1,000, or even $500 to have the community tell us what to do again."
> — Jerry Owens, school board member

"Voting is a private and personal thing, and they have the right to choose in that booth," Levengood said. "If approached by a board or faculty member they may be reluctant to discuss it and not tell you the truth."

Middle school principal Dennis VanGuilder said that "having the board involved taints it automatically."

The meeting adjourned without a tangible plan on how to effectively gauge voter feelings in regards to the failed proposal, but they all agreed that this board faces a grave credibility problem with the public.

"If we can't be big enough and humble enough to take criticism and use it to do something better we should get out of the way and let someone else do it," member Ardeth Wieland said. "We are treading water until we

Chase street goblins away, protect treat or treaters

EDITORIAL

Some say the ghosts and goblins are about to come out.

Actually, children around the country are about to embark on the largest annual dress-up day of the year. They will be rewarded with candy or gift certificates at each door where they present their colored, masked faces and declare treat or treat.

Halloween is a child's day to pretend they are someone or something else. Pirates, princesses, doctors and soldiers will come out in force as young people step beyond school and the nightly routine at home. They will take their alter ego from house to house hopping to stuff the pillow or bag they carry. They are seeking stash, so they won't be limited to what mom or dad says they can have while at the grocery store.

While the little ones prepare for their outing, parents should be considering the safety of the costume, its warmth and size (so it doesn't have to be ruined with a winter coat covering it) and where their child should trick-or-treat.

We recommend that people walk with their children in familiar neighborhoods. If sending the younger children out with older siblings, a discussion should prepare them all to stick together and hold hands before crossing the street.

Much of the time spent trick or treating will be in the dark. And because of the myths accompanying the holiday and the excuse to make trouble, there are those real "goblins" who lurk around ready to take advantage of the innocence on the street. Most years there are reports of children getting their bags of candy stolen. Yes, parents can rush to the store and do their best to replace the collection of goodies, but it's not the same. And each year after such an occurence, the child will be less enchanted by their chance to trick or treat.

Let's not let this holiday be remembered by the child as the one when they were mugged for their hard-earned candy. It's unfortunate that these warnings need to precede the fun and exhaustion children experience when being able to stretch their wings. However, even in Charlevoix it's necessary.

Without being obvious, parents or older siblings can keep a watchful eye over the children, not just their own, but also those who are being sent out less prepared. Watch for troublesome people who are extending "practical jokes" from Devil's Night into Halloween.

Keep porches and walkways well lit.

Most of all, have fun. Laugh with the children when they spill their bag and need some help picking up the scattered candy. Let them feel the privilege of staying out a bit later than they are normally allowed. And participate in their enthusiasm for the mystery behind their adventure.

Be their co-pilot through the journey.

Applefest theft a tragedy

Editor:

I was so upset with what happened at the Charlevoix Applefest this year. The weather looked perfect and we would have certainly enjoyed participating. Our daughter-in-law was entered in the show and had her tent set up on Friday, all ready and excited in participating in her first Charlevoix Applefest.

What an awful surprise she received when she returned to her tent at 8:30 a.m. Saturday, ready to spend another day in the cold wind, but anxious to meet new customers. She went into her tent to find that her multi-colored bead property was stolen. This young lady had worked all summer trying to make enough inventory for all of the fall and holiday bazaars. She also had to pay up front a nominal entry fee, which she also lost when she did not have any merchandise to sell. Our daughter-in-law also has a five-week-old little boy, and finds it very difficult to sit and spend as many hours as she needs to do her beading. She was just devastated to find that some person or persons had violated her property without giving any thought to the time and effort she had spent to hand bead all of the jewelry.

We were also very surprised to find that there was no security on the city property. Do we need to post signs Artists Beware of Thieves, or will we now have security on the property for these artists? In all of the previous art fairs she has participated in, Ann Arbor, Rochester, Southfield, Ferndale, Grand Rapids and Saugatuck, she has not ever had anything like this occur.

I do hope we in northern Michigan will not bury our heads in the sand, will now have security at these art fairs and our local government will prosecute these thieves so our young people who are willing to work to earn an income rather than being thieves in the night will be able to.

Misspoken point at local meeting

Editor:

This note is addressed to the members of the Michigan Association of School Personnel (MARSP), Charlevoix chapter.

Dear friends, at our meeting in East Jordan last Wednesday, I led you down the primrose path when we were discussing Public Act 118 of 1994. To clarify: Shall the P.A. 118 banning Bingo as a source of revenue for political parties be approved?

If you wish to support the ban, vote YES on Proposal A.

If you do not support the ban, vote NO.

To Ken Oke and Jim Gray, mea culpa.

Support sought for school trip

Editor:

I am happy to report that the Charlevoix School Board approved our government trip to the presidential inauguration this January in Washington, D.C. The students are very enthusiastic about this amazing opportunity to visit our country's capital, witness the swearing-in of our next president and attend an Inaugural Ball!

We want to thank the Charlevoix community for all of the support you've shown to this point. Although we have raised over $2,000 towards our goal, we still need to raise more. We have held car washes, bake sales, collected Glen's slips and are planning more fund-raisers throughout the balance

My refrigerator holds several Styrofoam boxes neatly stacked like pancakes in which there are delectable and recent leftovers from various restaurants.

Well, the food used to be delectable. After a day or two, it somehow has lost all appeal. I look at the cold unrecognizable glop that's either too soggy to tempt anyone, or dry as a leaf ready to be swept into the trash can.

Neither stove nor microwave can restore the bounce or bloom or fragrance into what was once a gourmet dish.

When did restaurants begin serving these king size portions that are enough for two people? What ever happened to portion control? Not only are Styrofoam boxes foisted on reluctant customers, but worse yet, the large portions cause food to tumble from the dinner plate and onto the table with the first thrust of a fork. Try dipping into a Caesar salad without spilling lettuce or salad dressing all over the place.

I used to think that I was the only one who longed for sensible portion control, but that is no longer true. Diners everywhere have successfully complained and evidently management of even the finest restaurants are listening. Much to my surprise, one can go out to lunch and order half a sandwich almost anywhere.

For dinner, one can order an appetizer or two, such as soup and salad without ordering an entree. (Still, it's better to check first with a phone call, because there are exceptions.)

But there are still other unresolved problems. Since more people are eating out than ever before, chefs ought to remember that man cannot live on escargot alone.

Even the once safe chicken salad has been so "spiced up" with the unrecognizable, that at a recent country club luncheon, one of the guests was heard to remark that the chicken salad was "too gourmet."

One yearns to reach for a fire extinguisher instead of merely a cold glass of water. Young chefs are discovering that the old spices our ancestors died for — nutmeg, cinnamon, ginger, etc. — truly enhance many staple and mundane dishes.

Mistakenly, however, they also believe that carelessly sprinkling an over-abundance of spices into a beurre blanc or white sauce makes a dish taste even better. Wrong.

I've heard on good authority that some alert restaurant owners are cautioning their chefs in the kitchen that their customers are gagging in the dining room. Other restaurants are training waitresses to warn customers that "this dish is spicy."

Today's chef could allow us to add salt and pepper to taste from the handy little shakers on the table and when needed.

The good news is, we're told, that the familiar old staple menus are on the horizon by popular demand. What ever happened to Waldorf Salad?

If it's true that more people are eating out more often, it is imperative that more variety and choices are needed and plain, good digestible food ought to be revived along with a few exotic and unusual dishes to tempt the palate.

Support Roloff for county commission

Editor:

Citizens of the City of Charlevoix and Beaver Island. In the primaries, you voted to elect Shirley Roloff your county commissioner. Whether you knew her personally or not, you made a wise choice.

I have had the pleasure of knowing this lady for many years, and I can testify to her character. She is principled, conscientious and industrious. There is an old saying: "If you want something done, give it to a busy person." This is Shirley Roloff. She is also a real scrapper from whence her endearing nickname "Sparky" derived. She seizes a problem with the tenacity of a bulldog and doesn't let go until it is solved. You can rest assured she will be attentive to the smallest complaint, and will represent all the people in her district on an equal basis. She is an open, honest and fair person.

Since Mr. Gillespie is working hard on a write-in campaign to reverse the primary election results, I urge everyone to return to the polls in November and reaffirm the choice of Shirley Roloff for County Commissioner. I have no doubt. You elect Shirley; you get "True Grit!"

John R. Pidek Sr.

County commission needs change

Editor:

I would like to clarify a couple false statements my opponent made in an advertisement in your paper recently. Rich Gillespie keeps saying I've never set foot on Beaver Island. I have on many occasions made trips to the Island. My most recent visit was accompanied by representative Beverly Bodem.

In his Oct. 16 advertisement, he stated that I had said to him and I quote "Rich, I think you are doing a great job but I'm going to run against you." Sorry Rich, I told you I wanted to tell you personally that I was running against you before you read it in the paper.

Some of the reasons I chose to run against Rich — I saw a serious problem with the county board. I saw a lack of communication between the commissioners and the department heads. I saw commissioners taking it upon themselves to sell taxpayers property without the consent of the other commissioners. Our taxes are too high (the board just recently voted to tax you to the max.) These are some of my concerns I have, and if I thought Rich was doing such a great job, I would have not chosen to run against him.

Sincerely,
Shirley Roloff

These are the names of the 71 known Michigan domestic homicide victims of 1994 and 1995. This list does not include countless others who are living with domestic abuse and who suffer silently. It does tell a story of endless tears and the unimaginable loss of their families, friends and communities. They remind us that while we are moving forward in our actions against domestic abuse, we still have far to climb.

It is clear that a community based approach is necessary to end the violence in our lives and to make our homes safe and nurturing places. We must have the help of our schools, government, employers, health care systems, clergy members, justice systems and social service providers to assist survivors of domestic abuse in speaking out and being free.

Instead of asking the ever present question, "why do women stay?" we should be asking "what

Charlevoix students heading to Washington for leadership studies

Kari Boss and Rhonda Williams, both Charlevoix High School juniors, have been selected to attend The National Young Leaders Conference in Washington, D.C.

The conference is a leadership development program for high school students who have demonstrated leadership potential and scholastic merit. Kari and Rhonda will be among 350 outstanding national scholars attending the conference this week.

The theme of the conference is "The Leaders of Tomorrow Meeting the Leaders of Today." Throughout the six-day conference, Kari and Rhonda will interact with key leaders and news makers from the three branches of government, media and diplomatic corps.

Highlights of the program include welcoming remarks from the floor of the United States House of Representatives and a panel discussion with prominent journalists at the National Press Club. Scholars will visit foreign embassies and receive policy briefings from government officials. Kari and Rhonda may also meet with her Senators and Representative or an appointed member of their staff to discuss important issues facing Charlevoix and the nation.

To complement these special meetings and briefings, Kari will participate in a number of leadership skill-building activities. In one activity, "If I Were President," students role-play the president, members of the Cabinet and representatives from Capitol Hill who must respond to an international crisis involving Russia.

Culminating the National Young Leaders Conference is the "Model Congress," in which scholars assume the roles of United States Representatives by debating, amending and voting on proposed legislation for an official language and immigration reform.

Election time

Republican party members, Phyllis Haggard (left) and Polle Verwys, are working to organize the new county Republican headquarters downtown. The office was opened to provide information to voters and to take in contributions. Hours will be extended as the Tuesday, Nov. 5, election approaches.

Republicans organize

Downtown headquarters opens

The Charlevoix County Republican Party opened its headquarters and area Republicans are coming in to grab up yard signs, posters, bumper stickers and buttons.

The headquarters opened Oct. 11 at 303 Bridge Street. Phyllis Haggard and Polle Verwys are helping organize and staff the office.

The office is here to get information out to the people, Verwys said. It is especially important that senior citizens know they aren't going to lose social security, Medicare or Medicaid, she said.

Verwys, who is 83, said she has been a Republican since she was 18. She describes herself as a "strong Republican." She has six children.

"All good Republicans," she said.

The headquarters plans to be open weekday afternoons and on Saturdays. The hours will be extended as the election approaches.

Anyone wanting to volunteer help can call the headquarters at 547-1925, or Verwys at 547-2307.

have I done to help victims stay safe and hold abusers accountable for their actions?" The days of victim blaming and minimization of domestic abuse must end.

It's time to accept that wars and devastation do not always begin in some far off place. They are not only perpetrated by strangers and foreigners. They begin at home, in an America where, in 1992, almost four million women were physically abused by their husbands or boyfriends. As this happens, we sit back and contemplate the abstract notion of peace on Earth. I feel (as do many others, I'm sure) that in order to move toward that image of hope, we need to begin to focus on our homes and communities.

October is National Domestic Violence Awareness Month. Please take the time to educate yourself about the dynamics of domestic abuse. You may be surprised by how much of an impact you can make in your job or community to end violence and abuse. If you are a survivor of domestic abuse, a friend or family member of a survivor, please feel free to call the Women's Resource Center's Domestic Abuse Program 24 hour hotline at (616) 347-0082 or 1-800-275-1995 for shelter, counseling or information.

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Lowell Anderson
Charlevoix Assembly of God

John F. Kennedy's famous phrase "Ask not what the country can do for you, rather ask what you can do for your country" has become one of the quotes of the century. It is indeed important to ask the right question.

Too often Christians are asking "what can my church do for me?" rather than asking the question "what can I do for my church?" While it is important that church involvement meets the needs of the individual parishioner, it is likewise important that the parishioner meets the needs of the church. If a congregation is comprised of more takers than givers, then everyone is shortchanged. Everyone needs to give at least as much as he takes.

The vitality of a congregation is dependent on the faithfulness and consistent involvement of everyone. It's not only important that the pastor is always there for you in your time of need, but that other "brothers" and "sisters" in your church family are there for you - and in turn, you are there for them.

Faithful attendance, therefore, is not simply a matter of getting one's own needs met but being there for others.

According to Guinnes Book of Records, Roland E. Daab of Columbia, Ill., held the record for unbroken attendance in Sunday school. On May 23, 1976, he attended his 3,000th consecutive Sunday school session - an unbroken period of more than 57 years. I simply cannot believe that a record like that is self-serving alone. There must have been a few of those Sundays that it would have been more in keeping with Roland's self-interests to have gone fishing, visited the family out of town or just slept in.

I tend to think that Roland Daab did not attend without one absence in 57 years just to get his name in the world record book. A record like that speaks of being an example to others, faithfulness to a commitment and being there for others.

The right question at this point seems to be "what would my church be like if I was supportive, committed and as faithful as Roland Daab? What if every Christian was like him?

Hands-on health training for students

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

The students in Charlevoix High School's new health occupations program are chomping at the bit to get into hands-on hospital work, but will have to be patient.

Textbook study and in-class exercises have to come first. The students also need to learn behavior, ethics and confidentiality before going into the hospital departments, said Kaye Beatty, class instructor.

The vocational education course is one of five programs at the high school where students learn practical knowledge and skills outside of the normal classroom structure. This program is designed to give students insight and preparation for occupations in the medical field.

Danica Kilander, a junior, plans a career in occupational therapy.

"I hope this class helps on my college application," she said.

Her classmate, senior Sara Ward, is thinking of medical school. She finds the program interesting and challenging, but both students are anxious to experience hands-on training.

"So far, all we've learned is how to wash our hands," Kilander said.

Principal Gary Grundman worked with Charlevoix Area Hospital to establish the program. He had seen health occupations vocational education programs at other schools and felt it would be an asset in Charlevoix.

The program is a partnership between the high school and the hospital. The curriculum is designed by state guidelines.

"We have experts in our own hospital that add much to the program, people with degrees and expertise," Grundman said.

The classes meet at the hospital. The departments, including surgery, are ready to provide access to the students when the time is right. Hospital president, Richard Krueger, said the hospital is excited about the program.

"It benefits us and the students," Krueger said. It gives the students insight into medical occupations, and let's them know there are some exciting jobs in Charlevoix.

"Hopefully, some students will stay in the area and become employees," he said. Krueger pointed out that health occupations are a large industry in the country, with opportunities in many areas.

"There is a lot of opportunity in technical jobs, like x-ray technicians and ultra-sound technicians," Krueger said. There is an emphasis on nurses with geriatric training also.

Instructor Kaye Beatty, an R.N. with a labor and delivery speciality, said the students in her classes are mostly interested in obstetrics, but the medical field is enormous.

"Any child interested in the health career area could have a career," Beatty said. Other than patient care, jobs are available as a medical technician, a contact lens technician, a massage therapist or a speech therapist.

Beatty is pleased with the program as its first-year development. She said there was a large response to the class when it was offered to high schoolers.

"We had more than 40 apply. We had to eliminate the ninth-grade because of the limit for classes," Beatty said.

There are two sections in the program with 17 students in one section and 11 students in the other.

Grundman hopes to have an advanced class, as well as an entry-level class next year. The plans are supported by the hospital.

"Every indication is that the program is going well," said hospital president Richard Krueger. "We hope the program continues indefinitely."

partments. Twenty-one tax cuts in the last five and a half years have saved taxpayers $1.7 billion, an average of $469 per household, she said.

With the federal government considering channeling money for the poor through state block grants, Bodem said the funds will get where they're really needed.

"The federal government should set broad policy and send the money to the state in block grants," she said. "We know where the money should go."

"Block grants are cool if you're the governor and have the money to spend as you want," Fournier said: He cautions this approach to funding programs for the needy.

Other questions posed to Bodem and Fournier included their stand on the environment, financial aid for college and the war on drugs.

Fournier said the country needs to develop a plan for custodianship over the earth, and that it needs to come from the people.

"We need to get a total plan," he said.

Bodem said that one way to help the environment is for the state to enforce the current water and air quality regulations in place.

Both candidates said they support education.

"We the middle class can get ahead by education," Fournier said. "Loans are a wonderful way to go. But people need to know that they have to pay them back."

Bodem said that numerous scholarships go unclaimed each year. She suggested that people seeking school funding visit the local library, which offers information on what scholarships are available, what the qualifications are and how to apply. She agrees that loans are a good way for middle income students to pay for school.

Both candidates agree that drug abuse is a problem in northern Michigan.

"It's widespread throughout the state," Bodem said. "It's spreading like wildfire."

She encourages continued support for the D.A.R.E. education program that involves school children and other ways to show parents and children the danger of using drugs.

"It's alcohol, too," she said, "not just hard drugs."

Bodem supports the passage of an act that umbrellas the illegal status of many drugs. In the past, once a drug was outlawed, manufacturers just needed to change one component and the drug would be legal. The act stops this from occurring.

Fournier said alcohol is probably the biggest of drug problems, he said, at least in the Alpena area. He said people need to adopt the attitude that drugs is not the way they are going to travel.

Stupak, Carr face off on gun control, deficit, drugs hospitals should be getting their sharing of federal funding and that Medicaid, Medicare and Social Security need to be guaranteed.

"It's a commitment we made long ago," he said.

Stupak said the national deficit has been decreased by 60 percent, down to $109 billion. The financial responsibility for the nation begins with every member of Congress. He said he returned $120,000 of his personal budget to be applied toward the nation's debt.

Continued decreasing of the deficit includes operating by a balanced budget. He asked taxpayers at the debate why people making more than $65,000 no longer have to pay into the Social Security fund. He said they should be required pay in to help ensure that Social Security is always there.

Stupak took a stand against the death penalty accept in "limited cases" and said the Brady Bill really doesn't effect Michigan because the state already has a check system that requires prospective buyers to go through background checks before being issued a license.

He said the ban on assault weapons hasn't been a major factor in saving lives since most crimes don't involve them.

Carr also doesn't support the death penalty.

"If I were asked to pull the switch, I would not," he said.

He, too, doesn't believe a ban on assault weapons is the answer for street violence. He supports educating people on good gun management.

Questions on term limits were an issue at the local debate.

Stupak does not favor law limiting a Congressman's length of time to serve.

"The ballot boxes decide," he said.

Through imposing such limits, Stupak said big states and lobbyists gain power. Elected officials from large states can vote in block and be additionally influential while lobbyists become more persuasive because the elected leaders are too new to be knowledgeable about the issues.

"They're there longer than you would ever be," he said.

Carr said that if he wins the election, there will be term limits.

College tax credits is a plan proposed by President Bill Clinton. Stupak briefly explained the credits, noting that students can get a $1 credit for every dollar they spend on college or job retraining.

Carr said funding education and balancing the budget is challenging. Stupak noted that the credits are already included in the balanced-budget plan.

When addressing drug trafficking, Carr said that "smuggling is a fact of life." He said the way to control the flow is to motivate people.

"Talk about it. Talk about it. Talk about it," he said. "We will see a change."

Stupak said that the zero tolerance policy of the previous administration didn't work. Enforcement is not working. People need to be educated on drug abuse treatment and recovery. He said it's a key to the number of people in prison.

"The cycle has to be broken," he said, of people repeatedly abusing drugs and turning to crime to support habits.

In final comments, each candidate offered his opinion on militias.

"These people have dropped out of society," Stupak said. "Back when I was growing up, we called them hippies."

Stupak suggests reaching out to militia members while still showing them that they have to respect the laws of the land.

Carr said that while preaching about individual freedom, militias are "stepping on other people's freedoms."

"They think they know more," he said. "They think that they're better."

Both candidates will continue to travel the district and participate in debates until the Tuesday, Nov. 5, general election.

Board faces community distrust find out why the support is not there and it obviously has to do with us."

She points to the simple fact that the bond issue failing is evidence that something is wrong.

"In the 20-plus years I've been involved with the schools you can count on one hand the number of proposals that have been defeated."

In another area of lengthy discussion the board set out to define some of its goals for upcoming years. After wrangling with semantics, they settled upon a long list which board member Sulane Hamilton helped clarify as defining facility needs, addressing elementary class size and controlling the budget.

"Those are heavy duty tasks and if we could manage those issues this year we would be doing very well," Hamilton said.

In tidying up old business, the board approved unanimously to approve the additional days of instruction now required by the Michigan Department of Education. Superintendent Roberta Jackson explained that the changes and extra hours of class work would be implemented gradually over the next few years, starting at the elementary level.

Also the board approved without objection the sale of two stagnant vehicles owned by the school. A 1984 station wagon will be sold for $80 and a 1978 pickup truck will be sold for parts. Neither of the vehicles are in running condition.

United Way nears halfway mark

With the help of local businesses and individuals the CharEm United Way has reached 45 percent of its 1996-97 fund-raising goal. More than $85,000 has been pledged to United Way. This year the organization hopes to raise $195,000 for health and human service needs in Charlevoix and Emmet counties.

Local dollars raised in the two county area will remain here to help support 30 organizations.

"Many companies and individuals have made a commitment to make a difference in our communities," said United Way executive director, Lisa Ashley. "The United Way is an opportunity for many individuals to pool their resources to make the biggest impact for their contribution. We increased our goal this year by a significant amount and our contributors are stepping in to help us reach it."

United Way agencies provide a comprehensive range of services to the community including education and prevention, elderly respite care, mentoring relationships, domestic violence intervention, substance abuse services, hospice care and many other services. Last year, more than 16,000 residents used United Way agency services.

The CharEm United Way fund-raising campaign runs through Friday, Nov. 1.

Anyone wishing to contribute may contact the United Way office at 347-0115.

Case of whooping cough found in Emmet County infant

District Health Department No. 3 is warning parents of the continuing danger of childhood diseases and strongly urging them to make sure all of their children are fully immunized. Dr. Brian L. Youngs, medical director, is especially concerned about the case of pertussis (whooping cough) reported in an infant in Emmet County.

Whooping cough is a highly contagious bacterial disease involving the respiratory tract. Pertussis is primarily spread by direct contact with discharges from the nose and throat of infected people. Between 70 and 90 percent of susceptible household contacts of a person with pertussis will develop the disease.

People who have or may have pertussis should stay away from young children and infants until properly treated. A person can transmit pertussis from six days following exposure to three weeks after the onset of coughing episodes. Treatment of cases with certain antibiotics such as erythromycin can shorten the contagious period.

The single most effective control measure is maintaining the highest possible level of immunization in the community. Most cases can be prevented by routine immunizations with a series of DPT shots beginning at about six weeks to two months of age. The vaccine for pertussis is usually given in combination with diphtheria and tetanus.

Immunizations are offered in each county by the health department. If you believe your child is ill, please contact a physician for evaluation and treatment.

Sheriff offers holiday cautions

Some of the gremlins that come out at Halloween are very real, warns Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater.

"These are the people who have no fun in their hearts and seek to discourage or injure children who come to their homes for trick-or-treat night," Lasater said.

Parents are cautioned to be extra aware of their children's safety during the Halloween season, especially with so many activities taking place after dark. The sheriff's department offers these safety thoughts:

— Parents should escort small children to homes in the neighborhood, visiting only people they know.

— For older children, it is a good idea to put safety reflecting tape on their costumes to make them easier to see at night by motorists.

— Remind children to look both ways before crossing the street and to use the crosswalk wherever possible.

— Go out in daylight and carry a flashlight in case of delay.

— Advise youngsters to approach pets with caution; wearing a costume may frighten the animal and cause it to attack.

— Make sure a child's vision is not blocked because of a mask or overhanging wig or hood.

— Only give and accept wrapped or packaged candy.

Inspect each treat before permitting your child to eat it. If you should find any contaminated foods or other safety violations report them to Sheriff Lasater. Lasater and his deputies will help parents and children practice "safety first" and keep our neighborhoods gremlin-free this Halloween.

Trick or treat rules

Trick-or-Treat do's and don'ts:

— Follow curfew hours, which includes trick or treating from 6-8 p.m. in Charlevoix.

— Do not go out alone. Go with an adult.

— Travel with friends.

— Stay in your neighborhood.

— Go only to those homes which are well-lighted.

— Do not go inside a home or building.

— Have parents check treats before eating.

— Do not eat any treats before they are examined.

— Some hospitals will x-ray treats (check with your local hospital).

— Throw away fruit or home-made treats.

On the Edge prepares closing party

On the Edge is having a Halloween blowout before locking its door for an undetermined time period. Owner, John Norman, has received offers by prospective buyers, according to his mother, Gloria Barnes. However, no decisions have been made as to if the business will be sold or just temporarily closed.

"We need a nap after summer," said Gloria Barnes, mother of John Norman, the restaurant's owner. "We're going to have a party, and quite frankly, we need it."

The party is 5 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 31, the business' last day open. It will run until "all the ghosts and goblins disappear," according to an invitation flyer. There will be a $5 cover charge unless guests come in costume. Entrance is free for those in festive dress. Prizes will be offered for the best costume.

Norman will be using his inventory to make a variety of dishes for the party.

For more information, call 547-2929.

Weather can affect safety

If Halloween brings in rainy weather, parents are cautioned to pay extra attention crossing the streets with their children while trick or treating, according to city police chief, Dennis Halverson.

City hours for children to be out are 6-8 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 31. Halverson also asks parents to make sure that children's masks don't obstruct their view because of a danger in crossing streets and in the children tripping while walking through the neighborhoods.

To prepare children for Halloween, a local police officer spent Monday at the elementary school conducting a Halloween safety session with students from kindergarten to fourth-grade. White candy bags that will reflect headlights were handed out.

Foursome wins Charlevoix Pro-Am Slam

The team of Joe Beer, Brian Brogan, Denny LaCroix and Bruce Schepeler birdied the first two play-off holes to best two other teams at the first annual Pro-Am Slam at the Charlevoix Country Club Oct. 12.

The winners also birdied the last 12 holes they played to finish tied at 13 under par with the teams comprised of Joe Etienne, Walt Franczek, John Lindeman, Bob Makoski and Don Fardig, Bud Jackson, Mike Jackson and Pete Smith.

The format was a scratch scramble, with a maximum of two professionals allowed per team.

The event drew 13 teams from around the state, with some competitors coming from as far as Detroit.

"We're happy and proud to have won this for the club and the city," said Schepeler, Charlevoix Country Club's head golf professional.

Brogan and LaCroix are Big Rock employees and Country Club members, while Beer, a former Big Rock employee, presently resides in Benton Harbor.

Tourney topped by Radio Shack

It was an exciting final week for the U-12 Division as Radio Shack bested Re/Max 2-0 to earn a tie for the regular season championship with Re/Max. John DiMartino and Bryce Daly scored goals for Radio Shack. In a shootout to determine first tournament seeding, Allison Manker sent a shot over the keeper's head to give Re/Max first draw.

Northwest Design took regular season third place with a scoreless tie against fourth place Lion's Club.

Radio Shack dominated the tournament cruising to three victories by a combined score of 14-0 to take the championship. They defeated Northwest Design 5-0 in the championship game. Travis Smith and Daly tallied two goals apiece and DiMartino added a fifth. Daly lead the league in scoring with 19 goals.

Despite the defeat, Donovan Swanson of Northwest Design earned outstanding goalkeeper award. Behind him Northwest Design advanced to the championship game with a 2-1 win over Lion's Club and an exciting 1-0 shootout victory over Re/Max in the tournament's semifinal game.

"I'm proud of the whole team."

Beaver Island soccer team finishes third

The Northern Lights League closed its 1996 Soccer Season this past weekend with Grand Marais taking first place in the League, Mackinac Island second, Beaver Island third, Paradise took fourth, and Hannahville fifth.

The Northern Lights League is comprised of the five smallest Class D schools from the Northern Lower Peninsula and Upper Peninsula. Each school competes in four league games. Teams travel some distance to play a league game on Friday evenings, and because of the distances traveled, play another game the following Saturday morning to give the teams extra competitive play. Plane travel is not uncommon.

The win/loss record is as follows: Grand Marais, 4-0, Mackinac Island 3-1, Beaver Island 2-2, Paradise 1-3 losses and Hannahville 0-4.

Basket maker shares skill at convention

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

A Charlevoix area woman's love of basket weaving has taken her to Hawaii and Thailand, where she gathered ideas and weaving techniques from natives and other basket weavers.

Carol Madison has been weaving baskets for 12 years. She said the trips were wonderful and beneficial. In Thailand she visited with village tribes.

The queen of Thailand is promoting basket making by the tribes to get them away from an economy headed by opium sales, Madison said.

Madison teaches classes in the weaving through Charlevoix and Petoskey community education.

For the fifth year, she has been selected to teach basketry at the 15th Annual Association of Michigan Basketmakers Convention. The convention will be held on Wednesday-Sunday, Oct. 23-27, in Grand Rapids at the Amway Grand Plaza Hotel and Grand Center.

Madison has been asked to teach the techniques of three baskets — a twined bird house made from smoked round rattan, a rib-constructed round smoked reed door basket, and a round cedar bark basket that uses a cross-stitch technique of waxed linen.

Nearly 900 of Michigan's 1,800 basket weavers will meet to weave baskets under the direction of teachers from various parts of the United States, Japan and Canada at the annual convention. The Michigan convention is the largest conference of basket weavers in the country.

"There are no machine made baskets," Madison said. "Every basket you see is made by hand."

Madison works with various woods, including rattan, cedar bark, pine bark and willow. She orders some woods from suppliers, but also collects her own.

"I live in the country with my husband, three daughters and Golden Retriever," Madison said. "When I'm not in the car transporting children, I like to harvest barks and gather materials for use from the woods surrounding my home."

She uses stains from natural substances. Because they have no chemicals, the stains are safe for food.

Madison sells her work locally at Plain Jane & Company and Sturgeon River Pottery.

CB North expands services, creates new positions

Francis B. Flanders, CB North, chairman, president and chief executive officer announces recent promotions or reassignments as a result of CB Financial Corporation's comprehensive retail delivery system strategic plan implemented earlier this year.

Under the direction of Steven W. Seely, president and chief operating officer of CB Financial Corporation, a retail strategic plan has been developed to service financial centers through a "hub and spoke" system. A "hub" financial center offers all of the products and services; while the "spoke" locations offer banking services customers need on a frequent basis, with specialized services offered by appointment at the customer's convenience. As part of the plan, office enhancements have been made, including a new automatic teller machine in Bellaire.

The following new positions have been created to either serve the customer directly in a sales capacity or to increase support to behind the scene areas providing service efficiencies:

Thomas R. Land, assistant vice president and retail market manager, is responsible for growth, management and profitability of the Bellaire, Central Lake, Eastport, Ellsworth branches and retail services of the Traverse City bank. Lane has more than 14 years of banking experience. He received his bachclor of business management from Ferris State College and a master's in finance from Central Michigan University.

Land

Curtis G. O'Neil, assistant vice president and regional consumer lending manager, is responsible for loan management for both direct and indirect loans, as well as the development of new products, delivery systems and the overall competitiveness of the CB North market area. He has more than 13 years of banking experience, primarily in consumer lending with several northern Michigan Banks. O'Neil received his bachelor of business administration from Eastern Michigan University, and is a graduate from the Northern Michigan School of Banking.

Gym rocks with steel drums

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

The gymnasium was already rocking with elementary school kids waving their arms and stomping their feet to the music when a member of the performing steel band shouted "Everybody scream."

The aching arches must have shivered.

The Trinidad Tripoli Steel Band, a reggae-rock band delighted high school and elementary school students with two performances Oct. 15 at the high school. The band also had a good time.

"We enjoy performing for the kids more than any nightclub or other performances," said Hugh Borde, director of the band. "Their reaction is amazing."

The six members of the band are brothers and sisters who have been performing together for 19 years. The group was discovered by Liberace, who saw them performing. Originally from Trinidad and Tobago in the West Indies, they were brought to the United States with the help of Liberace in the mid-1960s. They performed as his opening act for years.

The group has appeared on the Ed Sullivan Show, the Johnny Carson Show and the Merv Griffin Show. Borde said he was honored by President Ronald Reagan for his contribution to steel band music in this country.

The Charlevoix Arts Council brought the group to town, said Karen Lerch, a teacher at the high school. Lerch coordinated the performances with the arts council.

"It was a nice treat to have them here," Lerch said. "Everyone really enjoyed this. Some students said this was the best assembly yet."

St. Mary's School and Northwest Academy students also attended the performances.

Trinidad Tripoli Steel Band left Charlevoix for its next performance at Princeton University.

Charlevoix woman new foster worker

She holds a master's in Community Agency Counseling from Western Michigan University. Her previous work experience includes counseling in mental health service offices.

Along with another new foster care worker, Zorica Malek, O'Brien will be responsible for the agency's foster care cases in Charlevoix and Emmet counties. She will also recruit new foster homes.

Child and Family Services is a private, nonprofit agency serving twelve counties and is partially funded by United Way.

Cross country teams prepare for regional race, girls favored

The Rayder cross country teams came one step closer to the upcoming regional race by participating in the Edwardson Memorial Invitational in Elk Rapids Saturday.

Teams from seven schools attended the invitational, including such rival forces as Benzie Central and Traverse City. Neither the Charlevoix boys nor girls were running with a full lineup. Several runners were advised to nurse injuries and fatigue for the upcoming regional race, which will be held Saturday, Oct. 26, at Schuss Mountain. The girls' team finished sixth while the boys' came in seventh for the race.

The finishes come after the girls' team captured a three consecutive conference title Oct. 16 during a race in Kalkaska. The team finished first out of 10 full teams with a score of 55. Elk Rapids came in second with 102. This is the team's third straight conference title.

Candice Vandergriff and Chelsea Gorkiewicz ranked one and two, respectively, with Vandergriff finishing in 19:51 and Gorkiewicz in 20:23. Rachel Newcomb, eleventh, and Monica Browe, sixteenth, received honorable mention with 21:03 and 21:32.

Johanna Moore ran her way into lifting the team to its conference title.

"It was a big day for her," said head coach, Ken Plude.

Moore was the depth that ensured the victory when she slipped from seventh to fifth place in the run.

"This is her first time running on varsity," Plude said.

The boys' team finished fifth out of 11 schools in the conference race. East Jordan unseated the Rayders as conference champs as they claimed four of the top 20 spots in the race, 64-127.

Two of Charlevoix's runners received honorable mention, Nate Martin, who finished thirteenth with 17:09 and Hugo Jimenez with 17:31.

After taking Saturday's race easy, Plude feels good going into the regionals. The top three teams from the boys' and girls' races will advance to state competition. Plude said Charlevoix's region is known as the toughest in the state.

"Our region is sometimes called the region from you know where," Plude said.

However, the girl's team is favored to advance.

"We're definitely a top-three team if we run well," he said.

Plude expects Claire, McBain and Benzie to be tough competition. McBain and Benzie are favored for first and second place with several other top teams — including Charlevoix — hoping to slip into the third spot.

Plude hopes the same depth that enabled the Rayders to capture the conference title will lead them to state. During the title race, a couple of top runners fell back. Other runners were able to help pull the team into first place.

The teams will be running seven athletes. Racing for the Rayders' girls' team are Candice Vandergriff, Chelsea Gorkiewicz, Tricia Hodge, Liza Gorkiewicz, Winter Kyvik, Rachel Newcomb and Monica Browe. Hugo Jimenez, Nate Martin, Brian Martinus, Marc Dohm, Jeff Popenhagen, Allen Keehn and Nick Grosberg will run for the boy's team.

"You got one day, you make or break," Plude said of the upcoming race. There will be 19 schools competing for the top three spots.

Enjoy fast food at home

Have you thought lately about which of the practically hundreds of fast food restaurants is your favorite? If not, take a minute to do so. Now, the important step — ask yourself why that particular restaurant's food appeals to you.

Is the food healthier than what is fixed at home? Does it taste better? And, is it really faster?

The answer to the first question is generally "no." The second question depends and the third can be answered with "not necessarily."

What if there is a way to prepare healthier, tastier, faster food at home?

The Food For Thought Lecture for November is "Fast Food at Home." Bring a pencil and paper and learn how to prepare fast, delicious meals at home. Take notes, collect recipes and prepare next week's menu.

There is no charge for the class. It will be held from 7-8:30 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 6, in the Community Health Education Center, across from the main entrance of Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey.

Preregistration is required. To register, please call HealthAccess at (800) 248-6777.

Enjoy fast food at home

Have you thought lately about which of the practically hundreds of fast food restaurants is your favorite? If not, take a minute to do so. Now, the important step — ask yourself why that particular restaurant's food appeals to you.

Is the food healthier than what is fixed at home? Does it taste better? And, is it really faster?

The answer to the first question is generally "no." The second question depends and the third can be answered with "not necessarily."

What if there is a way to prepare healthier, tastier, faster food at home?

The Food For Thought Lecture for November is "Fast Food at Home." Bring a pencil and paper and learn how to prepare fast, delicious meals at home. Take notes, collect recipes and prepare next week's menu.

There is no charge for the class. It will be held from 7-8:30 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 6, in the Community Health Education Center, across from the main entrance of Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey.

Rayder runners take regional title

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Being a champion cross country team is as much luck as it is skill, said Charlevoix head coach Ken Plude. He should know, he's been involved in coaching both boys' and girls' Rayder teams for 11 years.

Saturday, he will be taking seven of the city's top runners to Brooklyn for the state championship at the Michigan International Speedway.

Charlevoix is one of 21 schools who have advanced to state finals. There are 140 Class C schools in the state.

"It's just like the regional," Plude said. "You can't go rerun it because it's a tie. You've got one chance."

The Rayders took their one chance at regionals Saturday and ran their way into first place. The top three of 19 teams from that race are advancing to state.

The team did tie. And there wasn't a tie-breaking race. Instead, the time of each team's sixth runner determined the winner.

Monica Browe pulled the Rayders past Benzie for the win.

Plude called the race a "squeaker." Regardless, the team has made Charlevoix history by being the school's first girls' cross country team to ever take regionals.

"We've been second a lot," he said, "but no firsts."

This victory is extra sweet for Plude and the runners. It was a race taken by teamwork, determination and depth.

"No one person did it," Plude said. "Everyone needs to pass that person ahead of them. If one person would have let someone by them, there wouldn't have been a win."

At the close of the race and the initial presentation of regional results, the Rayders didn't think they had topped their competition. Then a Charlevoix fan discovered the computer calculations determining the

A storyteller's storyteller

Clayton Smith preserves grandpas' stories

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Storytelling down through generations is a dying art.

Clayton "Clayt" Smith is determined to sculpt Charlevoix's stories into everlasting masterpieces.

Even though most people no longer take time to listen to grandpa tell of days-gone-by, Smith will. He spent nearly a year traveling from home to home, capturing stories of elderly friends, family and neighbors in the Charlevoix area.

"I know these people and I know they've had interesting lives," the 80-year-old said, leaning back from the kitchen table in his Dickies overalls.

Smith has seen many of his friends die. His desire to keep their stories alive drove him as he interviewed some of the area's best storytellers with his tape recorder in hand.

Now, nearly two years after the journey, those conversations have been preserved for all in a published volume entitled "Tales By the Fireside, Charlevoix Stories Collected by Clayton Smith."

When Smith first set off to record the stories, he carried a videocamera. His approach appeared to stifle conversation.

"People tend to clam up when you get that camera on them," he said. His success came from using a mini-cassette recorder. Before the interviewing was through, Smith had collected stories from 30-some elders. They were then typed up by Arlene Staley and copy edited by his wife, Katheryn, who has a journalism degree. The cover of the book, sketched by area artist, Jim Annis, shows a grandfather passing his memories onto the youngsters.

Smith's masterpiece contains stories and poems of 24 people and couples. Some were cut because of the expense of publishing a larger volume. But the availability of the book doesn't end Smith's push to persuade people to tell their stories.

"Today's lifestyle and pace is so much faster," he said. "We used to entertain ourselves. We were closer knitted.

"Families have lost something. You sit and watch that tube (television.)"

Smith flows easily between his days of planting trees and fighting forest fires through a government assignment with the C.C.C. camps, his 40 years spent peddling fruit throughout the Upper Peninsula and trapping beavers for a bounty from the county.

"Everybody ought to write down a few of the stories for posterity," he said.

Long-time sheriff challenged in election

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

The race for Charlevoix County Sheriff pits 20-year incumbent George Lasater and Edward R. Johnson.

Johnson, 48, is a newcomer to the county political scene, but is known throughout Charlevoix as owner of Judy's Restaurant. He brings to the election seven years of experience on the police force in Clawson. He graduated summa cum laude with an associates of science degree in law enforcement from Oakland Community College. He has resided in Charlevoix for the past eight years. He and his wife of 29 years have two children.

"I feel that through both my business and law enforcement experience, I have the ability to run the sheriff's office," he said. "We need new ideas and new approaches to move the department forward. Twenty years is long enough and it is time for a change."

As sheriff, Johnson would work to ensure a smooth transition into the 9-1-1 system, expand the county jail, implement a cadet-community service of-

Smith follows family tradition, grandpa

Clayt remembers ventures in the swamp cutting cedar with his grandfather. In the winter months, frozen ants could be found inside. Smith can see grandpa picking them up and popping them into his mouth.

"He said they tasted spicy," Smith said. He found it true when he took a taste. "To this day, if I'm splitten' wood, I'll take and eat a couple of these ants."

Telling stories is a skill, onc that Smith said many Beaver Island residents have perfected because of the long winters spent on the 55-square-mile island.

And though he says he's not a man of education, Smith has spent years developing his storytelling style. Some of his stories are found within the pages of his new book, which is being given to his own family members as a way of his passing Smith legends down the generational trail.

"It sort of runs in the family to tell stories," he said. He takes a sip of decaf coffee from a cup that reads: "I'm not deaf. I'm ignoring you."

Smith's grandchildren might remember the way he left a pail near his harvested produce to collect payment from those who came up the drive for pumpkins and squash. They might show their children the trappers cabin grandpa built in his yard in remembrance of Art Stoel, his brother-in-law who died at a young age on Beaver Island while trapping coyotes with his 9-year-old daughter. They probably won't remember the latest story, one of a partridge flying into the kitchen window this fall and dying.

Two feathers sticking out of the brim of Smith's hat help deliver the event into the story repertoire.

This is Smith's second publication in which he shares stories with interested readers. It could be the last for the son of a Central Lake school teacher. But retirement isn't looming for Smith. He works around his farm and stays busy year-round.

"I do as much physical work as two men who punch a time clock," he said.

He'll continue to perfect the trappers cabin, watch his grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren grow and carve the statues that mark his yard with signs of his passion to tell stories, day or night.

Smith had 300 books published. They are available at Elzinga Farm Market, the Charlevoix Historical Society and through Smith.

Commissioner refuses to give up seat without fight

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

If the race for District 6 county commissioner seems like a re-run, don't fret because it is. However, only one name will appear on the Nov. 5 ballot.

Shirley Roloff defeated incumbent Richard Gillespie in the Aug. 6 primary election by 43 votes. Gillespie has re-entered the race as a write-in candidate.

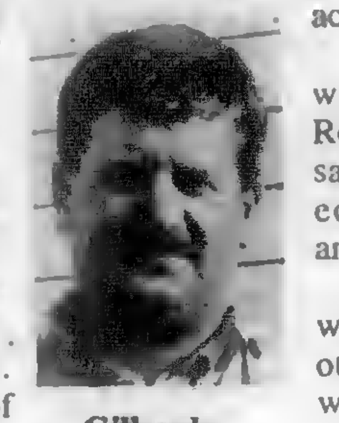
The five other seats on the commission are uncontested.

Gillespie, a native of Charlevoix County who resides on Beaver Island, cited low voter turnout as a major factor in his defeat.

"I feel more qualified and capable. I would not be a write-in candidate if there was not a need," Gillespie said. "All the work I've done has evaporated, and I blame myself for not campaigning hard enough in the primary."

One issue of particular concern to Gillespie is making sure the residents of Beaver Island have a voice and that it is heard.

"Without my position, the island will have no effective representation," he said. "An island resident can't drive to the county building, can't go to a meeting, or can't register a complaint without difficulty. They are kind of stuck."



Gillespie

He points out that the completion of the King's Highway project would not have occurred had the island not had representation, and adds that the new 140-foot ferry needs an island touch to make sure it is installed and run properly.

Roloff, however, bristles at the notion that she would be unable to meet the needs of island residents.

"I stand behind my word that I'll always be there for them," she said, adding that island residents are a "special group of people" and that "the two can work as one, if you have good leadership you can accomplish many things together."

Leadership is another issue which has dominated this race. Roloff entered the race because she saw friction and an overall lack of communication and teamwork among council members.

"I want to get six people to work as a team, to talk and let each other know what's happening. That would be my first goal," she said.

Roloff, a 23-year Charlevoix resident who runs her own business, Charlevoix Canvas, would call upon her experience as a 12-year veteran of city council, six years as mayor pro-tem, and as an active volunteer in the community to help accomplish that.

She added that it would have been just as easy to simply criticize the board for its lack of leadership, but that it would not fit her personal style.

"I believe if you've got a problem, you don't sit back and criticize. If you think you should do something, you should get involved."

Roloff

Gillespie points to his appointment to chair numerous committees as evidence that he can be entrusted to add the right leadership to the board for the next four years. Currently, he chairs the public safety, judicial, and building and grounds committees.

"I have the confidence of my board peers, and I think that speaks for itself," he said. "I did not run for this job looking for a place to sit, but because I had issues I want to deal with and I still do."

Roloff remains convinced that the board is wrought with friction and suffers from a communication breakdown particularly between the commissioners and department heads.

"I feel the department heads are the backbone of the whole system and should be able to view their ideas with the commissioners and know what's happening before they read it in the paper," she said.

Both republicans, the candidates share similar views on taxes. Roloff, with Perot-like inflection, said, "If you don't need it, don't get it. If you don't need that extra dollar, don't take it."

Meanwhile, Gillespie shudders at having to use taxpayers' dollars for such things as a full-time animal control officer, a new county administrator, and road improvements, but is willing to modify his views if the people feel the need is there. Specifically, road improvements.

"I am no proponent of raising people's taxes," he said, "but we cannot stand by and watch our road network fall apart."

Past miscalculations shuts down Big Rock Point plant

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Big Rock Point nuclear power plant has shut down to analyze equipment near the nuclear core for its response to high temperatures and humidity.

"That is where the harsh environment would most likely occur," said Big Rock Point public affairs director, Tim Petrosky.

Because of an error in a computer program used to test the plant's equipment in the 1980s, the parts will again be qualified, Petrosky said.

The plant shut down Oct. 23 to begin the computer analysis. A decade ago the tests involved actually putting the parts in hot, humid temperatures. Now, computer analy-

Don't just preach democracy, live it with your vote

EDITORIAL

Time to get informed is drawing to a close. Politicians are putting their names and faces before the public as much as possible. High-dollar advertising is specializing in pointing out payers' strengths and opponents' weaknesses.

Political excitement is looming in the air.

We could have new representatives in local, state and federal seats soon. Make your vote count. Get informed.

With the political presentations preceding the facts of each candidate's stand, caring about an election's outcome can be difficult.

We suggest that voters take stock in the democratic process before they wade through the issues at hand. Determine to care about each race's outcome, the outcome of each proposal found at the polls.

Check to see if politicians are telling the truth. Facts matter. Honesty matters. Playing loose with the truth can sometimes fool voters. Don't let yourself be one of those people who elect a public representative on presentation.

Let's think of ourselves. Even if we know the facts, we still have to decide what they mean. We can't accept one person's interpretation of an issue without hearing other opinions and looking past the emotions and straight at how the outcome will effect us and our neighbors.

We need to chart a course through the sea of words and images swimming toward us through the media. Don't sit through endless advertisements without reading up on the facts. Look beyond quick answers and manipulated statistics and examine each candidate's track record. It's important to see what they've accomplished while working with other public representatives since they won't be the only ones on the various boards and committees.

Determining who is worthy of our vote should come after we develop our public judgment by asking who can be trusted, how much and why. Who would we want our children to look up to? Afterall, we are voting on people who will be setting examples for the entire country.

Don't vote for a candidate just because they've come to town and managed to shake your hand at a local event. Be more choosy with who will decide on how to spend our tax dollars and pass ordinances and laws that will shape our future.

Realize that ignorance to the issues is our worst enemy. Admitting that we don't know the facts behind a proposal or issue prepares us to learn before putting a punch in the card before us.

Don't vote primarily by political party. Candidates no longer polarize to party stands they way they used to. There are general similarities, however, some Democrats have adopted popular Republican stands and vise versa.

As we head through the final week of pre-election activity, remember that local matters. Don't spend too much energy on the presidential campaign and forget the local candidates who will be passing ordinances and guiding government here at home..

Elections come and go each year. Charlevoix voters just came out en mass to tell the local school board that they can't borrow close to $23 million for a new school, renovations and an auditorium. Local dollars were at stake. They still are.

Like the Great Lakes, local dollars flow through the country as money is spent on state highways and on federal prisons. It's time for the Olympics of democracy.

Don't just preach democracy. Live it.

Vote Tuesday, Nov. 5.

Letters to the editor

Gillespie responds to opponent Roloff

Editor:

Ms. Roloff wrote to "clarify a couple of false statements" in last week's Courier. I am compelled to respond. Shirley tells us that she has been on Beaver Island on many occasions and in a letter to the Beaver Beacon said she stayed in her brother-in-law's cottage. I had never seen her on Beaver Island until the recent visit when Beverly Bodem was here (Oct. 10). Her brother-in-law had a cottage here that was sold in 1978, which explains why I wouldn't remember seeing Shirley on the Island. Although that was 18 years ago, I do apologize.

The other issue of her telling me I "was doing a great job but I am going to run against you" is a different story. Shirley, the only concession I could make to you in my memory is whether you used the word "good" or "great," but you did, in fact, make that statement. This particular day my wife and I and two other people had stopped at the place you work on our way out of town. You came in on your shift, hung up your coat and walked over to the table and made your announcement. When you walked away my wife turned to me with a puzzled look and said, "Why would she run against you if she thinks you are doing a good job?" Obviously I could not answer the question except to state that I thought she was looking for a place to sit.

I also feel the comment in your letter that states as one of your reasons for running, "I saw commissioners taking it upon themselves to sell taxpayers' property without the consent of other commissioners." This is interesting since that situation happened after you decided to run. You must have anticipated that problem coming up. In my defense, that policy was inherited and quickly corrected when it was proven to be inadequate.

Over the last four years I have worked diligently to promote good government for Charlevoix. If there has been a problem I haven't overlooked it, I took care of it. My goal is to represent both areas fairly. I hope voters will agree.

Richard Gillespie

Young people praised

Editor:

Almost every day we read of the negative doings of our young people, but I would like to report some very positive actions on the part of three young people on Prospect Street in Charlevoix.

I am an 80-year-old woman with quite a large yard, and it seems like about a ton of leaves. While I was out raking Sunday afternoon two young ladies, namely, Darcy Lemon and Kendra Willett, came by. Darcy came up to me and said, "I'm going to borrow your rake" and I said "what for?" She said, "I'm going to rake your yard," which she proceeded to do. Her young companion, Kendra, got a rake and joined her. A short time later a young man, Tommie Wilson, came across the street with a leaf blower and went to work. They did the front yard and then Tommie went to the back yard and worked for over an hour by himself.

Needless to say, I was quite thankful, and I would like to salute Darcy, Kendra, Tommie, and all the other young caring people in our community.

Sincerely,
Helen Phillips

Roloff best candiate for county commission

Editor:

As a voter in the City of Charlevoix, I have a problem with comments made by Rich Gillespie regarding Shirley Roloff.

Mr. Gillespie feels that it's in the best interest of Beaver Island residents to have "on island" representation. I feel that this statement is divisive and selfish. While Charlevoix and Beaver Island are separated by Lake Michigan, I feel it's wrong to put one community against the other. The voters of both communities have spoken. Their choice: Shirley Roloff.

Mr. Gillespie also feels that "Shirley can't make the tough decision." In my opinion this statement is baseless. It seems to me that when people run out of ideas they resort to negatives and name calling. Voters of Beaver Island and Charlevoix please don't let this influence your vote. Shirley Roloff is honest and ethical and deserves your vote again on Nov. 5.

Bodem is qualified candidate for state rep.

Editor:

Hard work, honesty, accomplishments and leadership are qualities that Rep. Beverly Bodem has in abundance. She is an exceptional, creative, action-oriented person with great management skills. That is why I intend to vote for her. I recommend that others vote for her, too.

Bev Bodem chairs the Tourism and Recreation Committee and also serves on the Michigan Conservation; Environment and Great Lakes; and Health Policy Committees. She is involved in Washington, too. She is a member of the President's Tourism Development Committee and others.

What does that mean to you and me? Bev Bodem carries clout for us in Lansing and Washington. In my opinion, we cannot throw that away. We all must help keep her in office.

For example, Bev Bodem initiated the First and Second Annual Spring Action Confabs for Tourism and Economic Development. These are community-wide programs, programs sponsored by Bodem, The Student Entrepreneur Program, The Michigan Jobs Commission and Local Leaders who appreciate and respect the benefits of our area.

Bev Bodem also started the annual fall series of non-partisan Northern Lower Michigan Legislator's Conferences on Tourism. The 10 district representatives meet to abet their public's well being. This takes dedication and perseverance.

Those are but two examples of Bev Bodem's leadership. Again I say, I will vote for Bev. I humbly suggest that you do so, too.

What is good for women and children is good for country

Editor:

On Nov. 5, I will vote. I will vote because my foremothers and forefathers worked, sacrificed and died to give me this privilege.

I will also grieve because my vote does not allow me to make the choices I really want to make. A Republican-led Congress and a Democratic President recently passed a budget which gives $245 billion for "national defense" — $10 billion more than the Pentagon wanted or needed. (Who or what is being defended?) Meanwhile, the $25 million allocated for the Violence Against Women Prevention Initiative was chiseled from existing programs for poor women and children.

Four thousand women in our country are beaten to death annually. Last year over 2.6 million women were physically assaulted — one every 12 seconds. More than 50 percent of women are battered at some time in their lives. Children in homes where domestic violence occurs are physically abused or seriously neglected at a rate 1,500 percent higher than the national average in the general population. Is there anyone who needs more "defense?"

What is good for women and children is good for the country. No matter which presidential candidate is elected, the stage has been set for business as usual — more expensive hi-tech war toys/games and an ever-widening gap between the rich and the poor (mostly women and children).

So I will grieve that our nation and its elected leaders are much more heavily invested in violence than in peace. I will grieve that my vote cannot change this.

As I grieve, I will also give thanks for those who are willing to live simply so others can simply live. I will give thanks for those who give their time, money and energy to feed the hungry, shelter the homeless, bind wounds, bury the "casualties" of violence, comfort the grieving, prevent abuse and violence, teach wholeness, facilitate conflict resolution, recycle, preserve the environment and assist in developing microenterprises, which give dignity and income to those who so desperately need it.

Theses are the peacemakers who are changing our country and the world — the "candidates" for whom my heart will vote on Nov. 5.

Vote "no" on Proposal D and "yes" on G

Editor:

Effective wildlife management is very important to farmers in Charlevoix County. Wildlife crop damage costs county farmers thousands of dollars each year in lost income or in destroyed crops that must be replaced to feed livestock.

The only way to cope with the ongoing damage caused by wildlife is to carefully and professionally manage the wildlife population. In Michigan, the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) is the agency charged with that important task. Although crop damage continues to be a considerable problem, it is far more effective to work with the DNR than to turn the management of wildlife over to extremist groups, such as those supporting Proposal D. Many of these groups want the size of the wildlife population to grow without considering the effect such growth has on the wildlife itself, or on the farmer who (at considerable cost) ends up feeding this wildlife.

The Charlevoix County Farm Bureau strongly urges a "yes" vote on Proposal G. Proposal G would maintain the DNR as the agency responsible for managing the wildlife population in our state and would reinforce the use of sound, scientific research in determining wildlife levels.

The Charlevoix County Farm Bureau strongly urges a "no" vote on Proposal D. If this proposal passes, it would take the management out of the hands of the experts and cripple our efforts to control wildlife crop damage.

Remember: Vote "yes" on G, "no" on D.

Charlevoix County Farm Bureau

Keep dogs from wandering

Editor:

I am having a very bad day. Last night, Oct. 24, we were coming home from getting groceries and we hit a dog. It came from nowhere, it was dark and raining. The dog was a dark color. This could have been very much avoided if the dog was either in the house safe and sound or tied up outside. The owners were not at home so the dog was running loose. The neighbors came to help us and the animal. We stayed with it while the sheriff's department was called. We have two dogs of our own and we love them dearly. We have them trained so that they stay in their yard and are never left out when we are not at home.

This dog was beautiful and we are very sorry that it happened. We were not driving fast, as we know there are deer and wild turkeys seen on that stretch of road. It was also a first accident ever for us. We have never hit any kind of animal, so you can see how it bothered us. We want to thank Doug Bergmann and his son and Gary Way for helping us. Also the officer from the sheriff's department who came and made out the accident report.

Please people, do not let your pets run loose.

Thank You, Alice Muma

Choral concert to feature Charlevoix soloist

The Little Traverse Choral Society, under the direction of Katharine Trumble, will open their 10th Anniversary Concert Series with a program entitled "Glorious Tenth." Charlevoix resident, Fran Tollas, will be one of two soloists.

The performance is scheduled for 8 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 16, at the Petoskey United Methodist Church, located at 1804 Mitchell St.

"Glorious Tenth" will consist of celebratory works chosen from past performances along with a new work "Gloria" by John Rutter.

Tollas and soloist, Cindy Batchelor, will be featured in the first part of the program, which will include music of Haydn, Handel, Faure, Schubert and Brahms.

Following intermission, members of the Traverse Symphony Orchestra brass section and percussionists from Central Michigan University will join the group in performing John Rutter's, "Gloria." Rutter is a contemporary English composer.

"It is a thrill to be able to perform this piece as Rutter intended it with brass and percussion defining the rich texture of the music," said director Trumble. Soloists for the number will be Eleanor Hill, Mae Charboneau and Mary D. Bowman.

Central Michigan percussionist, Jeff White, a graduate of Harbor Springs High School, will be "coming home" for this performance. His parents, Kathy and Doug White, live in Harbor Springs.

Performance admission is $5 for adults and $3 for students. Call Kathy Trumble at 526-6577 or Bob Elston 582-2086 for more information.

Concerts continue with Mozart

Mozart's "Requiem" will be presented at the Charlevoix Congregational Church on Park and State at 4 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 3. This will be the third in the series of "Sundays at 4" concerts.

The "Requiem" is being performed to observe All-Saints Day, a time we remember our loved ones who are no longer with us.

The work is to be performed by the Charlevoix Area Community Chorale and soloists accompanied hy orchestra and conducted by Ellen Addington.

This Mozart composition, one of the most outstanding and loved pieces in sacred music literature, was commissioned by a Count Walsegg of Stuppach, who, later had it performed (as his own composition) at a memorial service for his wife. Mozart wrote it amongst foreboding of his own death, and unfortunately, did not live to complete it. However, there were enough musical sketches left that his talented pupil, Sussmayr, who had knowledge of his intentions, completed the work. Even though Mozart adhered to the strict liturgical forms, the effect is not only one of great simplicity, but a work of incomparable beauty.

The soloists for the afternoon will be Julie Pierpont, soprano; Barbara Windham, mezzo-soprano; Mark Puchala, tenor; and Jeffery Norris, bass-baritone.

Pierpont has proved to be a versatile performer in concert and theater. She is presently directing a Harbor Springs production of the musical "Annie." This is her first appearance with the chorale.

Windham comes with a rich and varied background of performances with major symphonies, opera companies, and with internationally recognized conductors including Sixten Ehrling, Anton Dorati and Aaron Copeland.

Puchala will be remembered for his outstanding appearances with the chorale in Handel's "Messiah," Dubois' "Seven last words," Bach's "Passion according to St. Matthew" and the first performance of local composer Elizabeth Humphrey's "The Prophesy." He is on the faculty of Northwestern Michigan College and director of the chorale.

Norris, is a member of the voice faculty at the Interlochen Arts Academy and a singer equally comfortable in opera, oratorio or chamber music. He is returning by popular demand. His appearances with the chorale include the Brahms, Mozart and Faure' requiems.

A reception will follow the program. The public is invited to attend. There is no charge, but a free will offering will be accepted.

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

By Cara B. Hochhalter
Courier columnist

Teenagers. As I write these words, our daughter turns 13. Some people seem to really enjoy the challenge, idealism, insight and energy that teenagers offer. Others cringe at the thought of this unpredictable and awkward age group.

For the young people themselves, two words come to my mind — change and choices. There are the physical changes, which they must adapt to and accept, changes in their responsibilities as they take on jobs, learning to drive and new activities in school and sports.

Teenage lives are also filled with choices. Choices about friends, choices about what activities they will invest their time in, choices about their behavior as they experience peer and media pressure, and choices about the direction they want to go in the future, (college, career, etc.).

As parents and friends, we can accept the changes and give them space to make the choices, all the while being there with some limits, guidelines and love. As Christ demonstrated the importance of children, he also taught us how to love unconditionally. Teenagers need us to affirm that which is good in them. They need us to accept and respect them for who they are, as changeable as that may seem.

Last summer I was fortunate to hear a youth minister and musician from Wisconsin, named Bryan Sirchio. He said that teenagers have two longings (and that God also has these longings.) The first is a longing to be "in relationship" with others, to be loved. The second is a longing to feel that their life is meaningful and creative. Isn't this true for all of us?

One way teenagers, and others, can meet these spiritual longings is to become involved with one of the churches in our town. Many of our churches offer activities and groups for teenagers, as well as an opportunity to be part of an "extended church family." What a great choice.

I leave you with this little story:

And God said "let there be youth groups in churches!" And it was good. Was it good because kids could come and hang out with their friends? Yes, that's true, but they also came and became friends with others they didn't know before.

Was it good because they had fun at lock-ins, skating and at parties? Yes, that's true, but they also discovered the deeper joy of reaching out to others like collecting items for the homeless, ringing the bell for the Salvation Army and going on CROP walks and workcamps for those in need.

Did they sing and dance? You bet! But they also found through music and worship, that their hearts opened and God moved in. And it was very good!

Sheriff's challenger says no to patronage in hiring

ficer program through North Central Michigan College, establish a cooperative spirit among the city's three law enforcement agencies and make law enforcement jobs in the county available to anyone qualified.

"There will be no patronage," he said. "Jobs will be posted, competitive, and the best qualified candidate will get the job."

Johnson

Another issue which he feels has importance is the prevention of gang-related crimes in the county.

"The worst thing you can do is to be in denial that gangs exist." he said, "While you are doing that, they are meeting in secrecy." He points to the ongoing drug problem and a noticeable rise in vandalism as evidence that Charlevoix County has a gang problem. He proposes a county wide task force to counter gang activities.

Lasater, though, said he is aware of the problem and is quick to point out that denial is the farthest thing in his mind and insists that he is keeping a handle on it.

"As I speak we are very concerned and very attuned with what's going on," he said. He did point out that "there are gangs and there are gangs," and that most of the activity of gangs in this area is the result of "wannabe gangs."

He also answers Johnson's criticism that his department is filled with hand-out jobs with this statement: "I have the finest men and women in this sheriff's office than in any other county in Michigan. Crime is going up and without the dedication of those people we would be in a world of hurt; we would lose the battle."

If re-elected, Lasater plans to establish more TRIAD programs, a joint effort by the Sheriff's Association and the American Association of Retired Persons to provide programs and services for senior citizens. Through TRIAD, Lasater plans to begin a driver retraining program, another where he and his deputies "adopt" a senior citizen to give them someone in the sheriff's office they could call if they were in trouble, and he would like to form a handicap parking enforcement unit comprised of senior citizens.

Lasater

Also, Lasater wants to expand animal control officer services, begin a crimestoppers program, and he wants to extend the services of sheriff sub-stations. He wants to begin by placing a new sub-station in East Jordan, similar to the one in Boyne Falls, which has reduced response time in that area from 30 minutes to less than five.

"Many times calling the police is the last resort and an hour response time is not acceptable," he said.

Above all, though, he would do whatever it takes to make his boss, the people, happy.

"I am not responsible to Lansing, I am not responsible to D.C.," he said. "I am responsible to every citizen in Charlevoix County, they are my boss, and I will work very hard to meet all of their needs."

Snowmobile safety course Saturday

Michigan Law requires that youths between 12 and 15-years-old complete a Snowmobile Safety Course before operating a snowmobile alone on property other than their own.

The Charlevoix County Sheriff Department will be conducting a safety course at the East Jordan Snowmobile Club from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Saturday Nov. 2. The course will include information about snowmobile ethics, first aid, proper clothing, winter survival and snowmobile laws.

For more information, call Deputy David Hague at 547-4462.

Harbor Industries celebrates five decades of business

Melissa Hite works on an edgebanding machine at Harbor Industries recently. The machine is one of many that are used to produce display cases for companies such as Wal-Mart, Sears, Philip Morris and General Electric.

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Joe Powell jokes about his 40-plus years as a Harbor Industry employee.

"That and a dollar will buy you a cup of coffee. Of course I remember when it was just ten cents."

Kidding aside, though, it has been the company's ability to maintain employees for decades that has primed the company to celebrate its golden anniversary.

"People have retired from here with more years than me," he remarked. "That is a good sign that this is a good place to work because if conditions were bad they would have gone out and found something else."

Blame the boss for such good conditions according to Fred Brosofske.

"The company has backed its own people," said Brosofske, who has worked for the company for 26 years, the last three as mill supervisor. "They have given them what they need to do a good job, and people will respond to that."

Powell added, "Looking back, at it, they take care of people. The Parkers are very people oriented."

Henry Parker Sr. founded the company in 1946. From the start, the company has been producing wooden point-of-purchase display products. In 1981, the company expanded with the purchase of Freedman Artcraft Co., which had been a main competitor.

The company over the last 15 years has remained at the front of its field by using top-of-the-line woodworking machines, plastics and metal units in products and by becoming a full-service building.

Every aspect of their displays, from the initial stages of design to meticulous sanding, is done under their Charlevoix-based roof. This is amazing to someone like Powell, who remembers the confusion of the old days when anything from a local marina to an old warehouse in Suttons Bay was used to get the job done.

The company has seen 10 different presidents call the oval office home, four Olympiads on American soil, two Paul Simon in Central Park concerts and society's outcasts shift from liberal hippies to neo-conservative militia members. From a business standpoint, they've seen their focus shift from the mom-and-pop corner store to larger chains like Philip Morris, Wal-Mart, Sears and General Electric.

"Our industry now does have to accommodate to the big chains," plant manager Bill Olstrom said.

In keeping up with technology, Harbor has added computer-automated machines and employees punch-in and have their work schedules updated through one of many computer terminals throughout the plant. And like all self-respecting information age companies, Harbor has created its own Website on the Internet. (Interested net-heads just type http://www.wmol/.com./harbor. to get up-to-date information on new industry products.)

Most company elders shrugged off talk of the Website, joking that they would have to check with their kids or grandchildren. The rest-stop on the information highway, Olstrom explained, is company technology for the younger people.

"Sure we're a little afraid of it, but the new kids are educated with this and soon it will be a way of life," he said. "As this generation changes so will the future of our manufacturing, and we have to keep step."

Harbor Industries officially will celebrate its 50th birthday on Friday, Nov. 1. An open house has been planned for employees, their families and the entire community.

The company over the last 15 years has remained at the front of its field by using top-of-the-line woodworking machines, plastics and metal units in products and by becoming a full-service building.

Every aspect of their displays, from the initial stages of design to meticulous sanding, is done under their Charlevoix-based roof. This is amazing to someone like Powell, who remembers the confusion of the old days when anything from a local marina to an old warehouse in Suttons Bay was used to get the job done.

The company has seen 10 different presidents call the oval office home, four Olympiads on American soil, two Paul Simon in Central Park concerts and society's outcasts shift from liberal hippies to neo-conservative militia members. From a business standpoint, they've seen their focus shift from the mom-and-pop corner store to larger chains like Philip Morris, Wal-Mart, Sears and General Electric.

"Our industry now does have to accommodate to the big chains," plant manager Bill Olstrom said.

In keeping up with technology, Harbor has added computer-automated machines and employees punch-in and have their work schedules updated through one of many computer terminals throughout the plant. And like all self-respecting information age companies, Harbor has created its own Website on the Internet. (Interested net-heads just type http://www.wmol/.com./harbor. to get up-to-date information on new industry products.)

Most company elders shrugged off talk of the Website, joking that they would have to check with their kids or grandchildren. The rest-stop on the information highway, Olstrom explained, is company technology for the younger people.

"Sure we're a little afraid of it, but the new kids are educated with this and soon it will be a way of life," he said. "As this generation changes so will the future of our manufacturing, and we have to keep step."

Harbor Industries officially will celebrate its 50th birthday on Friday, Nov. 1. An open house has been planned for employees, their families and the entire community.

Rayder fan discovers computer error at regionals top spots were incorrect. The error was pointed out to officials. When times were refigured, the Rayders lifted their arms in victory.

Candice Vandergriff finished fastest for the team with a sixth place time of 21:13. Tricia Hodge crossed the finish line in 21:31, giving her a 12th-place finish. Both have been named all-regional runners.

Other runners who took part in the win were: Chelsea Gorkiewicz, 19 with 21:55; Rachel Newcomb, 25 with 22:10; Winter Kyvik, 33 with 22:53; Monica Browe, 38 with 23:02 and Liza Gorkiewicz, 50 with 23:46.

Plude hopes the team's hard work and talent have luck on their side Saturday as they face the toughest teams in the state.

"Everyone has to have a great day, and the runners from the other teams have to have a bad day," he said. "We're just going down there to do the best we can and let the places fall where they may."

The team will be leaving the high school early Friday to enable runners to rest, stretch and run before Saturday's 10 a.m. race. Just one race separates the team from a state title.

The boys' team will not be taking the trip to Brooklyn. It finished eleventh out of 19 teams competing at regionals.

Runners finished as follows: Hugo Jimenez, 37 with 18:26; Nate Martin, 56 with 18:57; Marc Dohm, 57 with 19:02; Brian Martinus, 65 with 19:25; Jeff Popenhagen with 19:29; Allen Keehn 82 with 20:08; and Nick Grosberg 83 with 20:09.

JV Rayder football prepares players for Friday-night lights

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

In a year of constant adjustment, the Rayder junior varsity football team took another stumble last week losing 30-26 to Rogers City.

In the team's last home appearance of the season, the Rayders thrilled the crowd with their big-play potential. However, that potential also includes big plays against them such as a Rogers City kick-off return for a touchdown, which proved to be the difference in the game.

> "I told them that the sign of a good team is how they handle adversity, and we've shown we can play through it."
> — Brian Certa, junior varsity head coach

The team's record going into the season finale against Petoskey is 3-5, but according to coach Brian Certa the record is not a good indicator as to what to expect for the varsity program in upcoming seasons.

Three members of the JV team, Wally Wujick, Karl Goff, and Nate Metiva were promoted in midseason to play varsity, and starting quarterback, Mark Yeager was lost to an injury.

"The team has adjusted very well, filling in the holes and playing respectable considering the circumstances," he said. "I told them that the sign of a good team is how they handle adversity, and we've shown we can play through it."

A silver lining within the losing record is that the team is 3-2 against Lake Michigan Division opponents with victories over East Jordan, Elk Rapids and Harbor Springs. Had the team remained with the same players all season, perhaps more victories would have been possible. But Certa feels that would have run counter to what the football program at Charlevoix wants to achieve.

"What's best for the program is for each player to play at the level that would be challenging to them," he said of losing players to the varsity squad. "Why should a sophomore play JV when he is dominating and can start varsity. Besides, it gives someone else an opportunity and experience."

Of those still at the JV level who have a chance to make an impact soon as a varsity Rayder, Certa is excited about sophomore running back/safety Matt McClellan.

"He makes things happen," Certa said. "He will get boxed in with nowhere to go, but always finds a way to get more yards that most backs would not get." He also praised McClellan as being a team leader.

"It's nice to have a player who can take charge, be a leader, and not be afraid of his peers."

Running back/linebacker Collin Carr has also impressed the coach this fall. The sophomore, playing his first year of football, possesses excellent speed and also handles all the kicking chores.

"He's been an impact player and is still getting better every game," Certa said. "He doesn't come off the field."

Certa is also confident that with the quarterback duo of Yeager and Adam Wood, who has played while Yeager recovers, the Rayders will be in good shape for a few years to come at that position.

As the future Charlevoix Rayders wait their turn to play beneath the Friday-night lights, Certa feels only a lack of team work could derail their progress, preventing Charlevoix from remaining in the league's upper half.

"We have a good core and have to build off that," he said. "But I told them they have to stick together even when things are not going right. The only thing that can wreck a good core is if they don't play as a team."

To help promote this feeling he and the other JV coaches have not kept statistics this season. Too many players worry about yards per carry than about improving, and Certa doesn't seem to miss not having stats to assess his team's performance.

"Statistics are necessary at higher levels for record-keeping, but at this level we want to emphasize the team as one body, one unit."

The season closes Thursday at Petoskey. Kick-off will be 6:30 p.m.

Assistant coach Hal Evans fires up the Rayder offense with a second quarter pep-talk. Despite a 20-14 halftime lead, the junior varsity team fell to Rogers City, 30-26, during the last home game of the season.

Community pool board changes

The Charlevoix Friends of the Pool board has announced several changes intended to maximize the board's contact with Charlevoixians in its final stages of the building and fund-raising effort for the Charlevoix Community Pool.

The pool office will move next week from U.S. 31, into space donated by the Sleep Inn Hotel nearer to the building site. Michelle Rick-Biddick will become volunteer executive administrator, replacing Laura Smith who resigned. Rick-Biddick is an educator and community organizer. Jess Wood will assist her as part-time computer operator.

Board president David Strawbridge will step down as president to concentrate on fund-raising activities, while remaining on the board. Succeeding him is Bruce MacArthur who, in turn, will be replaced as vice president by Dr. Steven Hansen.

Appealing to the community for help in raising cash for construction, Hansen used the football metaphor "The pool's walls are going up, and that's like being inside the red zone. We have our red zone scoring lineup and expect to score!"

Chimney fire in Hayes Township snuffed out by firefighters

A chimney fire spreading to the walls of a home in Hayes Township was stopped by the Charlevoix Township Fire Department and fire resistent insulation, said chief Curt Thompson.

Firefighters were called out about 5:40 p.m. Sunday to a home on the corner of Old U.S. 31 and Burgess Road. A chimney fire in the living room was spreading into the walls around a pipe.

A family member of the man who rents the house, Chris LaRosa, called authorities for help when the fire started.

Thompson said the insulation did a job it wasn't designed to do when it stopped the fire from going up the wall. Minor damage was done to the house, including burned siding on the outside of the house and expanding the hole around the woodstove pipe.

Nobody was injured in the fire, Thompson said.

The house is owned by Joe Rivard and is still being occupied by the renter.

Firefighters were on the scene about 45 minutes. They were assisted by the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department for traffic control.

Stamina of electrical parts being ensured at Big Rock Point

sis mostly determine the stamina of the 60-some motors that open and close valves, wiring, cable connections and pressure and level sensors.

Petrosky said that the error in earlier calculations was discovered recently when the data was being transferred from a mainframe to personal computers.

The differences fell outside the guidelines set between plant management and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission year ago. So, the parts are being retested.

"This error underestimated the temperature that could occur in the containment structure," Petoskey said.

Carey Brown, Big Rock Point's resident inspector for the federal commission, said he is monitoring the plant's shutdown. However, it was the decision of plant management to shut down to retest the parts.

"A correction in the computer code showed the temperature inside containment would reach a higher peak than originally calculated," Brown said. "They have to show us how they are going to ensure that they can operate within the maximums."

"Confidence is not enough," Petrosky said. "You need to actually prove that the equipment will in fact perform as it's designed."

The plant is expected to restart the end of this week, with the necessary information being submitted to the regulatory commission.

City voters decide, DeVries over Hufford

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Bernie DeVries is Charlevoix's newest city councilmember. He defeated challenger, Walter Hufford, 313-148, to represent Ward 3.

"I feel great," DeVries said. "It's been a long run, a lot of work."

News of his win reached DeVries about 11:20 p.m. Tuesday. He's glad too see an end to campaigning and advertising.

DeVries will be sworn at Charlevoix's next city council meeting, which is currently scheduled for 7 p.m. Monday, Nov. 18.

After taking his place in the seat once held by John Cross, III, who didn't run for re-election, DeVries said he will spend time familiarizing himself with how the council operates.

"Then, I'll just roll up my sleeves and dig in and go to work," he said.

One issue DeVries is glad to see settled before he joined the board is the street renaming controversy, which has been ongoing for months. Monday, council voted to allow homes along the bluff over Belvedere Avenue to retain their traditional address instead of adopt the East Hurlbut name as earlier suggested by city officials in renaming streets for 9-1-1. Also, residents on the other side of the street will retain their Hurlbut addresses.

"That's what should have been decided in the first place," DeVries said.

For now, there are no other big issues that the new councilmember said need immediate action. He expressed thanks to his wife, Toni, and mother-in-law, Lillian Holmes, for their help with the campaign. He also thanked the voters for their support.

Hufford was not available for comment before press time.

Two councilmembers were reelected Tuesday. However, they were each unopposed. For Ward 1, Don Meggison received 432 votes. For Ward 2, Gabe Campbell received 388 votes.

Citywide, 1,634 voters visited the polls out of the 2,336 people who are registered to vote.

City mayor, Josh Barnes, who was also unopposed, received a total of 1,215 votes.

Residents, taxpayers recommend interim space solutions

By Jamie MacMillan

It was not on their agenda, but a prodding public forced the issue in Monday evening's school board meeting. The issue, overcrowding in the K-5 elementary school classrooms.

"My daughter has 30 kids in her reading class, and that is wrong," said parent Phil Hoffmann.

Two additional classrooms seem to be needed, one for an additional second-grade class, and another for the first-grade class presently meeting in the hallway. Also expressed was the need for another second grade teacher.

Ideas were flown around notably one coming from the ad hoc citizens group headed by Charlevoix resident James Hisey. His group recommended using two satellite rooms not needed by the high school, and placing some of the fifth-grade classes in those rooms. Whatever is done, the group stressed that while long-term solutions are needed, something of the patchwork variety needs to be done now to alleviate the stress of overcrowding.

As for the board, it would like to solve the overcrowding problem by January. But how to handle the Belvedere Avenue homes will keep their prestigious name. Neighbors across the street will continue to get their mail at Hurlbut addresses.

After pressing for a change to satisfy the new 9-1-1 emergency response system, city council back tracked Monday and voted to return the street name to its original form.

"We haven't had a problem for 75 years," said councilman, Gabe Campbell. "I think for one time, the government ought to get off their backs and leave the people alone."

Now the people will likely be leaving council and city administration alone regarding their mailing address. Petitions from both sides, letters, name-calling, demands, unofficial polls and heated city council meetings on street renaming can end.

In presenting his argument to support reverting the street name to the way it was before recent changes, Campbell said that an emergency at one of the bluff homes showed that 9-1-1 responders know to access Belvedere homes by their back entrance on East Hurlbut.

According to city mayor, Josh Barnes, 9-1-1 officials have agreed to work with the city to correctly document each of the homes newest address change. The city will be providing 9-1-1 a list of homes involved in the change.

When Campbell finished making his argument, none of the 23 people in the audience spoke against the presentation during the public hearing.

A resolution to again recognize the homes by the street in front of the house passed with five ayes and John Cross abstaining.

Chimney fire in Hayes Township snuffed out by firefighters

A chimney fire spreading to the walls of a home in Hayes Township was stopped by the Charlevoix Township Fire Department and fire resistent insulation, said chief Curt Thompson.

Firefighters were called out about 5:40 p.m. Sunday to a home on the corner of Old U.S. 31 and Burgess Road. A chimney fire in the living room was spreading into the walls around a pipe.

A family member of the man who rents the house, Chris LaRosa, called authorities for help when the fire started.

Thompson said the insulation did a job it wasn't designed to do when it stopped the fire from going up the wall. Minor damage was done to the house, including burned siding on the outside of the house and expanding the hole around the woodstove pipe.

Nobody was injured in the fire, Thompson said.

The house is owned by Joe Rivard and is still being occupied by the renter.

Firefighters were on the scene about 45 minutes. They were assisted by the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department for traffic control.

sis mostly determine the stamina of the 60-some motors that open and close valves, wiring, cable connections and pressure and level sensors.

Petrosky said that the error in earlier calculations was discovered recently when the data was being transferred from a mainframe to personal computers.

The differences fell outside the guidelines set between plant management and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission year ago. So, the parts are being retested.

"This error underestimated the temperature that could occur in the containment structure," Petoskey said.

Carey Brown, Big Rock Point's resident inspector for the federal commission, said he is monitoring the plant's shutdown. However, it was the decision of plant management to shut down to retest the parts.

"A correction in the computer code showed the temperature inside containment would reach a higher peak than originally calculated," Brown said. "They have to show us how they are going to ensure that they can operate within the maximums."

"Confidence is not enough," Petrosky said. "You need to actually prove that the equipment will in fact perform as it's designed."

The plant is expected to restart the end of this week, with the necessary information being submitted to the regulatory commission.

Senior volunteers honored at recent recognition dinner

The Retired and Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) of Charlevoix and Emmet Counties held its 12th Annual recognition dinner at the Argonne Supper Club in October.

Volunteers were honored for their caring and commitment to their communities.

"Charlevoix and Emmet Counties have a wonderful core of men and women, aged 55 and over, who see there is a need for sharing their talents, experiences, expertise and concern for others," said director Carla Bufe.

Through commitment and dedication, 223 of these volunteers contributed 39,111 hours of service to local non-profit and public agencies within Charlevoix and Emmet Counties. Their efforts save participating agencies $273,777. The program saluted the volunteers for their service throughout the year.

Special recognition was given to three volunteers who worked more than 1000 hours: Glenna Arends and Marjorie McNamara from Emmet County and Marie Zoberski from Charlevoix County.

Receiving 10-year pins from Charlevoix were: Eunice Coolman, Margaret Landman and Robert Wexstaff. Volunteers from Charlevoix receiving five year pins: Chester Otmanowski and Betty White.

Other Charlevoix community members recognized were those who completed their first 30 hours of service within the past year: John and Maxine Barber (missed last year), and new members Elaine Avery, Lloyd and Sara Cummings, Bertha Smith and Frances Wilson.

Junior Achievement program introduces students to careers

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

A bond between Charlevoix professionals and the public school system is forming through the area's Junior Achievement program.

"It's an opportunity for area businesses to become directly involved in the schools and take an active role in how the young people take to their business life as consumers, employees, and business owners," said James Connaughton, FMB Northwestern Bank vice president and program organizer.

Junior Achievement is just a small part of the life-skills class taught in Robin Berry's seventh-grade classroom. The class teaches basic living skills such as cooking nutritious meals, child care, sewing and sanitation. Once a week, the class devotes itself to the more financial aspects of living skills such as balancing a household budget that are taught through the program. Plans for a similar, more basic program is in the works for fifth-graders, but more donations and volunteers are needed.

"The more businesses participating the better," Connaughton said. "They'll find it rewarding, and not very time consuming. The rewards far outweigh any inconveniences."

In the past, Junior Achievement programs had asked students to create a product and peddle it to their classmate consumers. The program now works to better prepare students for the job market by teaching students how to coordinate a job search, interview tactics, and by exposing students to a wide array of career choices.

Students can expect to be visited by guest speakers representing various aspects of the Charlevoix community. For example, last week Berry's class was visited by Doug Way of Way Transportation, who spoke of the opportunities in the trucking and shipping industry.

"Kids need to be exposed to more adults and see them in positive ways," Berry said. "It also gives students a connection to the community. They can go to the bank or grocery store and be recognized."

Added Connaughton, "To bring in another person just broadens their horizons. I'm a banker, I can't really talk to them about what it is like to be a policeman."

That is not to say Connaughton shies away from his duties as part-time teacher. Rather, he relishes it and sees it as a highlight of his week.

"It's nerve-wracking, yet at the same time extremely rewarding," he said. "You'll bump into them around town, and they'll give you an update on their lives like they just saved $20 dollars from their paper route and are saving for a new bike."

Connaughton hopes that two lessons will be learned in junior achievement. One, that everyone has a place in the business world with everyone being important. And secondly, that each student will begin to

City remains financially sound

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

The city has been commended for its handling of taxpayers' money.

In an audit report by Rehman Robson Certified Public Accountants, the city was given a glowing report Monday during the city council meeting.

For the 1995-96 fiscal year, which ended March 31, the city had slightly more than $2 million in revenues generated for the general fund. The city spent about $45,000 more than it took in, requiring that much money to be taken out of the general fund balance.

According to city treasurer, Rick Brandi, the extra expense was planned, and the city actually spent almost $58,000 less than budgeted for the year.

Auditors were not concerned with surplus of expenses.

The city retains about 21 percent — about $368,000 — of their annual operating budget in a "savings account." Auditors said that they recommend that municipalities keep between 10 and 25 percent in such a fund.

Most of the city's revenue — 53 percent — is generated through local taxes. About 15 percent of the city's income came from state revenue sharing. And 9.7 percent from services for which the city charges.

The extra expenses involved a number of city projects, including renovations at Bridge Park. The expenses and revenues of the Downtown Development Authority were included in the auditors' graphs of city finances.

Complementary turkeys encourage giving thanks

EDITORIAL

Just say thanks.

Amid daily schedules and responsibilities, we don't always take time to express our thanks to people who have encouraged and helped us along the way.

The Courier wants to know what our readers are thankful for. To promote the coming holiday — and the thankfulness from which it originated — we are asking young and old to express their thanks in letters to the editor.

The letters will be run in the newspaper Wednesday, Nov. 27. The day before we all gather with friends and family for Thanksgiving dinner.

A turkey will be given to one person in each of three age categories who best describes why and to whom they are thankful. The letters will not be judged on grammatical correctness, but on the sincerity, thoughtfulness and style of expression. They should be reasonably brief.

The three age categories are 12 and under, 13- to 18-years-old and adult. Each letter should be signed, include a daytime telephone number and specify the correct age category for the author.

The Courier staff will take the top three letters in each category to community members who have volunteered to choose a winner. Elementary-age students — without names attached — will be judged by Dick Swenor, elementary school principal. The 13-18 group will be judged by high school principal, Gary Grundman, while city police chief, Dennis Halverson, choose the top letter for adults.

Turkeys are being donated by Charlevoix grocery stores, Don's IGA, Glen's Market and Oleson Food Store. Winners will be notified by the Courier staff. They can pick up their turkeys Wednesday, Nov. 27, just in time for them to be cooked for the holiday.

Letters are due at the Courier office by 5 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 21, to be considered for the turkey giveaway. They can be dropped off at the office at 112 Mason Street, faxed to 547-4992 or mailed to Charlevoix Courier, P.O. 117, Charlevoix, MI, 49720.

Regardless of winning, letters entered in the contest will be run in a special section of the newspaper before Thanksgiving.

Tell us, tell the community, what you're thankful for.

Give thanks.

Food column right on

Editor:

Edith Gilbert continues to be my favorite Courier Columnist, and her October 23rd on-target consternation regarding the over-seasoning of restaurant foods wins my praise.

With so many excellent eating places in the Charlevoix area, my big gripe is overly enthusiastic chefs that can take a simple whitefish dinner and make it into a planked slab of spicy goo. I guess the only chef that still retains the simple yet elegant presentation of food must still be Dave Phillips. A baked whitefish with a sprinkle of paprika and lemon slices will do just fine thank you very much. Just try and get it as that — not floating in a pond of sauce and little spriggy things a-la gloppo trendy. Turns me off.

Edith (may) also get my "perfect squelch" award as I believe it was she gently waiting her turn in line as rude me charged past her as the frazzled beginning of summer shopper at Glens, loudly lamenting the fact that I could not find the right color toilet tissue my wife wanted — to which she deftly relied, "My, things are rough all over." I laughed all the way back to the cottage. Keep it up Edith!

Former Acacia commander thankful

Editor:

My family and I were genuinely touched by the city council's recent resolution adopting us as honorary citizens of Charlevoix.

In my relatively short life, I have moved 22 times and lived in 19 different cities in 11 different states. From these experiences I can honestly testify that although every move has been an emotional experience, the move away from Charlevoix was by far the toughest one yet.

After all those moves I can also testify that you never get used to it. In fact the cumulative effect is the development of a longing to finally settle down. While our decision will not be official for a few more years, I will admit that not a day goes by that we don't long to be back where 85 degrees is considered hot, renumbering a few houses is front page news and the petunia to resident ratio exceeds 10:1. Yes, Charlevoix is currently at the top of our list of places to settle, mostly because the quality of life is exceeded only by the quality of the inhabitants.

To the mayor, city council and citizens of Charlevoix the Beautiful, thank you for keeping us in your thoughts as we eventually make our way back to our adopted (and now adoptive) hometown.

Sincerely,
Steve, Sarah, Weston, Niles & Merek Corporon

Editor:

One of the best things that's happened in Charlevoix in years was the presentation of the Mozart Requiem last Sunday at the Congregational Church by the Charlevoix Area Community Chorale and orchestra.

We don't have to go to Petoskey or Harbor Springs to hear and see such a wonderful presentation.

EDITH

EDITH GILBERT

What goes around comes around. Today's parents, once known as the hippie generation, are discovering the importance of teaching their little darlings words like respect, consideration, responsibility, trustworthiness and caring both at home and in school.

In my day, people referred to this as being "well brought up." We were taught to say "please" and "thank you," stand up when an adult walked into the room, offer a seat to an older person, open the door for others and not sit down until invited to do so.

It was never explained to one why these social skills were important. Only in later years does one begin to realize that these social graces help to smooth the way in the competitive job market. The lack of such basic know-how, has led to executive courses being taught in the corporate world today — teaching men and women such basics as the proper use of knife and fork. Yes, really!

It's no wonder that the Michigan State Board of Education has come up with a policy to teach these values, respect for our elders, consideration for others, responsibility on the job, caring for the unfortunate — not in separate classes, but along with English, social studies and even during physical education.

In Charlevoix's Elementary School a project based on the Boy's Town model has been in place for two years. About once a month, during assembly, teachers act out the right and wrong way to perform a particular skill. Not only are students shown how to greet someone (look at the person, smile, use a pleasant voice tone, and make a verbal greeting) but they are also shown how to apologize, accept "no" for an answer, accept criticism and introduce themselves.

When a staff member, including bus drivers, cooks as well as teachers, witness a social skill or any positive behavior, they reward the child with a "Sparkle" coupon. The youngster puts his or her name on the coupon and deposits it in a box by the front office. Each Friday the principal, Dick Swenor, draws six winners from each grade and presents them with prizes of pencils, bookmark and Subway coupons.

The "Sparkle" program helps to make the children feel better about themselves and reinforces positive behavior," Swenor acknowledges.

Good as the "Sparkle" program may be, it's still the parents who should get either the credit or the blame for their children's behavior. Consider the deplorable behavior one hears about on many school busses. Vile language, bullying, punching and threats are not that uncommon. School bus drivers are told to report bad behavior to the bus supervisor and school administrator. A slip is then sent home to be signed by the parent and returned. After three warnings, children lose the privilege of riding the bus, but unfortunately this policy is not always strictly enforced. According to one retired bus driver, there are forever those parents who think their children can do no wrong!

On the other hand, those parents who wish to re-enforce the "Sparkle" program at home, might begin by teaching their children how to politely answer the telephone and write "thank you" notes this Christmas to grandparents. It would also help if teachers taught these "communication skills" as an adjunct in the classroom, along with computer skills.

Calling attention to the "deterioration of civility," according to the recently adopted policy by the school board, ought to help in "determining the character of our people and the tenor of the society in which we live."

And since much of Charlevoix depends on tourism, a dose of sparkle in our society, as well as our schools, is not uncalled for.

Thanks for financing new ice sled

The City of Charlevoix Firefighters Association recently purchased a "Rescue Alive" ice rescue sled. We would like to extend our gratitude to the Charlevoix County Community Foundation and their Board of Trustees, who's financial assistance of $2,500 made it possible to purchase the sled.

This Rescue Sled enables the rescuer to walk over very thin ice, or paddle through open water to reach the victim quickly. The unit provides fast, energy saving transport to a recovery location. We are pleased to add this piece of equipment to the departments operation in rescue.

The benefits of Rescue Alive:

— Injured victims through the ice or water skiers can be stabilized on a backboard or stokee basket. Rescue Alive avoids the risk of further injury by eliminating the need to lift an injured person over the side of a boat.

— The rescuer remains out of the water during a rescue, which saves time.

— The victim is completely removed from the water to eliminate traumatic dragging.

— The rescuer slides victims from the water. Extraordinary strength is not required.

Teens will benefit from community pool

Editor:

This letter is to serve as an example of our public support for the tremendous service of the community of Charlevoix. Friends of the Pool's diligence in fund-raising to build a year-round pool has been admirable. I believe the pool will provide many health and safety benefits to the members of our community.

At the Charlevoix Teen Center, we strongly support, encourage and promote safe and drug free lifestyles for our youth. The added character benefits for an individual who can swim parallel the skills we promote in youth attempting to live drug free lives.

We strongly support the fund-raising efforts and would encourage potential organizations and institutions to see the Friends of the Pool as a group that truly represents the community of Charlevoix.

One of our anti-drug posters at the teen center sums it up rather well: "Studies prove that children can't smoke pot while underwater." It would be great for our kids to have the opportunity to be "underwater" twelve months out of the year - in a supervised and safe environment.

D. Scott Kelly,
Charlevoix Teen Center Director

Obituaries

Esther M. Ringler

Esther M. Ringler, 98, died Saturday Nov. 2, 1996, at Grandvue Medical Care Facility in East Jordan.

A funeral was held 11 a.m. Tuesday Nov. 5, 1996, at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix. Rev. Philip Schairhaum of the First Congregational Church officiated, with interment following at Brookside Cemetery, Charlevoix.

Esther was born Oct. 11, 1898, in Joliet, Ill., the daughter of William and Louisa (Swanson) Holmes. On June 29, 1921, in Joliet, she married Clarence R. Ringler. He died Jan. 25, 1980.

Esther was a member of the Reed City United Methodist Church, a charter member of the Reed City Garden Club; and a member of the Charlevoix Garden Club. She enjoyed sewing, flower gardening and oil painting.

She is survived by one son, Donald Ringler and his wife, Edie, of Gladwin; one daughter, Nomis Mol of Charlevoix; one daughter-in-law, Mary Ringler, of Jacksonville, Fla.; nine grandchildren; ten great-grandchildren; and three great-great grandchildren. She was also preceded in death by one son, Delos B. Ringler, in 1983; one grandson, Donald Mol, in 1992; and two sisters, Mabel and Hazel.

The family received friends from 7-9 p.m. Monday at the funeral home. Memorials may be given to Charlevoix Garden Club.

Agencies observe home care month

District Health Department No. 3, serving the counties of Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego, joins thousands of home care providers across the nation in launching a celebration of National Home Health and Hospice Month.

The month will honor dedicated physicians, nurses, therapists, aides, social workers and volunteers who provide high-quality health care and supportive services in client's homes throughout the United States. It will spotlight home care's ability to combine compassionate care with innovative technology.

"Thanks to the success of modern technology, yielding state-of-the-art medical equipment for use in the home, an increasing number of people are able to leave institutions or avoid ever having to enter them," said Dr. Brian Youngs, medical director for District Health Department No. 3. "They can be cared for and live independently in the comfort of their own home, surrounded by the ones they love."

Home health care is a service to recovering, disabled or chronically ill individuals. Hospice is a service for terminally ill individuals. The goal of Hospice is neither to hasten, or prevent, the end of life, but to bring peace, comfort and caring to each remaining day.

The health department and Hospice have several activities planned for November. District Health Department No. 3 will participate in Northern Michigan Hospital's Employee Learning Fair, and in a Diabetic Screening Clinic in conjunction with TIPDON and Charlevoix Area Hospital. Hospice is currently providing a grief recovery series; survivor strategies for handling the holidays is scheduled for Nov. 18; and the annual Memorial Service will be Nov. 24.

For more information call 1-800-551-4140 or 547-6092.

Master Gardener Association meeting

Members of the Northern Michigan Master Gardener Association will meet at 7 p.m. Monday, Nov. 11, at the Terrace Inn in Bay View. Plans for the coming year, including programs and field trips, will be discussed.

The meeting will include a pot luck dinner. Members are asked to bring a dish to pass. Silverware and plates will be provided. Bring recipes for dishes for the Master Gardener's Cook Book. The association is open to all master gardener graduates and students. For more information, call 582-2715.

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

By The Rev. Bruce Hamilton
Community Church of God

I knew my children were growing up. I guess I didn't realize just how much they had grown up until I had the opportunity to spend a half day helping out at the elementary school recently. Things have changed since I was a K-5 parent. I had no idea how much the school had boomed. There were classes where I would never have thought about putting classes. Cords run everywhere trying to keep up with the need for computers and other equipment. But one thing hadn't changed. The teaching staff is among the most devoted you will find anywhere when it comes to nurturing young minds.

My destination was Kay Brittain's room. They had given me the choice of several grades and believe it or not, I volunteered for first grade. When the kids first came in after lunch recess, one of them looked up at me and said, "Well, who are you?" I didn't have to answer that question because a little girl named Brooklin ran up and gave me a hug around the knees saying, "He my Pastor Bruce!"

Well, I wasn't there as Pastor Bruce. I was there as a substitute teacher so we had to get down to business and get the lessons done that Kay hoped I would be able to muddle my way through. There was practice telling time with great big wooden yellow clocks ("How come your clock is bigger than ours Mr. Hamilton?). There was story time with that old favorite "Charlotte's Web," ("Do rats really like to eat garbage Mr. Hamilton?"). There was snack time ("He got milk but the board says he's suppose to get juice Mr. Hamilton."). There was that blessed break in the afternoon known as recess (all knowing grins from teachers wondering how the preacher would make out).

What so tickled me was the total trust the kids have at that age. Once they've figured out you're there to help them and work with them, they accept you without hesitation. While there are moments that they do their best to shall we say, manipulate you ("My head hurts Mr. Hamilton"), they absorb every genuine effort you make like thirsty sponges.

One of the things Jesus said early on in His ministry was, "Marvel not that I say ye must be born again." At the heart of the gospel has always been the challenge that we become like little children again in our dealings with God. It is not that we are expected to literally go backwards in our thinking. It is that we are to open our hearts with the same acceptance, the same love, the same thirst that so characterized all our lives when we were younger.

God stands ready to unfold before us mysteries that we have only dreamed about. He has always been prepared to come down to our level and lovingly lift us up to where He is. He is there to comfort our pains, ease our fears and bring out things in us that even we didn't realize were there. He is very much the Master Teacher and we will never be too old to learn something new from Him. God bless not just our children, but also the teachers who every weekday encourage them to learn.

Beaver Island gets new eatery, Irish style pub

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

If the backbone of Northern Michigan's tourism industry is the area's lengthy selection of dining choices, then add another vertebrae, this one courtesy of Beaver Island.

The Old Rectory Restaurant and Pub opened for business on Beaver Island on Labor Day weekend. The Pub is open daily at 5:00 while dinner will be served Thursday through Sunday from 5:30-10:00 during the off season.

"Right now we're just spreading our wings," co-owners Bill Palladino said. "We want to learn the business and by summer be ready to handle the heavy business after eight months of dealing with the lighter load." Palladino expects by summer to be open seven nights a week for dinner, extend pub hours into the afternoon, and serve lunches.

Palladino is one of a team of four who own and operate the establishment. His wife, Claudia Schmidt a renowned singer/songwriter along with Kevin and Pam Smith had talked for a number of years of opening a restaurant, and when the opportunity arose to buy old Circle M restaurant they leapt at it. After a year and a half of renovations and planning, they were ready for their grand opening.

> "We wanted to create an Irish Pub, and make it look like a pub that had been there for 100 years."
> — Bill Palladino, owner

"We wanted to create an Irish Pub, and make it look like a pub that had been there for 100 years," Palladino said of the changed interior which bears little resemblance to the previous establishment. They built their own bar, dotted their walls with antiques, and put in stained glass windows all to foster a pub atmosphere. Creating the Pub was an important step according to Palladino in order to go along with the changing nature of the tourism industry on the island.

"We have a different tourism coming in these days," he said. "People are coming to the Island to spend a day or maybe two. In the past they would stay for a week or even a month, but with the planes coming in and the new boat, we're getting people that are going to come to the Island for even briefer periods of time."

As for the dinner menu, highlighted entrees include a pork chop stuffed with sun-dried tomatoes, walnuts covered with a maple syrup glaze, a sauteed lake trout, a New York Strip, and pasta dishes. Desserts are made daily by Schmidt who also handles all the cooking chores and grows most of vegetables and herbs with Pam from their gardens. Another interesting tid-bit is their house soup, a chowder with crab, shrimp, and corn. Prices range from $6 to $12.95, and Palladino stressed that the menu has two concentrations, the freshness of the ingredients, and the foods that are good for you.

The Rectory offers a lengthy wine selection which is only natural as wine and food have been natural partners since the beginning of food, but the rectory also offers a beer list just as impressive. Palladino suggests fine dining and fine beer might just be the restaurant trend of the future.

Between the pale ales, stouts, and cherry beers, there is a broad selection of beers which lend itself to food. You can have a dessert beer or an appetizer beer," he said. "Restaurants all over the country can offer a broad selection of beer without having to go far because most is brewed locally at micro-breweries. Five years ago, you could not do that." Rectory owners are planning to introduce there own brew once summer rolls around.

When most restaurants close their kitchens and head for southern pastures, the Rectory plans to not just stay open, but rock a little this winter as Palladino promises at least once a month to import live entertainment. Through Schmidt, who may be best known for her work on Garrison Keillor's Prairie Home Companion, the Rectory has some interesting inroads to the entertainment industry, and they plan to use that to bring in entertainers that islanders and the Northern Michigan area in general would not otherwise have a chance to see.

Business in brief

Teleconference focus on female investors

In an ongoing effort to reach the growing number of women financial decision makers and investors, Merrill Lynch will host a free teleconference from New York on Women Investors: Planning for Success at 7 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 7, at North Central Michigan College.

Discussion will include women's attitudes about money and their hesitancies toward investing.

"Our goal is to provide women with the educational materials they need to better understand their financial situation, evaluate all of their options, find solutions that might not have occurred to them and develop a realistic action plan for achieving financial success," said Gayle Van Patten, Merrill Lynch office manager.

Strong local employment holds

There was little change in the unemployment rates among Michigan's ten major labor markets from August to September, according to estimates compiled by the Michigan Employment Security Commission.

Charlevoix County's unemployment rate for September is 4.9 percent, compared to Emmet County at 6.3 percent.

Employment agency provides forms via fax

Employers now can let their fingers do the walking when obtaining important forms from the Michigan Employment Security Commission. The agency has launched a fax-on-demand service on its automated telephone customer relations system for employers.

The service allows Michigan employers to choose from a list of several commission tax forms and a job order form by calling 1 (800) 638-3994. The service is free and available 24-hours a day.

On-line banking spreads to local bank

FMB customers can now use their personal computers to check their bank account balances, transfer money between accounts, pay bills and track credit card activity.

The online banking program supports all of the major personal financial software programs, including the new releases of Quicken 6, Quicken 7 and Microsoft Money 97.

"It's all about convenience," said Steve Stream, president and chief operation officer of First Michigan Bank Corporation. "We want to make it possible for our customers to bank how they want to and when they want to. We're seeing a lot of interest in online banking, and our company has moved quickly to make it available."

FMB is the only bank in west Michigan offering its online customers the ability to down load information about their credit card transactions.

"We know that many consumers now use their credit card more often than they write a check, so it's as important to them to be able to see their credit card statement as their checking statement," Stream said.

FMB's package also includes online banking for balance reconciliation and e-mail to the bank. The bank is offering a 90-day free trial on the service.

FMB has established a toll-free telephone number for online banking inquiries. That number is 1-888-351-6400. Information about online banking is also available at http://www.fmb.com, FMB's site on the World Wide Web.

Audit brings no surprises

The audit presented no surprises to city officials, according to Brandi. Each separate budget either finished the year as expected or better than planned.

"We've been pretty consistent," Brandi said.

Suggestions for improvement by the auditors included having the city save more money to pay for its debts. The city normally sets aside finances for payment. However, the auditors said that to be safe, about $200,000 more should be saved than was this past year.

They also suggested the city tuck away cash to cover Downtown Development Authority payments in case it falls back to city responsibility. Most of the bond debt is a result of construction of the substation in 1991 and the authority's funding of Bridge Park.

In other action, council:

— Accepted the resignation of planning commissioner, Allen Telgenhof, who stepped down because of increased time commitments with his position as a Charlevoix school board member and father.

— Approved a request for Friends of the Pool to have a gaming license for its upcoming raffle.

Scabies mite causing rashes

Cases of scabies have been reported to the local health department. Scabies is a common contagious disease of the skin caused by a mite, which burrow into the skin producing pimple-like irritations. Occasionally bacterial infections may occur. It is most common in children.

Scabies mites are transferred by direct skin-to-skin contact. Indirect transfer from undergarments or bedclothes can occur only if these have been contaminated by people beforehand.

After exposure, symptoms will appear from two to six weeks in people who have not previously been infested. Previously infested people may show symptoms within one to four days. The most prominent symptom of scabies is intense itching, particularly at night. The areas of the skin affected include webs and sides of fingers, around wrists, elbows and armpits, waist, thighs, genitalia, nipples, breasts and lower buttocks.

Infants may have generalized skin eruptions. Diagnosis involves demonstrating the mite by skin scrapings and microscopic examination. Treatment of cases, contacts, and family members include a scabicide cream or lotion prescribed by a physician.

Exposure through contaminated articles such as bed linen, towels, and clothes can occur. Such articles may be decontaminated by washing in hot water (60°C, 140°F) and/or drying in a hot air dryer for at least 10 minutes. Items that cannot be washed or dried should be placed in a plastic bag, sealed, and stored for seven days, or exposed to freezing temperatures for 12 hours (outdoors during winter).

Even under ideal conditions, scabies mites can survive for only short periods without a host (24-36 hours). Practicing good personal hygiene and hand washing will also help in preventing the spread of illness. Cases should not attend school for 24 hours after start of effective treatment. Questions on scabies should be directed to your family physician or county public health nurse.

"THE ONE YOU CAN RECOMMEND"

Members of the Northwest Shrine Club presents Charlevoix Area Hospital vice-president a check for $1,200 for a television, videocassette unit and CPR training manikin.

Onion sales benefit local hospital

Money spent purchasing onions from area Shriners is being used to benefit children.

Thomas Carey, area onion co-chairman, presented Charlevoix Area Hospital with a check for $1,200 last week. The contribution will go toward the purchase of a pediatric CPR training manikin and a TV/VCR unit for pediatric patients.

The Northwest Shrine Club includes Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Kalkaska counties. Shrine Clubs across the nation support 22 Shriners Hospitals, including 19 orthopedic hospitals and three Shriners Burns Institutes.

Children receive care at those hospitals free of charge.

The budget for the hospitals is $419 million, including $20 million for research. In addition, the clubs provide funds such as this gift to help pediatric patients in their local areas.

"We are very grateful to be the beneficiaries of this gift," said Roger Sievertson, Charlevoix Area Hospital vice president. The equipment will provide training for area emergency medical groups hospital personnel and that pediatric patients will be more comfortable.

Pool board changes

The Charlevoix Friends of the Pool board has announced several changes intended to maximize the board's contact with Charlevoixians in its final stages of the building and raising money for the Charlevoix Community Pool.

The pool office has moved into space donated by the Sleep Inn Hotel. Michelle Rick-Biddick will become volunteer executive administrator, replacing Laura Smith who resigned. Rick-Biddick is an educator and community organizer. Jess Wood will assist her as part-time computer operator.

Board president David Strawbridge will step down as president to concentrate on fund-raising activities, while remaining on the board. Succeeding him is Bruce MacArthur who, in turn, will be replaced as vice president by Dr. Steven Hansen.

Appealing to the community for help in raising cash for construction, Hansen used the football metaphor "The pool's walls are going up, and that's like being inside the red zone. We have our red zone scoring lineup and expect to score!"

These are a handful of more than 100 volunteers who help run the Rainbow Shoppe. The 14th annual volunteers luncheon was held Oct. 15 at the Senior Citizens Center. The Charlevoix Men's Glee Club entertained the group with selections directed by Terry Isenbarger.

Portables, reconfiguring rooms options for crowding situation still has failed to appear on an meeting agenda, which stirred ill feelings from those in attendance.

"We're halfway through the first semester, and we're still going round and round with figures," board member Ardeth Wieland said.

> "We are in the process of negotiating an option of a piece of property, and it is in the hands of their lawyer. It would support our long-range plan of supporting a high school, a middle school, and a second elementary school."
> — Roberta Jackson, superintendent

Perhaps two new portable classrooms could be installed, but according to superintendent, Roberta Jackson, costs for each would hover around $25,000. She was unsure if such costs can be afforded. Even if a used room were purchased, in order for a portable to be ready by the board's stated goal of the start of the next semester, Jackson quipped, "We'd have to pour the cement soon."

Cuts in the athletic department would free up enough funds to build the portable rooms and board president Mary Lec Campbell admitted that that was an option. However, any cuts in athletics will be met by some serious opposition by athletes and families effected.

One intriguing concept presented to the board involves reshuffling the whole school system. The idea would make the elementary school a K-4 facility, the middle school would be for grades 5-7 and the high school would house grades 8-12. The high school can absorb more students. Still, reshuffling the entire scheme might be a bit overzealous for a short-term solution.

In any event, none of the ideas were seriously discussed Monday. The board preferred to have their finance committee, headed by board member Sulanc Hamilton, to meet and solidify what funds the school has and ultimately will need to solve this problem.

In looking at long-range solution, Jackson gave a report on the district's search for land for a new school.

"We are in the process of negotiating an option of a piece of property, and it is in the hands of their lawyer," she said. "It would support our long-range plan of supporting a high school, a middle school, and a second elementary school."

In legislation voted on, the following measures were passed by board members unanimously: Participation in an alternative program for school age parents, agreement to again be part of the Great Lakes Academic Center alternative education program, and to sign an agreement pledging to be a part of an area vocational-technical education consortium.

A measure to continue the driver's education program was tabled pending more information on, what else, costs.

Hand-foot-mouth disease affecting young children

Hand-foot-and-mouth disease has been reported in the area, according to District Health Dept. No. 3.

The illness affects young children and is characterized by painful ulcers in the mouth. Small water blisters or red spots may occur on the palms and soles and between fingers and toes. The buttocks are sometimes involved. There may be a low grade fever. Many children have no symptoms.

The illness is caused by a virus. It has no relationship to hoof and mouth disease of cattle. It is spread in nose and throat secretions and stool and is quite contagious. Children become ill three to five days after exposure. They can be infectious for weeks.

There is no specific treatment. Symptoms may be treated with acetaminophen and warm water mouth rinses. Avoid citrus, salty, spicy, or foods that require much chewing. Cold drinks, popsicles and sherbet are often well received.

The fever and discomfort are usually gone in three to four days. The mouth ulcers resolve in 7 days, but the rash on the hands and feet can last 10 days. Sometimes children become dehydrated because they don't want to drink fluids. However, other illnesses could be present. Contact a physician immediately if your child has not urinated for eight hours, the neck becomes stiff, the child becomes confused, delirious or hard to awaken.

Prevention includes practicing good personal hygiene, hand washing and proper disposal of human wastes and diapers. Children can return to school or day care when the fever is normal and they are feeling better.

For more information, call the health department at 347-6014.

Program guides students to future think about their future from a career and personal standpoint.

- Continued from page 1–

"We want to open their minds to different career choices," Dcnnis VanGuildcr, middle school principal said. "We want to give them as much information we can give them on the choices on the menu of their life."

One of the advantages junior achievement and the life skills curriculum has in reaching students is its hands-on approach and ability to apply the lessons from other classes into practical purposes.

"It's a learning style, most learn by doing," VanGuilder said. "They need to be involved, have action, have energy. It's fun for the kids that way."

Berry said life skills and junior achievement help students learn precisely because of that word — fun.

"They see what we're doing here as fun, not work, not school," she said. "We have fun but that doesn't mean you're not learning or not working because that is what life is about."

Big Rock completes United Way campaign

Employees at Big Rock Point nuclear plant recently completed their most successful United Way campaign by contributing $21,561 to the organization.

The amount donated by the plant's non-unionized employees and members of the Utility Workers Union of American Local 346 surpassed the previous record of $20,540, which was set last year and inched past the 1996 goal of $21,500.

Of the $21,561 pledged, the CharEm United Way will receive $21,009. The remaining contributions were designated to three other United Way organizations. Consumers Power Co. will add a corporate contribution later in the year.

The two-week long plant campaign was organized and run by administrative specialists, Pam Gibson and Nancy Postma. The pair arranged for spokespersons from United Way funded agencies to speak at kick-off meetings and offered prizes to encourage employee participation.

"Consumer Power employees throughout the state, and we at Big Rock Point have always believed in the mission of the United Way," said Pat Donnelly, plant manager. "It is truly gratifying to see our employees set contribution records year after year."

Lasater to step into third decade as county sheriff

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

George T. Lasater is about to be sworn in for the sixth time and enter his third decade as Charlevoix County Sheriff.

He won Tuesday's election overwhelmingly, only losing in Peaine Township on Beaver Island with a vote of 65-71.

Overall, Lasater received 7,649 votes to challenger Edward Johnson's 1,734.

"I'm really humbled," Lasater said, from the county clerk's office Tuesday, where election results were being announced. "It's unusual for a sheriff to serve that many terms."

Although Lasater has been through many elections, he didn't sit back and expect to win this one.

"I always run like I'm in second place," he said. "I take nothing for granted.

Johnson didn't take his challenge of a long-standing sheriff lightly either. He said he knew the race would be an uphill battle, but he didn't expect to lose as badly as he did.

"Obviously, I'm disappointed," he said. "I'll be back again in four years."

Johnson, who owns Judy's Restaurant in Charlevoix, won most of his votes within the city's three wards. His next highest area came from East Jordan.

As area results trickled in, Johnson took notes on the voter outcome from each township and city. He said he plans to use the information to help his campaign when he enters the race four years from now.

He said his long hours at the restaurant made it difficult for him to devote enough time to the campaign.

"Sheriff Lasater is very popular," he said.

Johnson thanks his supporters.

"Hopefully, they got the message," he said. "And hopefully, next time more (voters) will get the message."

To Johnson, the message is his qualifications to be the county sheriff. He served on the Clawson police force for seven years and has an associates degree in law enforcement.

Although it's difficult to speculate on why the incumbent won another four-year term, Lasater said that each term he's been able accomplish the goals he put before voters during his campaigns.

"It's been a long summer and a long fall," Lasater said. He faced Jerry Alward, East Jordan's police chief, as challenger in the August primary.

At his swearing in, Lasater said he will have his grandchildren pinned the sheriff's badge on his uniform.

Roloff wins county seat, 2-to-1

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Candidate, Shirley Roloff, had to beat her opponent twice to win a seat on the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners. She did just that, two-to-one.

Though a valiant effort, incumbent Richard Gillespie, could not win back the seat he lost in the primary election. He received 503 votes to Roloff's 1,070.

Roloff will be sworn in at the first of the year to represent District 6, which includes Charlevoix and Beaver Island. Roloff is from Charlevoix. Gillespie is from Beaver Island.

Wearing a "Roloff for county commissioner" T-shirt, Roloff awaited election results until past midnight. Gillespie had congratulated her early in the evening.

"I went over and conceded to her at 7 p.m.," Gillespie said. "There were just too many voters out from the city. The island wouldn't have made a difference."

Gillespie ran as a write-in candidate since both he and Roloff are registered as Republicans.

"My father taught me never to be a quitter," Gillespie said. "That's one of the reasons why I ran so hard."

The race was intense, with each candidate questioning statements made by the other. Gillespie didn't commit to a future race for the seat he will leave in January. At least for now, he is leaving District 6 in Roloff's hands.

"Shirley said she would do her best to represent the island and the city city," Gillespie said, "and I took her at her word."

"I think people really have faith in me that I'll do what I say," Roloff said.

Until the change of representative, Roloff will continue to attend county meetings and visit county-run operations such as Grandvue Medical Care Facility and the road commission.

"I've gotten my feet wet," she said.

Other area challenges

In Charlevoix Township, long-time supervisor incumbent, Oscar Stroud, was re-elected over challenger, Donald Sproul, 531-224. Unopposed candidates who retained their seats are clerk, Carol Martin; treasurer, Theda Williams; and trustees, Dale Glass and Nancy Rajewski.

In St. James Township, on Beaver Island, Timothy McDonough and Gary Damstra won the trustee seats over Yvonne Crandell and Pam O'Brien. McDonough received 107 votes; Damstra, 93; Crandall, 51; and O'Brien, 49 Unopposed representatives elected are: supervisor, James Willis; clerk, Jean Palmer; and treasurer, James Wojan.

In Peaine Township, Joseph Martin won the clerk's position over Diane Heatherington, 91-62. The race for township trustee was won by Paul Nelson and Frank Blatt over Bill Palladino. John Works, Jr,. was elected township-supervisor with 104 votes. Write-in challenger, Joan Petroh, received 31 votes. Treasurer, Rose Connaghan, was unopposed.

Charlevoix girls finish 10th at state cross country meet

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

The luck coach Ken Plude considers half a win wasn't with the Rayders cross country team during the state competition Saturday.

Amid snow, scoring confusion and security guards in Brooklyn, seven team members ran their race to finish 10th out of 21 teams.

"We didn't have our best day, but you can't fault their effort," Plude said.

The team earned the honor to compete after taking first place in the regional race Oct. 26.

Tricia Hodge was the Rayders top finisher at state, with a time of 20:30. She took 28th place out of 141 runners. Following her was Candice Vandergriff, 49th with 21:08; Chelsea Gorkiewicz, 54th with 21:13; Winter Kyvik, 78th with 22:08; Monica Browe 82nd with 22:16; Rachel Newcomb, 84th with 22:18; and Liza Gorkiewicz, 88th with 22:27.

The runners left Charlevoix Friday morning and spent the night downstate to prepare for the Saturday morning race. When the last runner crossed the finish line, the Rayders dropped behind the team they defeated for the regional title: Benzie Central, which came in seventh at state.

"They felt like they did everything they could," Plude said.

The Rayders losing the state title is not the main concern of the coaching staff and parents who traveled downstate to watch the meet. Plude said that one of the boys' team for Class C was sent home with a second-place trophy they hadn't earned. The team had to be called and asked to return the trophy.

"It was a coaching nightmare," said assistant coach, Paul Gelderblom.

Coaches couldn't get to their runners, teams were separated from their families, which are normally allowed to line the track during races. Fans were forced to stay in the stands at the Michigan International Speedway. Binoculars were used to watch what little could be seen.

Gelderblom said he didn't think the difficult circumstance negatively affected the runners, but "they sure didn't like it."

"The atmosphere was not what is normally found at the state meet," Plude said. "The girls did well. They stayed focused. They did their best."

Plude said parents aren't happy with making the long drive and then being excluded from the action. Letters are being written in protest of how the race was organized and handled.

Charlevoix coaches will be taking the letters to a clinic Saturday, Nov. 9, to be reviewed by officials.

Top finishers in the Rayders' class were Carson Crystal City, first; Kalamazoo Hackett, second; and Kalamazoo Christian, third.

With the team's season coming to a close, Plude looks at losing two seniors from his varsity squad: Rachel Newcomb and Chelsea Gorkiewicz.

He expects the experience and talent of the team to carry them into competition next fall.

The eighth-grade A team for girl's basketball finished the season with a 10-2 record after beating Harbor Springs, 34-19, Oct. 23. SCRAPBOOK

Area two tracks tear up wheels, early riding comfort

By Nancy Ritsema
Courier columnist

Chicago shoe manufacturer George VanPelt and his family bought a summer home in Norwood in 1883 when the wagon road between Norwood and Charlevoix was little more than a two track through the wilderness. The deep ruts and mud holes in area roads took their toll on VanPelt's and others buggies; wagons and coaches.

"The road work left undone in the south end of our road district is a disgrace to our town," wrote the Norwood news reporter in 1891. "George VanPelt's rig was overturned there, and he himself was thrown into two different lots. His driver, Colonel Wisner, took an involuntary bath in the creek. The Hon. Dickie Knight of Banks says his wagon was all smashed to pieces while driving on the same road."

Buggy and wagon repair and maintenance a century ago was a job for Norwood's blacksmiths, Thomas Muirhead or Jim Graham. Buggy wheels required far more skill than rotating the tires on a car today.

The wooden wheels on buggies and wagons had steel rims which became loose after traveling rutted roads. The blacksmith removed the riveted rims, heated them in the forge and cooled them rapidly in water. The rims contracted enough through this process to be refitted on the wooden wheels and reattached.

Franeis Jollife remembers how her father Irving Lord, who lived south of Norwood, maintained his wagon's wheels until he had to make a trip to the blacksmith.

"Every summer Mother loaded the washbasket with food for a picnic and we drove the wagon and team to Antrim. After we ate, Dad drove the horses and wagon into shallow water along the Lake Michigan beach. As the horses pulled the wagon through the water the wooden wheels swelled tight in their rims again."

By 1905 there were 2,700 automobiles on Michigan's slowly improving roads. Norwood, like most rural areas, continued in the horse and buggy age into the 1920's and 1930's.

Michigan law required early horseless carriage motorists to pull to the side of the road and stop if approaching horses on the road appeared frightened. In Norwood, where only occasional automobiles traveled the roads, the horses were predictably frightened. Even the people reacted at times with alarm.

"When I was a youngster," the late Alice Heise remembered, "I saw a strange buggy coming over the hill on the road coming into Norwood. It didn't have any horses in front of it and I couldn't imagine why. Then someone told me it didn't need any horses. It was the Cooper milk truck!"

Henry Ford's Model T was developed in part in 1908 as a response to poor roads. It was advertised as a sturdy vehicle which would stand up under the worst road condition of the day.

But the old "tin Lizzie" bogged down on Norwood's roads. Bill Parsons, who lives east of Norwood, recalls the Model T his folks drove to Norwood to visit family and friends.

"The old Model T had a brass radiator. We'd put the top down and lay the front window down on the hood when the sun was shining. Boy, we thought we had the world by the tail!

"If we went to Norwood after a rain we'd always get stuck on Richardson Road. One of us kids would walk home to the farm, get our horse Bessie, harness her up and ride her back to the car.

"We'd slip the reins through the open windshield and get back in the car. Then we'd drive old Bessie, pulling the Model T, the rest of the way home.

"Those were the good old days!"

Key Club comes to town

On Sept. 30, a Key Club was chartered at Charlevoix High School under the sponsorship of the local Kiwanis Club. AnneMarie Statsiek, a teacher at the high school, is club advisor.

Key Club is a service organization for high school students, which operates under school regulations. Club objective is the development of initiative, leadership abilities and good citizenship practices.

The Key Club not only functions on the local level, but on a district and international levels. Key Club is the largest organization of its kind with more than 16,000 members in about 4,200 clubs.

MHSAA rules may keep Owen from playing in '97

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

He will dance at Homecoming with his senior class. He will wait on the mail for college acceptances with his senior class. And ultimately, he will walk down the aisle to "Pomp and Circumstance" as he graduates with his senior class. However, Ben Owens will not be able to play sports with his senior class.

Owens, a Charlevoix High School junior, will become ineligible on his birthday this June because he will be turning 19 years old. He will be in violation of a Michigan High School Athletic Association rule, which prohibits students who turn 19 before September 1 of the new school year from playing sports in a sanctioned school.

"I want to be part of something, and to be part of a team," Ben, who plays on the Rayder varsity football and basketball team, said about the importance of athletics in his life.

There are no exceptions to this MHSAA rule, and the association has gone so far in its enforcement of this rule that its executive board, which meets on a monthly basis to hear eligibility appeals, will not take a second look at cases in violation of a rule which dates back to the Eisenhower administration.

"The rule is not up for interpretation," John Johnson, communications director of MHSAA, said. "You can really tilt the playing field if you allow someone whose age is similar to that of a college sophomore into the same competition with 16-year-olds."

Ben was held back as a result of a serious illness when he was in the third grade. Attending Flushing Elementary school, Ben was forced out of more than 80 days because of persistent and nearly fatal asthma. He took nose-drops, had three different types of inhalers, at times received daily shots, and made routine visits to the emergency room. His father felt it best to hold his son back a grade.

"He was falling behind the others," Jerry Owens said. "We went by what was best for our son. He was not receiving the needed instruction because of all the days missed."

Owens had no idea his son would ever want to play sports, let alone that his decision to keep him back a grade would have such negative results a decade later.

The rule was instituted because the athletic association wanted to prevent people from purposely holding themselves back to play on a better team. Both Jerry and Ben appreciate the rule, and just want to see some exceptions made.

Ben Owens, a Charlevoix junior, hopes to fight an MHSAA rule which would keep him from playing sports during his senior year. He will be 19 during the 1997-98 school year.

Makeshift classroom challenges teacher, students

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

First-grade teacher Molly Randall has done all she can. Even now, during her first November as a teacher, she's visibly frustrated by her classroom.

Of course, it's a stretch to call where her first-grade students meet a classroom. In fact, it's a hallway equipped with flimsy four-foot partitions, which fence the students inside a hallway. The walls might as well not be there.

Yet, it's not that which bothers Randall the most. It's the noise.

"By the end of every single day, my throat is killing me from all the screaming," she said.

Let's take a tour. Along one side sits a computer cluster where other students are verbally instructed on how to use the machines. Behind the wall where she stands at the blackboard, a play practice is chaotically going on. Other times a reading aloud program takes this space. To the right of that is a teacher's work room, where the hum and beeps of a copy machine alternates with the guillotine sound of the paper cutter. Phones ring with the frequency of an AT&T office. Other classes come and go through what usually is a main thoroughfare of student traffic.

"It's really not fair," Randall said. " They're building their whole education in the first-grade and for all these distractions, it's just not fair. I can't imagine being a first-grader and trying to learn how to read in this situation."

For someone who would "teach in the parking lot if I had to," Randall's enthusiasm remains, but it is dampening as each day

Community mourns passing of former mayor

Ed Hansen

Kind, warm, down to earth, trustworthy, honest, dedicated, and caring. All words used when describing a father.

Ed Hansen was not the father of Charlevoix but, during his successful term as mayor and other roads of public service, he possessed all those traits and certainly was a father figure for the whole city.

Hansen, 77, passed away Thursday, Nov. 7, at Charlevoix Area Hospital.

"I'll always have a place in my heart for him, he taught me a lot, " Shirley Roloff said. Newly elected to a county commissioner post, Roloff was just beginning her career in local government as councilwoman when Hansen was mayor. His advice on handling the tough choices which come along with governance still echoes with her.

"He told me 'whatever you do, do your homework. If you do that then you'll make good decisions.'"

Another who was just beginning an ascension in his profession was Ken Winter, general manager of both the Petoskey-News Review and Charlevoix Courier. During Hansen's mayoral tenure Winter was editor of the Courier.

He recalls a man of the people, almost to a fault. Winter recalled many a town meeting which dragged into the next morning because Hansen was so con-

Drivers' ed about to get tougher; Students may soon be charged for class

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

The scope of drivers' education programs throughout the state is about to undergo an overhaul as the result of the enactment of the "Graduated License Bill."

Beginning April 1, 1997, programs must consist of two consecutive segments. The first requires a student to complete 22 hours of classroom instruction and six hours of road training. Before passing to the second segment, a student must log 50 hours of on-the-street experience within six months. At least 10 hours must be devoted to night-time driving. Parents will be required to drive with their children and provide proper documentation of the hours logged. In the second segment, eight more hours of classroom time and a road test are required to earn a license.

A road test was not previously required during a drivers' education class. Any student currently receiving instruction, or who will be in the process of instruction before April 1, 1997, will not be required to go through the rigors of the graduated license process. However, if a student does not have a license by that time, they will be required to pass the road test.

April 1, 1998 will bring the metamorphosis of drivers' education full circle when schools will be allowed to charge students a fee to enroll in a drivers' education program.

At Charlevoix it costs $350 per student for the drivers' education program. Eventually, the state will grant a per student stipend, which Charlevoix will match. Costs up and beyond that will be charged to students. The state and school contribution will range from $75-$150 each, leaving a $50-$200 for the student.

Not willing to charge students such a fee, combined with a major budget crunch makes it feasible that Charlevoix could stop providing drivers' education by April 1998. If they stop offering the course, they could contract with another provider to serve the school district, but that still would cost both the district and students. It's too early to tell if drivers' education is an endangered species in Charlevoix.

"I believe it's important to provide drivers' education for the safety of our community," said high school principal, Gary Grundman, "but mostly for the safety of our kids."

Planners approve requests

It's never too early to get in the spirit of Christmas giving, and the city planning commission kicked the season off by easily granting three approvals to various development plans during their meeting Monday evening.

They approved Charlevoix State Bank's plan to add 1,400 square feet to its building for office space. The Bank will seek approval from the Zoning Board of Appeals to deviate from the requirements for green space.

Continued development to the old theatre building on Bridge St. looks to its next stage with little resistance. The upper levels will become a mix of office space and apartments. The commission granted approval contingent to ZBA approval of the height variance. The plan exceeds the limit, but it will remain smaller than the next building and will maintain the present skyline.

Charles Unbehaun requested a transfer of 15 feet of his property from one tract of land to another adjacent tract. He owns both pieces of property. The commission granted his request. Unbehaun apparently wants to build a garage.

Charlevoix will likely see an amendment to its planning and zoning code. Currently, a variance is valid for six months. Because of the area's propensity for nasty weather, many feel it would be in the city's best interest to increase the time limit to 18 months.

Planning commission secretary Barbara Fels feels the amendment is unnecessary, but is quick to point out that it really does not matter what the time limit is.

"If they have variance, it doesn't make much difference. They'll just reapply and get it again," she said.

Overcrowding continues to hinder elementary school passes for her hallway classroom.

"I don't look at it as a classroom in the hallway," principal Richard Swenor said. "It's a makeshift classroom in a large space which cuts off a hallway."

Swenor has been putting positive spins on the overcrowding problem, which has plagued the elementary school since his arrival three years ago.

The school has a short Christmas list of needs: A room for those first-graders in the hallway, two rooms for second-graders, another room for special education classes, (Now, two special education classes share the same room separated by a bookcase); a science lab for storage of equipment and space to do experiments. Now the lab is roomed in the teachers' workroom and can only be used for storage. The teachers workroom is now in open space adjacent to Randall's ampitheatre of a room. Swenor's computer room can only fit about half a classroom in it.

Swenor has passed through his denial stage, and is surfing on a high tide of acceptance. Problem is, he, too, has run out of ideas to make the situation better.

"The teachers are doing a fantastic job. I'm proud of them," he said. "I think we're still giving the kids a good education, but it could be a whole lot better."

Help may be on the way, though, and it may come from the other end of the student spectrum. Brian Certa's high school construction class, which in the past has built houses for public sale, may be enlisted to build the elementary school a couple portable rooms.

According to district superintendent, Roberta Jackson, that is one of two options she is recommending to the school board. The other — buying new portable classrooms, which cost between $50,000 and $60,000 each. The school could spend that amount utilizing Certa's class and gain two portable units.

Certa, however, expressed some doubt about the plan to use his students for this project. Among his concerns were taking the students out of class for the two weeks it would take to complete the project. He feared the time away from their other classes would be a case of the ends not justifying the means. He's also worried about leaving his other classes with a substitute teacher for that length of time, and, in general, feared that it would add to an already heavy class load for his con-tech class.

"This would be stretching this program too thin, and we'd be taking up more than we can handle," he said. "Sub-contractors do that all the time, but that's their livlihood. We don't want to get involved in that."

Still, if there's a way to pull this off, Certa would like to take part adding, "I'd like to help out the school anyway I can."

Buying portables, or having them built, are still ideas. The money may not be there for that expense. As Jackson says: "The challenge with our budget is that our revenue is severely restricted. The question is, how do we find room in our budget."

Stop-gap measures for overcrowding must come out of the district's budget since the bond issue for a new school and renovations to the others was strongly defeated in September.

As a result, Randall's first year as a teacher in the Charlevoix system will be spent trying to teach seven-year-olds in an environment simulating Grand Central Station.

"I'll be doing something else, and the noise level will increase, so I shout 'boys and girls let's be quieter.' Except I turn around and they're all sitting down, working and doing what they were told to do. I just yelled at them, and the noise wasn't even coming from them."

Should a crew one day show up to build a portable, Randall and her class will probably venture out to help pour the cement. They'll be out in the cold, but at least they'll be out of the hallway.

Kimberley VanMeter, Charlevoix bus supervisor, Gordon Russell and police officer, Jim Schlappi stand behind a police car carrying the pink and blue ribbons of an ongoing bus safety campaign. The ribbons represent the love for all children killed in bus accidents and the hope that people will learn the safety laws.

Ribbons encourage bus safety

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Kimberley VanMeter puts two to 12 daycare kids on the school bus each week day. She also has a young daughter who will be starting kindergarten in 1998.

Because she sees what happens at bus stops, she is spearheading the pink and blue campaign in Charlevoix that has been sweeping northern Michigan.

"The parents and the community need to ban together to educate," the young mom said.

VanMeter is using the campaign to spark local interest in bus safety. The ribbons represent that passion. Pink is for the love of all the children who have died in bus accidents. Blue stands for the hope that people will learn the laws behind bus safety.

AAA recently held bus safety presentations in Boyne City, following the death of Paige Purole, a young girl from Elmira. Some of the Charlevoix residents who attended the safety course have brought that information home.

The pastel ribbons are beginning to hang around town, tied on antennas of those who are joining the cause. Leading the way are Charlevoix police cars and school buses.

VanMeter doesn't see any reason why drivers should be confused about the laws that ensure the safety of young bus riders.

"Whenever you're in doubt, you should stop," she said.

Gordon Russell, transportation supervisor for Charlevoix district schools, said that people run the flashing lights on buses daily. And, when some drivers see the yellow flashing lights, they speed up to get past the bus before red lights begin to flash.

"Anytime there's a bus, somewhere there's kids," he said.

Neglecting to stop when a school bus is flashing its lights is a civil infraction, which means that a fine can be imposed. VanMeter wants to end the lighter treatment that was passed about 18 months ago and return the crime to a misdemeanor level.

"You get a larger fine and penalty for driving without plates than you do risking lives," she said. "That is ridiculous."

The following are road rules for when buses are in sight:

— When overhead red lights are flashing and the bus is moving, prepare to stop.

— When overhead red lights are flashing and the bus is stopped, stop at least 20 feet from the bus.

— When overhead yellow lights are flashing, prepare to stop.

— Proceed when red lights are turned off.

VanMeter said adults and children must know the rules that make the roads on which buses travel a safer place. And safety is why she's been collecting donated ribbon from Kmart and passing it out to whomever will carry the message.

Ribbons can be picked up at Andy's Market, Judy's Restaurant and Charlevoix State Bank. To make ribbon donations, or pass out the symbols, call Van Meter at 547-4155.

Big Rock returns to service

Big Rock Point nuclear plant returned to service last week following an outage of 10 days and 19 hours.

The plant shut down Oct. 23 to verify that certain electrical equipment was qualified to operate in high temperatures and humidity. All 60-plus parts were analyzed through a computer program. Actual testing, by placing the parts in hot and humid temperatures, was not needed.

Christmas spirit lives in Charlevoix year round

EDITORIAL

One aspect of Christmas that everyone enjoys is the Spirit of giving. In Charlevoix, that spirit doesn't come and go with each December, but it is heightened. And a group of givers are gearing up to help families throughout the city with Christmas dinner and gifts.

The Charlevoix Community Christmas Project isn't the accomplishment of one person. It takes every person who cares enough to get involved to meet the needs of the 140-plus families who received bags loaded with chicken, potatoes, salad, dessert, apples, popcorn, soup, crackers, bread and stuffing.

In addition to meals, which are proportioned for each family's size, gifts are given to a variety of people, including elderly and low-income neighbors. Last year, 62 residents of Pine River Place were given chocolates. About 35 other seniors received gifts, 16 of whom live in adult foster care.

Children receive mittens and gifts that are purchased by parishioners at St. Mary's church after drawing the age and gender of a local child from the Giving Tree.

The effort takes a massive amount of contributions, both in goods and volunteer time. Last year, 536 people received some kind of gift through the Christmas project. The program is certainly praise worthy and deserving of a helping hand.

The program's goal: To assist anyone who needs help or might be lonely at Christmas time. Names of needy families and individuals are collected through the Family Independence Agency, school nurse, county jail, Alano Club, health department and adult foster care programs.

Every senior citizen who is over the age of 75, and known to project organizers, receives a gift. It takes more than $4,000 and about 125 volunteers to collect, purchase, pack and hand out groceries and gifts.

As the holidays approach, women like Mary Helen Riggle and Kay Smith make their lists and check it twice. There's no stipulation as to who's naughty and nice. There's just concern that the people of Charlevoix feel loved and cared for.

Even students from local schools donate pennies and go on pop can drives to help earn money for the cause.

On Friday, Dec. 14, volunteers from various churches and organizations will double up and label grocery bags, wrap mittens, bag popcorn and pack sacks. The next Monday will be spent at the church giving out goodies. The high school honor society will help people carry their bags out to their cars and trucks.

We commend everyone who has been involved in the community Christmas project in the past and challenge others to do their part. Christmas isn't about the massive accumulation of gifts underneath your own tree. It's about sharing that spirit of giving with everyone you meet.

Committee suggests school improvements

Editor:

This week the School Room Ad Hoc Citizens Group plans to submit our Interim Report #2 to the school board. Essentially, it will say:

Thank you for your super quick action toward solving the topics of our Interim Report #1 about the Temporary Solutions for the Elementary School-Space Crunch. That is appreciated. The funding for another teacher is also welcome.

Mr. Vane Smith's Suggested Room Use Report is based upon his years of experience as principal in the high and elementary schools. Smith points out that by rearranging a few classes and room use, there is enough space for more students than we now have. He has been there. He has done that.

Our goal was to provide our community with plans, that will fulfill the "New Class Room" need. We are sure that Mr. Smith's program meets that goal for the immediate future. And we are sure that people in the community will agree that Mr. Smith's approach is sound and practical. We congratulate his clear thinking.

After several years it might be possible to better guess the future projected school population. Then, it would be proper to revisit the more rooms question; where they should be built, and how much financing would be needed. Bernie Ward III, Charlie and Pat Butcher, Sue Goss, Vane Smith, Marti Strawbridge and others, think that there would probably be land enough at the three schools to support some extra rooms. This assumes that the middle school is salvageable.

Therefore, some of us see little need for the Board to continue bargaining for new school property which may not be used for years.

Repairs will still be needed. Members of the committee, have started the review process and are formulating recommendations which could be used for a short term bonding request for immediate repair costs. A few prudent options might be included. Charlie Butcher wonders why not push the end of the auditorium out to make room for a stage. Bernie Ward and others think when extra rooms are needed why not put them on the middle school and include extra features for handicapped. Frank and Beth Sheppard have also evaluated middle school options.

We thank all of the many citizens who have spent so much time and effort to help guide us through the maze of group interests, some seemingly at odds with each other, but all heartily in favor of the board deciding on a doable bond proposal that makes sense and is frugal enough to get us through the next several years or until the future student population can be better predicted.

Attending the ad hoc citizen's group are: June Buday, Bernie Ward III, Charlie and Pat Butcher, Lori Foster, Sue Goss, Frank and Beth Shepherd, Vane Smith, Marti Strawbridge and Jim Hisey.

Sincerely,
Jim Hisey, Charlevoix

Election support appreciated

Editor:

A thank you to the voters on Beaver Island and the City of Charlevoix. The turn out on election day was overwhelming and the weather cooperated and I'm sure we're all glad it's over.

I want to thank my family and all my friends that worked so hard and supported me throughout this campaign. Their encouragement and support meant so much to me, without their help I couldn't have done it.

To all of you from the Island and the City that had faith in me and voted me as your new County Commissioner for District 6, I "THANK YOU": What a wonderful feeling to have received so much warm support from my community.

I'm excited to have this opportunity to be able to work with all the department heads and all the county employees. Together we can accomplish many things for our county and district.

I'm looking forward to the next two years working with and for all of you from the Island and the City of Charlevoix. Thank you for giving me this opportunity to serve you.

Thank You,
Shirley Roloff

Candidate thanks voters

Editor:

To Third Ward Neighbors, I would like to thank so many of you that supported me in the Nov. 5th election. I appreciate the many supporters in my campaign who not only encouraged me to run but also had confidence and trust in me. It will be a pleasure to serve you as your Third Ward Councilman. I will work hard to continue to make Charlevoix a great place to live. Thank You.

Sincerely,
Bernie R. DeVries

Even in northern Michigan: Graffiti reveals gang activity

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Gang-related graffiti has been dotting Charlevoix.

In recent weeks, gang symbols have been discovered on the back of the Glen's store, at Mayfield Village of May Street and behind Tank's Cabinetry off Newman.

City police chief, Dennis Halverson, said most of the graffiti has been painted over by people on probation. However, removing the artwork is not officials' only concern.

The hieroglyphics remind police, court officials and residents that northern Michigan gang activity is not a myth. Also, defacing someone's property is a crime. The misdemeanor, called malicious destruction of property, is punishable by up to 90 days in jail, $100 in fines and $100 in costs.

Police are continuing to investigate symbols that include crowns and abbreviations for known gang names. Many gangs have their own alphabet and used graffiti as a way of marking property rights.

Halverson said he's working with school and court officials in the investigation. Charlevoix officer, Jim Schlappi, has gone to school to learn how to read the symbols.

"There's a whole verage to it," Halverson said. "It's all done graphically." The chief said that the graffiti could have been drawn by somebody who was new to the area and was trying to establish property rights.

"We have some concerns over that," he said.

Gang activity and the graffiti it brings is a department priority, Halverson said. He is encouraging full penalties for any gang-related crimes.

Annual event benefits Manna Project

Northern Michigan potters will host the sixth annual "Empty Bowls" soup lunch at noon, Nov. 25, at Stafford's Perry Hotel, in Petoskey. Each year Northern Michigan potters make 200 pottery bowls which they donate to this fund-raiser. Stafford's Perry Hotel provides its main dining room and cooks the soup. Rolls are provided by Johans Bakery. All printing needs are donated by The Print Shop.

All the money raised goes to the Northern Michigan Manna Project. Manna uses the proceeds to supply food for people in need throughout Northern Michigan.

Tickets this year are $12.50 and $25. The $25 "Early Bird" tickets earn the bearers first pick of bowls from 11:15 until 11:30. At 11:30 all other ticket holders will begin making their selection. Two hundred tickets will be sold on a first come, first served basis. This event has been a sell-out since its first year.

For ticket information, call Sturgeon River Pottery, 347-0590.

Charlevoix remembers Hansen

cerned that every voice was heard.

"He prided himself in representing the working people in Charlevoix. He was their person," Winter said. Hansen was a working man himself, and Winter remembered many interviews during which Hansen wore his grubs and had grease on his face from fixing cars. "I'd be interviewing him on something and he would be working on cars in the pits, he was that kind of person."

Friend Ken Staley who served as councilman while Hansen was mayor laughed about the way Hansen would set up an agenda for an upcoming meeting.

"Part of the job was to work with people, so he would walk the town, talking to everybody he could. He would jot down their thoughts, and from there he would write the itinerary for our meeting. To him, this was a hands-on job."

Hansen felt strongly about giving back to the community especially through government service. He was a quiet man, yet as skilled a communicator as they come as he had to weave through his reign as mayor when the city council was broken up into committees all with different agendas. The city had one of the lowest tax rates in its history during his fiscally conservative term, and most importantly he kept the electric system owned by the city instead of making way like everybody else to Consumers Power. The city today still feels the effects of that through lower bills.

Despite any outer resistance, Staley may best remember his crony as one of the best conversation artists of his time. Staley said some of the best lessons came when Hansen was speaking.

"He was a great guy to sit-down and talk to." he said. "He was quiet, but he always had thought-provoking conversation. I'd throw up a chair and have a conversation with him, and it was always time well spent."

A man who dedicated much of his adult life to serving the town he was born and raised in, Hansen spent most of the conversations discussing issues which faced the town, and national issues shrunk to the level where they were important to Charlevoix.

As Staley puts it, "He was Charlevoix all the way through."

Indeed he was, and the town thanks him, for they're better because of him, and are left with an emptiness in their hearts because he will be missed by all.

Deadline approaches for United Way applications

The CharEm United Way is currently accepting applications for funding for 1997. The CharEm United Way is in the midst of its largest fund raising effort to date and will allocate funds in January.

The CharEm United Way had established criteria that agencies must meet, to the best of their ability, to be considered for funding. These guidelines are:

- agency must be 501c(3) or unit of government
- agency should have a voluntary governing board
- agency should make available an annual budget or financial statements available
- must have non-discrimination policy
- must have a license to solicit charitable contributions or an exemption letter
- must have available the annual IRS 900 or letter of exemption

Agencies receiving funds are thoroughly reviewed prior to receiving funding. Each interested agency must submit an application for funding and present their information to a fund distribution panel. No agency is guaranteed funding. The fund distributions panels, who review agencies, are made up of community volunteers and United Way board members. The panels are responsible for determining the eligibility of each agency as well as recommend funding levels to the board. Agency presentations will take place in late January. Community members interested in participating on the review panels may contact the CharEm United Way office.

Any agency that has previously received funding from the United Way has received an application. Any non-profit health and human service agency or qualifying organization that has not been supported by the United Way in the past and is interested in applying can request an application by calling 347-0115 or writing the CharEm United Way at P.O. Box 21, Petoskey, MI 49770. Applications are due back to the United Way no later than Dec. 20, 1996.

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

Beacons of Blessing
By: Rev. Philip G. Schairbaum

A few years ago signs began to appear on many streets across America that read "Neighborhood Alert: You Are Being Watched." How effective they were in determining burglaries, which is why they were put up, is difficult to measure, but the obvious logic behind those signs is that no one, especially wrongdoers, likes to be watched!

But watched we are, whether we like it or not. Whether we're had or good, burglar or believer, criminal or Christian. We're all under some degree of scrutiny. Someone is always interested in our behavior. That means we are all examples in one way or another—either good examples, having conduct worthy of imitation; or bad examples, illustrations of what not to be or do. And whatever our religious persuasion or behavior, inevitably it too will come under scrutiny. We are, all of us, examples for someone.

The great Roman philosopher Seneca said that people trust their eyes more than their ears. "The road by precept is long and tedious," he said, "by example short and effectual."

Like the father who, with a sign of regret, described his son saying, "He's a chip off the old block all right, but I don't like what I see." And then he went on to describe how without even realizing it he had sown seeds of ambition without loyalty, pride without compassion, superiority without sensitivity to truth or beauty or justice. His son in the end reflected all the worldly values that made him a "success" but none of the spiritual values that make worldly achievement worth having. I wonder—is that one of our main problems these days as we close out the twentieth century.

Believe it or not, I can remember the Jack Benny Show, not his radio show hut his T.V. show. A funny routine had Mr. Benny complaining about how his car didn't work. Someone asked him what model it was, and before he could respond, Rochester his friend and chauffeur piped up, "It ain't no model, it's a bad example."

The Apostle Paul commended the early Christians at Thessalonians for being good examples, first for imitating Christ and secondly for becoming something themselves to be imitated by others. Wouldn't it be great if that were said about us in Charlevoix? It ought to be you know, and it can be, if we will but continue to "grow up in every way unto him who is the head, into Christ in whom the whole body is joined and knit together in love."

St. Francis once talked about the need to preach the gospel at all times and all places and when necessary to use words, meaning that what we are speaks far more forcibly than anything and everything we say. That's the power of example!

Stress reduction seminar offered Nov 13

It all starts with the unidentified headache. The muscle twitch. The aching back. The increase in irritability. Stress. The Good (it's there). The Bad (you all know what I mean). The Ugly (stressitis maximus).

STRESS! What in the world can we do about this creature that lives within us? Stress voices itself in the strangest of ways: a snap at a family member or co-worker; making faces and obscene gestures at the slower-than-molasses car in front of you; and most of all, losing that love for life because you're too fatigued to enjoy the small things.

Is there a way to deal with all of this? SURE! Burns Clinic Psychologist Larry Warner will present a humorous talk about stress on Wednesday, Nov. 13 at 7 p.m. The presentation will be held in the Community Health Education Center (across from the main entrance of Northern Michigan Hospital), and there is no charge.

Learn about stress and how it affects you. Learn how to deal with this stress, lessen it, and when there may be a need for professional assistance.

Registration is required! Please call Northern Michigan Hospital HealthAccess to register, 800-248-6777.

Big Rock Manager attends training

Jerry Boss, the operations manager at Consumers Power Company's Big Rock Point nuclear plant is traveling to California, Canada and France.

But it's not for a vacation.

Boss was selected by Ontario Hydro nuclear, a Canadian utility, to participate in their senior nuclear plant management training program.

He departed Charlevoix Nov. 3 to begin classroom training at a retreat outside Toronto. The five week program includes three weeks of intensive classroom training. The 10 participants hail from nuclear utilities located in the United States, Canada and India.

Each student is assigned a mentor. The students and mentors will review major case studies involving industrial successes and failures; discuss management, observation and supervisory methods; and focus on improving nuclear plant performance, particularly in the areas of operations, maintenance, human performance, and teamwork.

The course includes visits to nuclear power plants to study various operating methods. Boss will visit the Cattenom nuclear plant in France, the Pickering nuclear plant in Canada, and the Diablo Canyon nuclear plant in Avila Beach, California.

"I am extremely excited about the trip and its educational potential," said Boss. "This program will help me become a better manager and help us in our quest for continuous improvement at Big Rock Point."

Boss has been operations manager at Big Rock Point for the past two years. Prior to that he was the engineering manager. He and wife Sarah live in Charlevoix and have two children in college.

Big Rock Point was the world's first high power-density boiling water reactor and an important research site for the industry. The plant has generated electricity since 1962 and was named a Nuclear Historic Landmark by the American Nuclear Society.

Owned and operated by Consumers Power Company, Big Rock Point is capable of producing 67 megawatts of electricity, enough to serve a community of 38,000 people.

Consumers Power Company, the principle subsidiary of CMS Energy Corporation, is Michigan's largest utility providing natural gas and electricity to more than six million of the state's nine and one-half million residents in all 68 Lower Peninsula counties.

Hospital training yields funds for equipment

Charlevoix Area Hospital has been given $3,000 to share with the Charlevoix County EMS system as a result of an advanced pediatric life support training effort.

"The classes under the sponsorship of the University of Michigan and the State of Michigan, as well as the funds, are part of the pediatric care focus at the State level," says Josie Young, R.N., Charlevoix Area hospital house supervisor and Emergency Department nurse.

As an outgrowth of the course, she says, a pediatric steering committee has been formed including each hospital and ambulance service in Charlevoix, Grayling, Gaylord, Petoskey, Cheboygan and Alpena. "This is the first such committee in Michigan,' she days, "and our intent is to look at pediatric health care issues in northern Michigan."

The $3,000 will be used to purchase pediatric emergency medicine reference books, a baby training intubation head, an ALS baby manikin, needles, child traction splint, and a training video and supplies.

Holiday sales to increase

Michigan retailers have double-digit expectations for the upcoming holiday shopping season.

Three of every four retailers across the state expect increased sales over last year's season, according to the annual Michigan Retailers Association pre-holiday survey, conducted jointly with the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago. Sales will increase by an average of 13 percent, the retailers project.

"Michigan retailers believe this will be a good shopping season, certainly much stronger than last year," said Larry Meyer, CEO of the Michigan Retailers Association and former Director of the Michigan Department of Commerce.

"Although there are five fewer shopping days between Thanksgiving and Christmas, we believe shoppers will be out in force. The economy continues to perform well and our state is enjoying record low unemployment."

Martial arts club kicks, chops its way to victory

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Rich Wojan, Dan Soullier, and his daughters Jessica, 13, and Anna, 11, kicked and chopped their way down to Houston to compete in the Martial Arts World Championships. They competed in the genre known as kuk sool won, a field of martial arts typified by the attacking of pressure points and joint locking.

Wojan, who earned his blackbelt earlier in the year, took a silver medal in the Senior Advanced self-defense competition while taking a bronze in the sparring event. Jessica Soullier duplicated those results in the Junior Advanced Division.

"It was just like a football game," Wojan said of the atmosphere. "There is a lot of action at an event like this. A lot to see, and the crowd was pretty responsive to that."

The large crowd at the Houston Astrodome Pavillion, a smaller facility adjacent to the dome itself, was business as usual for Jessica.

"I was cool. I was thinking it's not that bad. I didn't get too nervous until after I was done, and was waiting to see if I placed," she said.

Dan Soullier and Chris Purdy spar in a kuk sool won drill. The club practices at the Charlevoix Fitness Center.

Jessica and her sister became involved in martial arts through their father, and in the beginning she was skeptical about its place in her life. Her mind began to change as she went to competitions, not because she got to test her skills, but because of the expert demonstrations done at the end of each event.

"People were wrecking boards, and I just thought 'Wow, I want to be a black belt someday,'" she said. Now a blue belt with two red stripes, her journey towards blackbelt is nearing the mid-point, a process which took Wojan, 44, five years and nine months to complete.

"It's a lot of training, a lot of studying, and it can be frustrating at times when you're not advancing as fast as you think you should," he said of the grueling process. "It takes a desire not just to like martial arts, but a desire to study martial arts. It's tough on you all-around, both physically and mentally."

Wojan points to various reasons why people become intrigued in the martial arts. It's a nice aerobic, and physical work-out, learning the craft can be fulfilling, and, of course, self-defense.

"I was weak before I started," Jessica said. "Once I got stronger and tougher, I became more confident when people picked on me to defend myself."

Wojan and the Soulliers are members of the Charlevoix Martial Arts Club, where Wojan is the head instructor. The club as a whole participated in a Michigan tournament up in Sault Ste. Marie. Wojan won a fourth place in men's advance self-defense; Dan Soullier won a second place in men's advance sparring, a third in forms, and a third in self-defense; Chris Purdy took a fourth place in men's advanced sparring; Anna Soullier took first place in junior advanced self-defense; and Jessica Soullier took a second place in junior advanced self-defense.

Members of the Charlevoix Martial Arts Club show-off awards won at a tournament last month in Sault Ste. Marie.

High school senior ineligible for football, basketball

"It's a good rule, and everything," Ben, who plays varsity football and basketball, said, "but it's not like I had that stuff on my mind back then. I just don't think this rule applies here."

The Owens are not the only ones who want exceptions. They have enlisted some serious help to spur their cause. Presently, Rep. Bev Bodem, R-Alpena, is drafting legislation to force exceptions into the rule.

Kerry Krone, legislative aid for Bodem, said the rule wasn't designed to hinder high school students who had been held back because of an illness. Despite being in the early stages of drafting, and coming off an election, Bodem's office said it was "feasible" that the legislation could be voted on by the end of the summer session in 1997. If passed, it would have to be signed by the governor.

Even if passed the athletic association has taken the stance that they would be above a state law.

"We accept no tax money, and are not a government agency," Johnson said. "We have our own constitution, and the people we serve are the schools in our association."

The Owens' best approach could be to amend the athletic association's constitution. To do so, they would have to draft the amendment, and have it signed by both principal Gary Grundman and superintendent Roberta Jackson. Next, the amendment would be voted on by the association's legislative council of 19 people. A simple majority would pass the amendment.

The final step would be a vote through the mail by all member schools. Of 719 schools, two-thirds approval would be needed.

If the process fails for the Owens family, they have an overriding plan. If within 90 days of the association's ruling, they can get one-third of the member schools to sign a petition, then the amendment would bypass the council and go directly to a vote by the schools.

The outline above would require a lot of work, but Charlevoix athletic director, Barry Anderson, seems willing to go through the process to maintain Ben's eligibility.

"Ben is a fine young man, and a great athlete," Anderson said. "I'm not that familiar with this process, but we'll explore every option and keep working on it. He's a great kid, and I want to see him play."

Johnson, however, is confident that the rule will remain exactly how it is.

"We get the sense that the schools like this rule the way it is now even when it affects them," he said. "That's what being a responsible member is all about because not everything is to everyone's liking."

Jerry Owens though, said he feels that the rule in its present state is not only unfair, but discriminatory. He just wants his son to be able to look back at his high school days, and remember fondly the days he wore the maroon of Charlevoix.

"As a citizen of the United States, a student in the Charlevoix Public School system, and as a taxpayer, he should be able to play ball in his last year of school."

Diabetes screening Nov. 18

Diabetes is on the increase in the United States. Early detection can mean control and a near normal life. Charlevoix Area Hospital's Community Outreach Program and TIPDON (Health Department) are offering two free diabetes screening clinics this month.

On November 18 from 10 a.m. - 12 noon testing will be available at the East Jordan Senior Center, 110 Main Street, East Jordan.

On November 21 from 10 a.m. - 12 noon anyone may have the screening at the Boyne City Senior Center, 319 N. Lake, Boyne City.

Participants should eat a high carbohydrate meal two hours before being tested. A suggested breakfast is cereal, toast with jelly, and orange juice. The test involves a finger prick. Those already diagnosed with diabetes will not gain any new information from this screening.

November is National Diabetes Month. Warning signs of diabetes include extreme thirst, blurry vision from time to time, frequent urination, unusual tiredness or drowsiness, and unexplained weight loss. You need to be screened for diabetes if you are over 30 and overweight, if you have a parent, brother or sister with diabetes, and if you are of Finnish, Native American, Hispanic or African American descent.

Free giveaways and information will be available. Open to the public and no reservations necessary. Funding is being provided through a grant from the Health Care Financing Administration.

Historical Society cultivates memories

November brings a heightened awareness of nature's power and ability to change a calm and productive maritime port to a scene of shipwreck survival and maimed, scuttled vessels.

The people of Charlevoix have also been witness to historical events of this type and still continue today under the surface of Lake Charlevoix. Two such witnesses, whose written and oral testimonies are preserved at the Charlevoix Historical Society, include past Charlevoix residents, the late George Burns and his son Robert, and the late William Bellinger.

One such artifact of Charlevoix's maritime history is the vessel Jennie Mullin, now resting in the shallow waters of Oyster Bay. While not the first vessel to end its shipping days there, she is the most complete and visible of those that rest there today.

The Jennie Mullin was built for Oliver B. Mullin of Chicago, Illinois in 1866. Her hull was put together and her two masted fore and aft rigging fitted at Depere, Wisconsin, under the supervision of builder E. Sorensen. The name most likely came from the owners' wife or daughter, as was common at that time. The Jennie Mullin measured 117.8' x 26.0' x 9.0' with a tonnage of 20,629.

After being launched she worked the Great Lakes hauling oats, wheat, tanbark, and other wood products to industrial centers such as Chicago and Toledo. Throughout her career her home port changed from Chicago, to Toledo, to Grand Haven, and eventually to Charlevoix. She suffered many partial sinkings (Beaver Island in 1906), accidental running aground Incidents, and an 1888 collision with the propeller Wisconsin.

On one trip, about 1907, the ship was anchored off the south side of the pier heads to receive cargo floated out from shore, eventually bound for Chicago. But before she could set sail, a summer squall beached her during a failed attempt to tow her safely to the harbor or open water. After the heavy weather passed, longshoreman unloaded her cargo, and called for salvager Captain Tim D. Smith of the tug James Martin. She was released from the sandy shore by Smith and towed into Round Lake for clean up. Her captain and owners refused to pay Smith for his efforts, probably due to her age and mounting overhead, and he became her reluctant owner. She sat a few years in a berth and without upkeep, then made her final voyage to Oyster Bay under the tow of Captain Smith and his tug again. After being anchored in the east part of the bay she was left to rot, and eventually sank. In the meantime local children played on her, and eventually many more curious divers would strip her of her hardware and loose wood. While there is no documented date for her sinking, she was removed from official enrollment in 1910.

Over the years more boats would join her in Oyster Bay after being scuttled, but the Jennie Mullin remains the favorite among the memories of past and current residents of the "port of dead ships."

Private wells could be prohibited near city water system

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Landowners who want to drill their own wells within reach of the city's water system may no longer be able to do so.

Monday, city council took the first step in prohibiting residents from operating private wells where city water is available.

The ordinance amendment wasn't passed primarily to push further development of the city's system. It is a step in meeting government requirements regarding underground pollution near Nanny's Restaurant, which is located downhill from the garage where the city once had underground gasoline storage tanks.

The city was originally advised by the Department of Environmental Quality that it should get a deed restriction on land swapped between the city and Nanny's. In addition to not allowing the landowner to install a water well, they city would need permission to put a monitoring well near Nanny's to help track the contamination.

Council member Bruce Reid backed getting the restriction. However, a motion supporting that opinion already failed at the last council meeting. City manager, Mike Wiesner, also supported the restriction. City attorney, Jim Young, was asked to prepare a report outlining options.

"The people on council ought to know what they voted down," Reid said, "because I don't think they know now."

Between meetings, Young researched options in complying with government requirements. According to him, the city has three choices:

— Continue site remediation until the underground water meets environmental standards. Consultants estimate that this would cost between $100,000 and $200,000.

Top scouting honor earned by two Charlevoix teens

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

During the climb towards adulthood, many benchmark dates dot the quest. The day you receive your driver's license, the day you cast your first ballot and the day you sip from your first legal beer.

For a select few young men, one rung of the ladder is scaled when awarded their eagle scout rank, boy scouts' highest honor.

Forty-one such young men from the greater northern Michigan area were honored earlier this month, among them Charlevoix residents Brian Martinus and John Chase.

Amid a generation who have made it a tradition to abandon scouting in pursuit of seemingly more worldly activities, both Martinus and Chase remained in scouting. As it turns out, nothing could have been more worldly or adventurous.

Both have been hiking, camping, and rafting in all corners of the state. Through the scouts' high adventure program, Chase was able to travel to the Torturas on a snorkeling trip.

"You see coral reefs in pictures, and on TV, but to see them in real life is amazing," he said.

Both agree that beyond the traveling, scouting has introduced them to the people beyond Charlevoix the Beautiful, and many of their friends attend high schools in other cities.

"It shows other ways of looking at the world, different from our northern Michigan perspective," Chase, a senior at Northwest Academy said. "No matter where you're from, what language you speak, we're all trying to do the same stuff."

Chase and Martinus continued towards earning their eagle rank for different reasons. For Chase it was a matter of family pride. His father had set the tone with a distinguished scouting career, and John's older brother Jerry had already earned his own eagle rank.

"I can't even remember a time when I haven't been in scouts, this has always been a goal," Chase said, who plans to study computer science in college.

For Martinus, a senior at Charlevoix High School, his quest toward eagle took a more individualized path. Shackled with a learning disability, which forces him to reread his notes and school books many times before fully understanding, scouting gave him an avenue of success at a young age. As each merit badge was earned, his confidence soared, helping him fight through his disability.

"It gave me something I was good at, something I could excel in," he said. "If I set my mind to do something, I know now that I can do it."

Martinus, who will study youth ministry in college, attacked his scouting with an uncommon gusto, and as part of his final project refinished all the peace poles in town and built three new ones. He, like Chase, is determined to spread the message of scouting, and as part of the Big Brother/Big Sister program has begun to take his younger brother to scouting meetings.

"Scouts have kept me on track with where I want to go in my life, and can do the same for others," he said.

Martinus pointed out that for those who come from broken homes, or struggle with the finer points of academic life, like himself, scouting can give kids a bright spot in life, something to look forward to.

One thing seems apparent, and that is that both have exceeded the scouts' Be Prepared motto, and will walk through their adulthood better people because of the extra rung on the ladder they climbed.

Elementary students gain international exposure, languages

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

During traditional elementary school days, children learn to recite the Gettysburg Address, rattle off alphabetically the 50 state capitals and that glue provides no extra nutritional value.

Students at Charlevoix elementary school are going farther. They have begun to take foreign language classes, and willingly doing so away from regular school hours. Students in grades 2-5 can enroll in their choice of French, Spanish, and German classes, and have the option to take the class after or before school.

First-graders have the option to enter a class where they are taught the bare basics in five-week sessions for the three above languages, as well as Italian.

The classes, being held for the first time this fall, are voluntary, and principal Dick Swenor admitted that at first he worried that interest may have been exaggerated. However, he couldn't be happier with the turn-out.

"I thought 'well, maybe we'll get one class,' but we have over 80 kids in the program," he said.

The classes, which meet twice a week, were the brainchild of Charlevoix resident Laurie Foster. A mother of three, Foster arrived with her family in Charlevoix in January. The foray into these language classes is an idea she brought with her from Rochester Hills, where similar classes met with resounding success. Foster, who teaches the German classes, sees her efforts to start the program as a way to contribute to her new community.

The classes aim to teach students simple vocabulary like animals, body part, household items and basic communication skills. They are geared toward the fun side of learning, an important point considering students are giving up playtime. They are not drill-orientated read and recite classes.

Laurie Foster and her German class take a time out from their studies. The students above are just part of a new foreign language department at Charlevoix Elementary School.

"We don't sit down with textbooks and have them read," Foster said. "We play hangman, twister to learn the colors, and a baseball vocab game. We try to do creative things which will stick in their minds."

Another aim of the class is to introduce some of the cultural aspects that define the country and people behind the language. For example, during Halloween week, students learned its relationship to Europe's widely celebrated All Saint's Day. Showing how other people live is about as important to the curriculum as learning how to say "how are you doing."

"In addition to the excitement of a different language, maybe the

Charlevoix residents, pastors reach out to help homeless

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Local needs are not unnoticed.

A group of Charlevoix people are banning together to hand troubled neighbors, and even strangers, a bootstrap.

"You can't expect miracles overnight," said Ward Potts, director of Nehemiah House, a homeless shelter in Petoskey. "But you can look for signs along the way."

The Emergency Housing Task Force is comprised of Charlevoix pastors and residents who are looking for ways to help as they begin to organize for what is hoped to become a homeless shelter. They are not housing experts or developers. They are people who want to meet the need.

The need, according to Family Independence Agency employee, Bonnie Worden, includes people who are homeless and single parents with young children who live in tents, cars or substandard housing.

"It always seems to be worse in the winter," Worden told the group during one of its monthly meetings. "People who managed to find something in the summer are needing additional services."

Today through Saturday, Nov. 23, is National Homeless Shelter Week. However, the local group need not be recognized by a declared week. They have spent about three months looking into local needs, listening to experts and planning next steps.

For now, there is no shelter. The group is unsure whether the community will be as willing as they are to offer a warm place to those who would otherwise be left to wander. It is also exploring funding sources, which at this time is coming from the Charlevoix Pastoral Association and local churches.

"We're not about buildings," said pastor Phil Schairbaum, "but without a building, we don't have an outreach."

The group is discussing the depth of its mission, whether they will provide short-term housing or ongoing counseling for a fewer number of people. Regardless, they plan to help solve problems and not just provide band-aids for people who are more than transients passing from shelter to shelter.

"They're our neighbors," Worden said, who lives outside Charlevoix and works at the local government office. "They're the faces you see on the street everyday.

"It can happen to anyone."

Worden explained that many of the local people who find themselves homeless are those who are in transition times of life, such as a divorce or loss of job.

The group is continuing to define its plan to help. It could eventually become a Christian community center and offer a food pantry, shelter, soup kitchen and elder outreach, or it could model the shelter run by Potts in Petoskey.

Terry Salacina, director of the local Family Independence Agency in Charlevoix, said that cuts in government assistance are making the way and a greater need for the church to help.

"Some politicians are saying that churches can and will step in and help," Salacina said, referring to the potential gesture as a return to the "good-old-days."

He said people need help getting work, learning to budget finances and being exposed to different lifestyles.

Schairbaum said he recognizes that it's impossible for the group to meet all local needs.

"We want to do our part," he said.

Whether the group decides to go after a homeless shelter or open a Christian service center is yet to be decided. However, they are in pursuit of a project that Schairbaum said has been laid on many of their hearts.

"We can't do for people," Worden said. "We have to do with people."

For more information on the task force or how to offer assistance to the group, call Larry Grooters, president of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association at 547-9482.

Top show horses are home grown

You'll have to pardon David and Stephanie Draper if they seem a little tired. After all, creating your own civilization can be taxing work.

In a bizarre way, that is what the Drapers' Strawberry Hill Farms business is all about — forming a new civilization. Except that the Draper's aren't dealing with humans; rather their civilization is marked mainly by horses.

In 1980 all they had was land. Sixteen years later they have more than a dozen Morgan horses, many of which are among the world's best for show.

Last month at the Grand National & World Championship Morgan Horse Show in Oklahoma City, Carissa, a five-year-old from Strawberry Hill earned honors as a Reserve World Championship. Carissa is not alone in the world class potential of the horses from the Draper s' farm. Indeed when a trade magazine assessed that "some of the finest young stock in the country will be found in Charlevoix," they specifically singled out the Drapers' farm in Ellsworth as a main reason.

The Drapers aren't so much creators as they are caretakers of this

OPINIONS

Rayders join in supporting Ramblers at regionals

Throughout high school sports, neighboring towns become the biggest rivals. Charlevoix vs. Boyne City. East Jordan vs. Petoskey. Harbor Springs vs. Boyne Falls.

Recently, however, fans who have traditionally rooted for each others' defeat, united to support the Boyne City Ramblers during their challenge at the "Upperdome" in Marquette. Saturday's game — the regional championship against the Iron Mountain Ironmen — was backed by people throughout the northern part of the lower peninsula.

Individuals and businesses supported Rambler head coach, Pat Klooster, who is a Charlevoix resident, while he led a young team into a huge indoor stadium and a rare experience. Although Boyne City lost, 30-15, the Ramblers left their mark as having made it to the big time before the clock closed out the game.

We commend the attitude of all those who adopted the Ramblers during their moments of fame. Financial backing enabled the game to be broadcast locally for all the people who couldn't hop aboard a spectator bus or make the long drive. The familiar voices of Kevin Fitzpatrick and Tom Neidhamer kept listeners involved in each play.

Boyne City was backed by more than the people who sat in the stands at Earl Brotherston Field throughout the season. The team's depth reached deep into northern Michigan sidelines.

Competition between neighboring towns is healthy. It teaches young athletes that hard work does pay off, and that losing gracefully is as important as huddling for the winning chant. With an increasing emphasis on winning and accumulating stats at the high school level, this most recent support by area sportsters is encouraging. It also reminds us that whenever an area team advances beyond local conference play, the larger community shows up with its cowbell, at-a-boys and slaps on the back.

We have all shared a moment of what many of these athletes will cherish as the most exciting time of their high school days.

Congratulations Ramblers for your hard-earned victories and your showing at the regional finals. And, thanks for letting us be a part of the enthusiasm that takes high school sports above all else.

Congratulations Pat Klooster for representing Charlevoix as a respectable coach and taking your influence beyond our borders.

See you in 1997 when you can bet that the Rayders will be ready to present a new challenge to the Boyne City team.

Letters to the editor

Former mayor's family appreciative of community compassion

Editor:

It is said that Edward Hansen gave much to this community. In his passing, this community in turn touched the hearts of his family as you so generously expressed your sympathy in so many kind ways.

We are sure he smiled about the beautiful tribute written in the Charlevoix Courier and beamed with us when we were informed that flags at city hall were flying half mast in his honor.

Thank you for sharing in our grief and helping us replace some of the sadness with pride as you expressed your respect and appreciation of him to us.

We are deeply grateful.

We would also like to thank those who provided prizes; Burnin' Daylite Tack Shop, Walgreens, Grulers, Applewoods, Schan Jewelers, Boyne River Brewery, Dr. Christopher Fair, Trophy Case, Scott David and The Boyne River Inn-Bob Ruhs for the great end of session party.

Our heartfelt thanks to those who have supported us over the years and who make this program possible, Lester Crandell, Frank Leist, Gentry Pecveyhouse, the parents, and all the caring individuals we call "The Volunteers." Hope to see you all in the spring!

Hunters should be good sportsmen

Editor:

Might made right! If our pet dogs or cats were chased for hours, terrified, before they were killed — we would be outraged. Hunters and the NRA have prevailed. Lesser known animals will continue to be terrorized, in a run for their lives, before they are finally shot. Are we not more civilized than to allow this cruel method of hunting? Hunters who are true sportsmen should: "Do it quickly or don't do it!" Shame on us!

Is Charlevoix thankful?

Two weeks ago, the Courier began a Thanksgiving promotion, asking the community to write and tell us what they are thankful for.

Three local grocery stories donated turkeys for first prize in each of three age categories: 12 and under, 13 to 18-years-old and adult. It was announced that the turkeys would be given to the author of the best letter in each category.

Amazingly, not one letter has arrived on thankfulness to commemorate the coming holiday.

The promotion was begun to do more than give away turkeys. It was the desire of the staff to encourage the community to think on all they have to be thankful for and to share it with their neighbors.

We hope someone takes the time to be thankful.

EDITH

EDITH GILBERT

Everyone knows what the guys do during deer huntin' season. But what about the women? Sure, some go huntin', too, but not all that many. Some women follow long standing family traditions and prepare huge pots of chili to welcome home the local hunters, who have bagged their bucks on opening days. They listen enthusiastically to where the deer was spotted, what time of day he was sighted, how far he needed to be dragged out of the woods and how many points he has on his antlers. They seriously discuss which cuts of meat go into the freezer and which will be shared with friends and neighbors. They trade recipes for venison. They enjoy the excitement of the day with the whole family.

Then there are the men who take off for a cabin in the Upper Peninsula to go huntin' with the guys for that 10-point buck. Some of their wives welcome the huntin' season with a "Thank the Lord! Now I can go hunting too — for bargain trophies at the Mall of America!" With a Christmas shopping list in one hand, and a credit card in the other, and hearts racing wildly at the sign of a sale, these women return several days later, happy and smiling with their shopping bags overflowing.

I hear about women who schedule delightful cruises for themselves during hunting season. Then there are those, like Susan Flanders, who tells us that she and three women friends are taking their four teen-age daughters to New York. Here they will scout the Christmas Spectacular at Radio City Music Hall, stalk a few plays, such as "Cats" and "Grease", graze on salads at the Radio City Music Hall and watch ice skaters as they gracefully circle the rink to the tune of "Rudolph the Red-nosed Reindeer." Lucky girls!

Another inspired friend has sent out orange invitations to her 10 closest friends inviting them to come to dinner, dressed in hunting garb, with day-glow accents. All beverages will be served in a brown beer bottle, and the main-menu will be steaks on a grill, potatoes and pie. There will be a quiz on deer hunting terminology, with a very feminine (but secret) gift for top score. Telling jokes is encouraged, and she promises there will be no recordings.

In the meantime there are those of us awaiting enthusiastic house guests, who arrive in pickup trucks, bringing guns and hunting gear and smoke cigars. A pot of bean soup with a ham bone is simmering on the stove. On opening day hunters rise early and go forth in high hopes. Snowfall has been heavy, which will make tracking easier for them. Living in northern Michigan, surrounded by orange clad hunters, one can't help getting caught up in the spirit of the season. One has to put all projects on "hold" until the buck fever passes and life gets back to normal — maybe next week. Then it will be story telling time about the one that got away — both in the woods and in the malls.

Students heading to Washington ball

Zak Bakker isn't often seen in a tuxedo. But the high school senior considers the inaugural ball in Washington D.C. worthy of his rental.

Bakker is one of 16 high school government students who will be traveling to the country's capital during one of the most exciting times following each presidential election. And from Jan. 19 to 21, the class will be doing Washington like never before.

Being in Washington during such an active political time should help the students become more informed on the democratic process, Bakker said. He expects the experience to go far beyond the students' eight-grade trip to the capital.

"We will actually be watching the president be sworn in," he said. "It will give us a better understanding, more insight, to what's going on."

Bakker and his classmates are excited about the fun they'll have on the trip, but he also recognizes the benefits. And he expects the education he is about to receive will make him a more conscientious voter.

"If you don't know what's going on, then when you vote, you don't know what you're voting for," he said.

Beyond seeing the swearing in, the Vietnam Memorial, Capital Hill, the Federal Reserve and the Supreme Court, the students will be donning their formals for the inaugural ball for teens. Rumor has it that President Bill Clinton will be stopping by.

"Many people don't get this opportunity so young," Bakker said. "Everything about government will be happening in front of you."

Jessa VanGuilder said she wants to see the future president at the inauguration. She expects it to be one of the most memorable experiences of her life.

Three chaperons, including government teacher Annemarie Statsick, who is organizing the trip, will travel with the class. Statsick said the students have been raking lawns, holding bake sales and selling T-shirts to help pay for the trip.

Statsick can be reached at 547-3200 for information on fund-raising.

FAMILY

Litherland-Newman

Jenny Sue Litherland, of Ambrose, Ga., and Daniel Andrew Newman, of Charlevoix, were joined in marriage at 2 p.m. June 8, 1996, at Evangel Temple, in Princeton, Ind., before about 250 guests.

Jenny is the daughter of J. and Rita Litherland of Ambros, Ga. Daniel is the son of Shirley Newman and the late Bruce Newman of Charlevoix.

Special guests included Charles and Marian Litherland of West Salem, Ill., grandparents of the bride, Laura Kroll, of Keensburg, Ill., grandmother of the bride, and Aldis and Margaret Wagner, of Scottville, Mich., uncle and aunt of the groom. Other special guests of the groom included Colleen Mitchell and Bonnie Voorhees, of Charlevoix, and Cindy and Becky Figard, of Grand Rapids. Guests came from Michigan, Kentucky, Illinois, and Indiana.

The church was decorated with alternating white and cranberry pew bows.

Spiral candelabras with winding ivy accented the altar area, with the mothers' candles and the unity candle resting on an heirloom cloth on the altar itself.

Musical selections included "Parents' Prayer," "Whither Thou Goest," and "I Will Be Here," sung by Sara Litherland, sister of the bride. Pianist was Anita Marsh.

Jenny was escorted down the aisle by her father. She wore her grandmother's ivory satin dress with long sleeves, fitted bodice, sweetheart neckline and full skirt and train. She carried a dozen red, pink, and red-tipped white roses, accented with greenery ad baby's breath.

Her veil hung from a crown decorated with pearls and flowers, and was edged with the lace from her grandmother's veil.

The bride's maid of honor was her sister, Sara Litherland. Bridesmaids were Jennifer Stohr and Jana McCord, friends of the bride. They wore cranberry teelength taffeta dresses with sweetheart necklines; each carried a single red-tipped white rose accented with baby's breath. The flower girl was Emily Trimble, cousin of the bride, who wore a matching cranberry dress with white lace edging on the sweetheart neckline.

The best man was Mark Newman, brother of the groom. Groomsmen were Hans Kindsgrab and Jason Musselman, friends of the groom.

Ushers were Trevis Litherland, brother of the bride, and Christopher Maddox, friend of the groom. They wore black tuxedos with black ties and vests. The greeter was Suzanne (Pixley) Swanson, cousin of the bride.

The presiding minister was Rev. Mike Marsh of Evangel Temple. The father of the bride offered a prayer of blessing on the couple before the pronouncement of marriage.

Wedding pictures of the bride and groom's parents and grandparents were arranged at the entrance of the reception hall.

Decorations for the sanctuary and reception were provided by the bride's aunt, Carolyn Hocking. A three-tier cake was prepared by Kathy Blythe for the reception. A trellis decorated with white lights, ivory toole, and pink flowers and ivy enhanced the cake and hors d'oeuvres table. The cake was cut and served by Althea Childers, Christy Preston and Renee Wolfarth. Punch was provided by the Women's Ministries Group. The reception was held in the Family Life Center of the church.

The couple traveled to Gatlinburg, Tenn., for their honeymoon in a cabin near the Smoky Mountain National Park.

They are making their home in Upland, Ind., where Dan is System Installation Specialist/Assistant Manager of the Information Center at Taylor University. Jenny is currently completing her degree in Biblical Literature at Taylor University.

Cultural awareness starts early in language classes biggest thing is a new awareness of another culture," Swenor said.

Since America is considered the world's melting pot, it's necessary to learn where some of the ingredients come from, and that, learning about experiences in other countries and cultures will "spark interest and they'll want to learn and grow," Foster said.

The students at Charlevoix can now begin a foreign language education earlier than most, and at the very least will have a base of knowledge to launch from when they are allowed to take their first language class for a letter grade in the seventh-grade, when they will go beyond "Avez le bon temps," "Hace muy frio," and "Quelle heure a-t-il."

For the record, according to a third-grader, those phrases that circle the hallways translate to "Have a good time," "Today, it is very cold," and "What time is it?"

Couple evolves from city slickers to horse breeders new civilization.

"It's a project-orientated work," David said of his duties. "There's always something to do. Building a fence, transportation of the horses, digging a pond." Now, they are in the midst of expanding their barn and training facility.

The Drapers did not set out to a life of horse breeding. They did, however, share a love of horses as they followed through on their hobby.

"It was a gradual evolution, we didn't do it consciously," he said. "All of a sudden we had enough stock to sell, so we figured it was time to be in business."

Along the way, both Drapers have developed a keen eye for horses much in the same way an art collector can spot a budding masterpiece. Some of their focal points are the build of the horse, specifically the length of its neck and legs, its grace when trotting, and whether the horse has a natural mane. This is secondary to the most important feature, the horse's genes.

"You have to start by looking for bloodlines that are capable of winning," he said. Now comes the Drapers' adeptness for running a commune.

While their hard work, and expert eyes for horses have made success easier, one aspect the Drapers won't discount as contributing to their success has been they're settling in northern Michigan.

Due to David's work in the automotive industry, the Drapers spent much of their time getting the business off the ground while commuting up and down the state. Two years ago, they moved to Ellsworth full time.

"We'd come up for the weekends, and found we were not wanting to go back. So finally we didn't," Stephanie said. "It was just terrible to have to drive back four hours in snow just to fight commuter traffic."

Being able to concentrate on the farm full time helped, but the Drapers are quick to point out that the environment of the area enabled the whole venture to be a success from the get-go. Typically, horses and other farm animals thrive the more rural the environment.

A concern is the winter time and the threat of extreme cold. When temperatures near zero, the couple must watch for frostbite, and stretch their horses a bit more to minimize the threat of pulled muscles.

However, Stephanie pointed out that the Morgan breed originated in the snowbelt of New England, and in addition to migrating to Michigan, Morgans have staked out places in cold weather sites such as Oregon and Utah. The five-month white-out is not a unique problem.

One thing that helps through the winter is that it's usually when the breeding season kicks into overdrive, and that, becomes the focal point of the farm.

Or should we say of the civilization.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Bruce Hamilton
Community Church of God

There was a break-in at the nation's oldest presidential library last week. Thieves entered the John Quincy Adams National Historical Museum in Massachusetts and made off with, of all things, a bunch of books. Among the books taken was one particular volume that really fascinated me because it was a Bible. No, it wasn't a family Bible. It wasn't even the Bible that President Adams used to take the oath of office on. But oh, does this Bible have a fascinating story behind it.

In the early 1830's, the slave trade was really heating up in North America. Our tale begins with a Portuguese ship that captured members of the Mendi tribe in West Africa to sell as slaves. The Portuguese took them to Cuba and sold them to the Spaniards, who had other ideas in mind. They loaded the Mendi on a ship called the Amistad (curiously, that means friendship) and started off on a voyage that would take them to market.

The Mendi did not take their servitude lying down. They mutinied on the high seas against their Spanish captors and took over the ship. But being hunters and not sailors, they had to rely on a slimy Spanish navigator to guide the ship. Instead of ending up in West Africa like they hoped, they ended up in Long Island Harbor where the Americans, not really wanting to upset Spain, promptly threw all the Mendi in jail.

John Quincy Adams got word of the Mendi's plight and road down from Boston to become their legal counsel. The court battles that followed ended up in the Supreme Court in Washington D.C., where Adams ultimately prevailed. The Mendi were freed and sent by the American government back to their homeland in Africa.

That's where this missing Bible comes in. It was a gift to Adams from the Mendi and signed by every one of the men he had freed. In it, the Mendi promised to "pray every day for the health and safety of John Quincy Adams" thanking him with all their hearts for fighting for them all the way to the "big court in Washington D.C." and further stating as long as a Mendi was alive they would always remember the love of the man who had defended their freedom so valiantly.

I don't know about you, but I find myself wondering if we have expressed some pure devotion and gratitude for the One who fought to defend our freedom so valiantly. It is so easy to take Jesus for granted. It is so easy to look at how busy we are in our daily lives and how much is involved, that his place in our hearts gets shoved on the back burner. Yet, he comes the very moment we call. He goes to whatever lengths are necessary to bring healing to the hurting heart or show the wandering soul which way is home.

As we approach this season of giving and thanksgiving, I hope you will look into your heart afresh and remember just how much the Lord has done for you. Maybe you've heard of that famous poem called "Footprints in the Sand." If you haven't, ask a friend about it. On more than a few occasions, Jesus has been the One who has carried us all through. We need to thank Him for that more often.

School board hires another second-grade teacher, loses coaches

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

With the excitement of the girl's basketball tournament hanging in the air, the school board, after moving their meeting time to accommodate tip-off, moved swiftly through business.

The board approved granting a snow plow bid to C.H. Smith at $22.50 an hour for plowing and $60.00 an hour for loading.

Also approved was the ratification of the District Library Agreement. Because of proposal A, schools can no longer levy a millage to fund public libraries. The library will now be run through a joint effort by the city and area townships.

"Everybody will be a part of it, and it will truly be a district library," Superintendent Roberta Jackson said.

Second-graders will be shuffled

Three options remain for city to meet state environmental rules

— Amend the water ordinance to comply with government standards, at an estimated cost of $1,800.

— Obtain the deed restriction for $600.

Changing the ordinance involves more than the land near the city garage. Using a private well in a "contaminated or potentially contaminated" area would be prohibited. Existing wells located on such sites would not be excepted under a grandfather ruling, according to Young. Also, all people in the affected areas must now use the city system as their sole source of water.

The environmental department also requires its own approval of the city's water ordinance amendment before it can be officially enacted. The ordinance can not be changed in the future unless the department has at least 30 days notice and given prior approval to changes. And, proof must be provided to the government that shows no wells currently exist in the contaminated area in question.

Before the amendment can become an active ordinance, Young must draft an wording for the city council to review. Also, a public hearing will be advertised and held before a final vote is taken. That hearing has yet to be scheduled.

Charlevoix girls advance

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

They say it's not how many points you score, but when you score those points that really matters.

Take Lyndsay Blechel.

Her dead-eye, three-point basket with less than a minute to play broke a 50-50 tie and paved the way for Charlevoix's 55-51 victory over Boyne City in the district tournament's first round game.

For the Rayders, it meant advancing to the district semi-final game Wednesday night against Mancelona. For Boyne City, it meant — time to begin ski season. For Blechel, it meant her only points of the night, but they came during the game's most crucial possession as Boyne City fans, desperate to defend their home turf, had the gymnasium reverberating with chants of "defense, defense."

In all, the game was a struggle as both teams beset by poor shooting and rashes of turnovers failed to ever establish enough of an offensive flow and momentum to take over the game.

Rayder coach, Hank Wagner, confessed before the game that he was unsure which of his team's multiple personalities would show up to play. In a season marked by alternating winning and losing streaks, it was anyone's guess, but Wagner had it figured when the buzzer sounded.

"Tonight, it was the team that just had to grind it out," he said.

The Rayders, as they have been doing for the last couple of weeks, played without the services of their starting center and tallest player, Julie Gregory, who is shackled with a case of mono. Gregory, a "soothing influence on the court," in Wagner's words, would have given the Rayders a nice inside threat going into the tournament. Without her, Boyne City relentlessly attacked the post and nearly pulled off a minor upset.

"They brought it to us all night and in the second half, they stepped it up a notch," Wagner said. "But we hung in there and persevered."

Lisa Parrish and Amanda Eaton led the Rayders with 20 and 19 points, respectively. Parrish grabbed 10 rebounds and Angie Potter wrestled down eight boards. Boyne City was led Erin Frey, 15 points, and Katie Bernthal, 14 points.

Charlevoix has yet to find anyone who can replace Gregory's presence on the court, and spent the week leading up to the tournament being trounced by neighborhood rivals, Petoskey and Harbor Springs. It was imperative for the Rayders to prove to themselves that they could have success without their starting center. The key, according to Wagner, was a team effort.

"It doesn't have to be one kid," he said. "We had about six kids doing a couple of things here and a couple of things there with all of them doing a little extra."

However, the Rayders face a serious climb if they want to claim the district crown. Should they get by Amanda Eaton tries for two during Monday's district championship play against Boyne City. The Rayders won the game 55-51 and now advance tothe district semifinal game tonight against Mancelona.

The seventh-grade girls' basketball team came out a big winner this year. The team ended this season with a 10-1 record. They lost in the finals at Harbor Springs recently. Team members include: (Seated, from left) Jennifer McClellan, Kathryn Ricks, Kati Swenor, Danielle Vogelheim, Rachel Kanine, Krista Swenor; (standing, from left) Kelly Reid, Laura Potter, Chelsea Newcomb, Kara Field, Jenny Miller, Elissa Wood and Beth Martin. Coach is Barry Pierce.

Antlerless deer season extended by state officials

As part of an effort to reduce Michigan's antlerless deer population on private lands, Department of Natural Resources Director K.L. Cool has signed an interim order establishing an early December antlerless deer season on private lands in select deer management units.

> " ... the public has become more concerned about the large numbers of deer in specific areas of Michigan, as evidenced by increased discussions about deer-vehicle accidents, agricultural crop damage and the starvation of deer in areas where the deer populations exceed the carrying capacity of the winter range.
> — George Burgoyne, DNR division chief

According to DNR Wildlife Division Chief George Burgoyne, the special antlerless deer season will begin Dec. 1 in all designated areas and run through Dec. 8. The lone exception is in the Upper Peninsula's Menominee County, where the special antlerless deer season concludes Dec. 15.

"Over the last couple years, several deer hunting groups have requested additional hunting opportunities consistent with the large Michigan deer herd," Burgoyne said. "In addition, the public has become more concerned about the large numbers of deer in specific areas of Michigan, as evidenced by increased discussions about deer-vehicle accidents, agricultural crop damage and the starvation of deer in areas where the deer populations exceed the carrying capacity of the winter range. This special antlerless deer season is an additional management tool and important step in addressing those concerns. In addition, it will provide additional hunting opportunity for Michigan's deer hunters and help bring the buck-to-doe ratio into a more natural balance."

This year provides the ideal situation for this experiment because agricultural groups have approached the DNR this fall and expressed concern about possible difficulties in harvesting antlerless deer during the regular firearm deer season, which begins Nov. 15, because a late spring delayed planting and harvest schedules.

"With several requests from different groups to extend the firearm deer season, we polled the department's district wildlife supervisors and received recommendations for an extended season on private land if the harvest follows the current scientifically-determined quota of antlerless deer hunting licenses," Burgoyne said. "These additional days will provide hunters with extra hunting time and will provide private landowners the opportunity to allow additional deer hunters to harvest antlerless deer on property with excess deer."

A person with an unused antlerless deer tag, who has purchased a 1996 firearm deer license, may participate in the special antlerless deer hunt, but only on private lands within the area designated on the antlerless deer tag. The season limit of one antlerless deer per antlerless deer license remains in effect during the special hunt, as do all other firearm deer hunting regulations.

Mancelona, and history bears that out, a tangle with state-ranked Harbor Springs looms. The Rams have already bested Charlevoix twice this year, and without Gregory to help neutralize the inside dominance and height of Harbor, it could be ugly.

"It (a win) would be a large feather in our hat because Harbor Springs is an awfully good basketball team," Wagner said.

into different classes as the board approved formation of a fifth, second-grade section at the start of next semester. The result of parental requests, the entire grade will be re-assigned homerooms to accommodate changes.

The board also accepted resignations of three coaches: Don Potter, middle school boys' basketball; Eric Lundteigen, varsity tennis; and Jim Gibbs, freshmen boys' basketball. Presently none of the positions have been filled.

With sports on their mind, the board had planned to ratify a long list of criteria gauging the success of athletic coaches and other school leaders. Among key guidelines are that they provide a good example for youth, demonstrate motivation, communicate and work well with parents, be committed to Rayder pride and have a successful program on a long term basis.

Action was postponed for another meeting.

SCRAPBOOK

Harsha House

A museum's early beginning

By Marilyn Boss
Courier columnists

In July of 1978, Charlevoix Historical Society President, Bill Price, hosted a board meeting in his home. The Society had been talking for several years about building a new museum.

Someone suggested the society look into buying the Ochs residence, which was located where the CB North parking lot now is. Dale Boss suggested purchasing the old Harsha residence, located next door to the Congregational Church.

When Dale was 12-years-old, in 1943, he worked for 40 cents an hour doing yard work for the son of the man who built that home. He removed the hedge which bordered the sidewalk, and replanted it along the south border of the church, where it is today. Through the years, he kept in contact with the family, which eventually consisted of one granddaughter, Anne Harsha, who owned the house.

A month went by, and on Art Fair day, in August, he noticed Anne's car parked on the grass at the house. She was attending the art fair. He watched during the afternoon until she left. He told her he wanted to buy the house for $10,000 down, and a balance of about $55,000 to be paid on a land contract. Dale assured her that the three apartments would remain, so the society would have money to pay off the land contract. An addition would be built along the north and west side to become the museum.

Her main concern was what we would do with Jim Flynn, the caretaker, who lived in the south apartment. Dale assured her that Jim could live there for the rest of his life with no increase in rent, as we would need someone to be responsible for the premises.

Two days later, Anne was hospitalized. Through her friendship with Jim Flynn, she relied on him for advice, and Dale learned later, that he suggested giving the house to the society. Dale went down to talk to him, and personally assured him that he would have somewhere to live for the rest of his life. That's the old-fashioned way of doing business.

Dale learned later, that Anne's friend, Fran Milner, summoned an attorney so Anne could get the paper work done. Just 30 days from the day Dale had talked with her, she passed away. On that same afternoon, he got a call from Jim, informing us that Anne had given the home and all the contents to the society, free and clear.

Jim remained as caretaker for 10 years, until 1988 when he died. At the time, he was paying $50 a month for rent.

The addition was built in 1980. The rent from the three remaining apartments has been used to upgrade the building and make it the excellent museum it is today. Many hours of volunteer work by society members and funds from the sale of Bob Miles' Charlevoix book, plus other donations and fund-raisers have assured the community that all the artifacts brought in have a good home, and are available for everyone's use.

I am the current history coordinator and keep all the current history as recorded in the Courier. All local obituaries and happenings are placed in nice notebooks that are available for research or enjoyment. They date back to 1986.

All things worked out well, and as long as the three rentals are kept intact, we will never be out of money. The house is 105 years old, and was owned by the same family all that time, and is now on the National Register.

Cases of chicken pox being reported in the area

Chicken pox has long been recognized as a mild childhood illness. However, in certain people, it may be a serious illness. Since chicken pox is being reported throughout the area, the Health Department is stressing the importance of being informed about the illness.

Chicken pox is a viral illness with sudden onset of slight fever, mild symptoms, generalized body weakness, few serious symptoms, and an itchy rash. The rash begins as a spot on the skin and progresses to a thickened elevated area and to a clear fluid filled blister like area, about 2-4 mm in diameter. The area around the spot reddens and fades as the fluid becomes cloudy (purulent) and the spot crusts over. The crust may remain 1 to 3 weeks. There may be several crops of lesions.

The illness is easily spread from person to person with onset 10 to 21 days following exposure. Children are contagious as long as 5 days, but usually for 1 to 2 days before and 5 to 6 days after onset of the rash. Individuals are contagious for the duration of the blister eruption or until the lesions become dry and crusted over. During this period of time they should not attend school or day care and should avoid individuals who never had chicken pox, are at risk of serious disease, and pregnant women.

The disease is rarely fatal but may be severe in adults, those with underlying immune problems, newborns of mothers with chicken pox and premature infants.

There is a new vaccine for children and older individuals at risk for chicken pox or its complications. The chicken pox vaccine is not available at the health department. Reye's Syndrome has been associated with the use of aspirin in a child ill with chicken pox. Aspirin is not recommended for children incubating a viral illness such as influenza or chicken pox. Parents or individuals should contact their family physician.

Downtown height variance going before city council

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

The old theater building on Bridge Street could be topped by an apartment. However, the addition would make the building 2.24 feet higher than city zoning allows.

Both the planning commission and the zoning board of appeals have granted permission for developer, Jon Hisey, to take structure higher.

If city council approves the request, the back of the building — facing Round Lake — will have another floor. The front of the building will not change in appearance, with the third floor visible from the Central Drug corner of Clinton and Bridge streets.

Council is scheduled to consider the height variance at its Monday, Dec. 2, meeting, which is scheduled for 7 p.m.

The old theater building is now known as Harbor Plaza Development. The lower level houses Kids Wear, Color Wear and Outback Jack, all retail shops that face Bridge Street. Construction to newly created space would include two, three-bedroom condominium units and two offices, according to minutes from the Nov. 11 planning commission meeting.

To accommodate the renovations approved by planners, the development must add six parking spaces for the condos and 2.29 spaces for the offices. Part of the second floor is already used for office space. Three new parking spaces would be created in the basement of the building, which reduces the requirement to pay into the parking fund for 5.29 spaces, according to

Charlevoix teacher passes on her love for learning

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Education was Jeannette (Novotny) Rogers' way out of a poor Chicago neighborhood.

"We never went out at night," the 89-year-old said of her early years. Even in the beginning of the 1900s, neighborhoods clustered by ethnic origin. Rogers lived in the middle of it all with her mother and four brothers.

Jeannette poured herself into school. While her mother supported the family by working at a doctor's office and cleaning homes, Jeannette offered pleasure and pride through hard work and good grades.

"She encouraged me," the Charlevoix resident said. "She would commend my work."

The positive reinforcement carried Jeannette far beyond the Chicago neighborhood. It carried her into a career — teaching. It has also kept her close to the poor homes of people Jeannette reaches out to with education it takes to succeed.

For 37 years, Jeannette gleaned a modest paycheck for the investments she made into young lives.

"I love helping people learn," she said. "It makes me happy."

Jeannette's enthusiasm for learning enabled her to make it through high school in three years.

"I wasn't wasting my time on another year," she said. Students used to only take four classes at a time. Jeannette added to her own load in anticipation of getting to college and on with her life.

However, there were complications. The Newago high school, where Jeannette attended since her family left Chicago when she was 11-years-old, wasn't receptive to her excelled education. The principal resisted issuing a diploma to a young girl in such a rush.

Regardless, Jeannette was accepted by Hardin College, a small girls' school. When walking down the graduation aisle years later, she had accomplished being third in her class academically.

Jeannette could have been finished with school forever. But she'd always known she would be a teacher and that's exactly where she headed next.

Height variance sought

zoning administrator, Kathleen Staton.

The variance is needed only for the apartment on the top floor and involves the back four feet, six inches of the building.

If approved, the construction will not make the building tower over other downtown buildings. Hisey told planners that the variance would bring the building into alignment with its neighbors.

If approved, the back of the building will be 37.24 feet high from the parking area facing Bridge Park to the highest point. The city zoning ordinance provides for 35 feet in height for buildings in this area.

Public comment at the zoning board of appeals meeting questioned whether the old building could hold more weight. References were made to cracks in the building's walls and possible buckling.

Structural soundness of the building will be determined by the county building inspection office before construction permits are granted. Regardless of soundness, Jeryl Murdick, of Murdick's Fudge, asked the zoning board not to open a can of worms and permit the height variance.

"We have to stop somewhere," she said.

The zoning board discussed whether the plan met criteria for approval of a variance. It was accepted that the variance was necessary to the preservation of a substantial property right possessed by other properties within the same zoning district, namely the height of surrounding buildings.

Approval by city council is Hisey's final step in securing permission to begin construction for the new plan.

Holiday kickoff Friday

The annual tree lighting ceremony will officially ring in holiday cheer in Charlevoix as townspeople gather in East Park at 5 p.m. Friday for the lighting of the community Christmas tree.

Charlevoix's Christmas Open House is from 10 a.m.-8 p.m., Saturday, Dec. 7.

Santa will be brought to East Park by a city fire truck at 1 p.m. Saturday to join in the festivities.

Events in brief

Car thefts continue in town

More Charlevoix vehicles have been damaged and stolen. According to city police, a van was stolen from the northeast corner of the parking lot at Harbor Industries between 8-9 p.m. Nov. 12.

Four other cars were damaged, two of which also had items stolen from inside.

The 1988 Dodge Caravan was located in the woods at the end of Upright Street, near Park Ave. It was stuck in the snow and damaged, police said. The vehicle is owned by Shawn Brown.

Police are still investigating the break-ins.

Planners meeting canceled for tonight

The city planning commission scheduled for tonight has been canceled. The meeting will be held at 7 p.m. Monday, Dec. 9, at city hall. A complete agenda will be posted prior to the meeting.

High voter turnout reported

County clerks in three area counties have reported higher than average voter turnouts, according to the Charlevoix League of Women Voters. In Charlevoix County, 61 percent of registered voters visited the polls for the general election while 62 percent voted from Emmet County and 63 percent from Antrim County.

Winter street parking hours coming

Residents downtown are reminded that winter hours for parking on the streets goes into affect Sunday, Dec. 1. To accommodate snow plows, cars are not allowed on the streets between 2-6 a.m. through Tuesday, April 1.

Christmas tree fund-raiser continues

The Charlevoix Lions Club's Annual Christmas Tree Sales Charity Fund-raiser begins on Wednesday, Dec. 4.

As in past years, the tree lot is in East Park, at the foot of Clinton Street. Hours are 4-8 p.m. on weekdays; 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Saturdays and noon to 6 p.m. on Sundays.

The Douglas Fir and Blue Spruce trees are grown close to town and are freshly cut. A "Care and Feeding" instruction tag will be included with every tree.

About 80 percent of all Lions Club proceeds help fund local charities. One of the most recent was a contribution toward the purchase of new playground equipment at the Charlevoix Elementary School. The balance goes to Michigan Lion sponsored organizations such as the Leader Dog Training Center, the Leader Puppy Program and the Michigan Eye Bank and Transplant Center.

Lions Tom Conlan and Eric Kammerman are heading up this year's event.

Legion auxiliary collecting pop can tabs

Members and friends of the American Legion Auxiliary are reminded to collect pop can pull tabs. The tabs are redeemed through a national program, and funds are used to purchase equipment for children's hospitals.

To make donations, call Rosalyn Goldstick at 547-2636.

Donation made to lake association

The Charlevoix Lake Association presented a $500 check recently to the Charlevoix Coach Guard Auxiliary in appreciation for the group's contribution to recreational boating safety. The auxiliary, according to a news release, will be used to purchase a television with a built in videocassette recorder to use in teaching boating safety.

Volunteers for insurance counseling needed

The Area Agency On Aging of Northwest Michigan is seeking volunteers to assist older people who have problems or questions about Medicare, Medicaid, Qualified Medicare Beneficiaries, Medicare Supplemental Insurance, long-term care insurance and related issues of interest.

A three-day training will be held from 9:30 a.m.-3:30 p.m. Monday-Wednesday, Dec. 9-11, at the agency's office in Traverse City. Lunch and expenses will be covered.

Anyone interested in participating should call Keith Russell by Saturday, Nov. 29, at (800) 442-1713.

Vehicle break-in leads to arrest

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

A Charlevoix man on parole was arrested 2 p.m. Friday for breaking into a van.

Leo Joel Sarasin, 30, was arraigned Monday in 90th District Court for breaking and entering of a motor vehicle, a felony punishable by up to five years in prison.

Bail has been set at $10,000 cash or surety. Sarasin remains lodged in the Charlevoix County Jail.

He is accused of breaking into a van parked in front of 805 State St. in Charlevoix, according to an affidavit filed by Charlevoix police officer, James Schlappi.

The owner of the van saw a man breaking into the vehicle and called the police, who were already looking for a man who had been found inside the house at 221 Antrim Street when the owner's mother came home from walking the dog days before. The man left the residence when the woman asked him what he was doing there.

Sarasin was later found in the woods nearby. However, the homeowner's mother could not make a positive identification, police said.

The owner of the van, however, identified Sarasin out of a line up at the police station following his arrest Friday.

Sarasin is living with his fiancee on M-66, according to court records. He is single, has one dependent and is financially only responsible to pay $480 a month for parole supervision.

Gordon Boydston has been appointed to represent Sarasin, who will have a preliminary hearing 3 p.m. Monday, Dec. 9, in district court. At the hearing, the judge will determine if there is enough evidence to bind Sarasin over to circuit court for further court proceedings.

Snowmobile connection made

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Like the days when railroads dominated the transportation industry, and its tracks linked towns and people along the way, snowmobile trails are having similar effects on the northern Michigan landscape.

East Jordan, Cadillac and Gaylord all have become snowmobile meccas as a result of designated trails leading to and from the towns. The effects have been far reaching. Hamburger haunts are lined with hungry riders, motels fill up with weary sledders and gas stations and snowmobile equipment stores bustle with activity.

On any given Sunday morning in East Jordan, Lynn Shipe, publisher of Michigan Snowmobiler, a monthly magazine published out of East Jordan, can count upwards of 300 sleds parked in the city's public snowmobile lot.

"It's more even that that," he said. "Twenty people will leave to go back out on the trails, and 10 more will come on in."

The combination of a popular sport, practical wintertime transportation and the affluence of those who own snowmobiles has spread the economic rippling effect in the area beyond gas stations and bars.

"Snowmobilers, they come to relax," Shipe said. "The stores are close enough that they'll park their snowmobile and walk around, shop, and get a bite to eat."

To get close to the stores, there have to be trails to network area towns. This winter, Charlevoix will be — for the first time — connected into the web because of the opening of a route running southeasterly through the county before ending in East Jordan. The 13-mile trail, which will also run through Ellsworth, begins just off U.S. 31, across from the Charlevoix airport,

OPINIONS

Courier staff chooses to say thanks to community

EDITORIAL

We thought an open door to give thanks would be enough to have letters to the editor pouring into the newspaper in honor of those who have helped friends, families and neighbors throughout the year.

Giving away three free turkeys for the best letters was just a bonus we thought would help curb Thanksgiving Day expenses.

An editorial was written. Advertisements ran for three weeks. The Courier staff anxiously awaited responses. We were hoping to connect neighbors and emphasize the meaning of the upcoming holiday.

Not many people took the time to say thanks in a letter. We hope that the people in Charlevoix have more to be thankful for than what they've shown in print. Possibly, the holiday rush has already overtaken people's mind sets and schedules.

As a new staff, we would like to thank our winner — Melodie Barrett — and all other participants for taking time to thank people in their lives.

Although we received several letters from children, none reached the paper in time to qualify for the contest. We chose to share their thanks with the community anyway. (See page 5.)

The two unclaimed turkeys, from children and young adult categories, have been donated — with the permission of the grocery stores which contributed them — to the Charlevoix Community Christmas Project, which provides Christmas dinner to needy families.

As a staff, we would like to publish our own letter of thanks, which includes thanking the community for welcoming us to town, for being involved in many of the changes we've made at the newspaper since May, and for contributing to and reading the Courier.

Our families deserve an expression of appreciation for being patient through the long hours it took to establish the team that now puts out the Courier and forms the family atmosphere of the office for employees and visitors to enjoy.

Thank you Brent Schaller for doing such a great job while driving from Harbor Springs to fill in for our advertising manager. We all enjoyed your smile, sense of humor, positive attitude and willingness to pitch in wherever there was a need.

Thank you to all the people who care about their community enough to get involved in the recent elections, volunteer with service clubs and invest energy into our local newspaper through letters and telephone calls.

We would also like to thank Dennis Halverson, Dick Swenor and Gary Grundman for agreeing to judge the thanksgiving letters.

Glen's Market, Oleson's Food Store and Don's IGA deserve our thanks for donating turkeys.

Even though letters of thanksgiving did not flood the Courier mailbox, we encourage everyone to take the time to show appreciation to family and friends this holiday season.

Happy Thanksgiving, from the Courier staff.

Although there are many thing we should all be thankful for each day, my thanks goes to my mentor, my counselor, by spiritual guide, my pillar of strength, my friend, all of which are my mother in-law.

She is 86-years-old and a retired school teacher. She has suffered so much grief in her life but never has a complaint. She raised two children alone after her husband was tragically killed in an accident. She worked until the arthritis in her back and legs made it unbearable, then retired. She was active in many church, social, and charity activities until eight years ago, when she became a paraplegic.

At that time she came to live with us, but sadly her troubles were not over. After many surgeries, one to remove her left leg, she became legally blind. Through everything, she has remained steadfast to religion and a pillar of strength and teacher to those around her. Many people in our same position may have been to busy in their own lives and put her in a home. But I cannot begin to relate everything my children and I have learned by having this lady so actively and closely involved in our lives.

The inner strength, positive attitude and steadfast faith in God she portrays each and every day have been a lesson in life we may have never learned without her. "No matter how bad we think our own life is, just look around, you can always find someone that is a whole lot worse off!"

So in summation, I cannot begin to tell you how thankful I am to have already and continue to share and learn in the life of my mother in-law, Launa C. Barrett.

Melodie S. Barrett

Thanks to friends and family

Editor:

I'm thankful this year, as I am every year, for family and friends. That sounds like a pretty average "thanks," and almost everyone is thankful for their families and friends. But this year I couldn't have made my successful move to Charlevoix without them.

I made a career move to Charlevoix in September, and I'm thankful for my boss, Randy, in believing in my abilities and giving me a chance. I'm making my new home in Charlevoix now, and I'm thankful to my new community of friends and neighbors, whom have made me feel welcome. I'm thankful for my best friend, Kris Shier, and daughter, Jennifer, whom without their encouragement and friendship my two big moves would have been unbearable. I'm thankful for my friend, Tom, brother, Tony, and Dad for the vehicles, muscles and the roof walking abilities during the moving process. I'm thankful for Kris' husband, John Shier, who continues to help me with moving and rearranging the heavy stuff.

I'm thankful for family, Paul, Irene, Matt, Michelle, Tony, Kyle, Jim, Mark and Susan, and my Mom and Dad for their unconditional love. An extra big thanks for my Mom who has always supported me in all my endeavors, no matter how big or small or crazy some of them have been. I thank God for those times my Mom and I have had in the past two years to bond even closer.

My friends and family are loved and appreciated this Christmas Season!

More "thank you" letters to the editor is lots of thanksgiving out here!

Like many people in Charlevoix and all over the world, I go to sleep with a prayer of gratitude and I wake up with a prayer of thanks for another day.

When I woke up this morning I knew I would have to write to you. Some years ago I was over my head and in deep trouble. I could not stop drinking. It seemed like the pain of life was just too much to get through without the comfort of a drink, or better yet several. I was lonely. I was lost. And I was bitter.

I felt if there was a God, I wanted nothing to do with Him. I wanted to live my values, but I was a constant disappointment to my family and myself. I could not figure out how someone relatively good-looking, smart, and educated could, almost without exception, screw everything up, again and again. There were times in my life when I hated myself so much, and when I felt I was such a burden to the people I loved most, it seemed like the only way to spare my loved ones more misery was to kill myself. Although I contemplated and planned, I lacked the courage to follow through with even that.

Today I know that miracles happen. Ten years ago or so, in the midst of achieving my regular Sunday afternoon "glow," a friend stopped by, caught me tossing down the Bud and recognized my disease. She shared the story of her life. Like me, she could not stop drinking. Like me, she made stupid choices and hurt the ones she loved. She explained a pattern in her family of misusing alcohol, that alcoholism was a progressive disease, and that she had been able to quit drinking, one day at a time.

She made no judgments and I made no commitments. But the next day, I chose not to drink. Just for that day. There were some tough moments, but I called my friend for support. The third day I got out of bed with a new feeling. I opened my eyes and realized that I was full of joy and anticipation of a new day. The old heavy feeling of remorse and dread that had started my days for so many years was gone! I was reluctant to attend my first AA meeting, but I wanted to stay sober, and the stats were good that AA was an effective prescription for staying "off the sauce." At the meeting, the laughter and coffee flowed. The "old timers" seemed to see something in me that I could not see. They loved me when I could not love myself.

It has not always been easy. It's still not easy all the time, but life is good. I have so much, a family, a home, the "sun in the mornin' and the moon at night!" I have known despair, helplessness and grief, and it has made me stronger and more compassionate.

Today with the help of my higher power, whom I call God, I can be of use. I can make commitments and keep them. I can reach out, and I can love. What a great gift! Thank you Courier for letting me share.

A child's thanks to many

I'm thankful for my family, and I love them very much. I'm thankful for my warm house and our food we have to eat. I pray for those who are homeless and don't always have food to eat or who need our prayers. I'm thankful for being healthy, and I'm thankful to have a nice brother and nice grandmothers. I'm thankful for my school and my teachers. I'm thankful for my Mom and Dad.

I am in the fourth-grade. I am thankful for my church, my family, my school, my house, and my friends. I am thankful for my little job. I get $2.50 a week, but I get paid every two weeks and I get $5. That's a lot to me.

I love to read and write. I go to Bible Baptist Church and it is the best church in the world. I love my home and my mom and dad and brothers and sisters. I am especially thankful for my new baby sister.

I am thankful for my church, my family, my school, my friends, my house, my paper route, and I live in a country with a godly heritage, and freedom of speech and religion.

I especially like my paper route. I've got the best customers in the world, although I've only had the paper route for three months.

I really love my family. I've got three sisters and one brother. I love my mom and dad. I am thankful for my family.

Thank you to a country of freedoms

Editor:

When I read the article "Is Charlevoix Thankful?," I was both shocked and amazed. I was shocked that no one had written in two weeks and was amazed that not only was this promotion to give turkeys away but to remind the community to think about for what they are thankful.

The most important thing I'm thankful for is God's love. If it wasn't for God's love, I probably wouldn't be alive today. God's love is so strong that he sent his only son to earth to die for us. It says in the Bible, "For God so loved the world (that's us), that he gave his only begotten son; that whosoever (that means us) believeth in him should not parish but have everlasting life." John 3:16.

The second think I'm thankful for is my country. I am glad that I live in a nation that has religious freedom, the right to own and bear arms, and to own private property.

The third thing is everything: air, animals, beds, cars, computers, family, food, God, houses, money, medical technologies, my paper route, rain, snow, sun, snowmobiles, skiing, telephones and water.

Thanksgiving is a time for thanking and also for giving.

Yours truly,
Philip Green,
13-years-old

For what we have — but thankful more yet
For all that greatly hankered for stuff

Time Out

Janenne Irene Harrington

Thanksgiving 1996 is like none before.

Having just come off my honeymoon, there's a calmness in life that feels refreshing, renewing. Sentiment of loved ones and all that's been given to me in the last year prevails over thoughts of day-to-day responsibilities.

Other Thanksgiving holidays have found me traveling to the city to man soup kitchens when most people snuggled into their homes with family. There have been long hours driving to see my fiance. There have been cold mornings spent in the woods seeking a buck.

This Thanksgiving will be spent in a hall with gads of relatives surrounding my new immediate family of two. Only this year, the trip to the rented hall and the hours spent in preparation won't begrudge the joy that's meant to spring forth on Thanksgiving Day.

This year, I will give special thanks for living in northern Michigan near family and childhood friends.

I will thank God for my husband and all the patience and strength he offered while we maintained a no-distance love during a long-distance relationship.

In addition to stepping into a deeper appreciation for family, I gladly recognize ties that have been affirmed in a marriage covenant with my husband's family. Fortunately, I have taken time to join hearts with some of them and recognize the blessings they bring to my life.

Maybe this type of sentiment comes with age. If that's the case, I never want to go back to college or high school. Overall, it seems to be an ungrateful stage where the world is expected to revolve around the needs of self. This isn't so unlike a little child whose only desires is their basic needs to be enclosed in the love of their parents.

When I first came to Charlevoix in May, I felt like a child amid a dangerous world of giants. The paper was experiencing a major turnover of staff. An era had ended, and a new one was just beginning. At the time, it was hard for me to find anything to be thankful for.

I held tight to a belief in my destiny to be editor of this paper, to a hope that if I stood upright and made decisions based on my beliefs and knowledge that all would be well, and to the peace that I gathered during my off hours.

Each week, a little more relief came. Along with each trial came the knowledge and experience I sought as I wrote a letter of interest in becoming editor of the Charlevoix Courier.

Appreciation of day-to-day life — our jobs, school and commitments — means that we live beyond just existing, beyond accomplishing responsibilities. Being thankful is part of seizing each day and letting your hair fly during the adventure of life.

Tomorrow is Thanksgiving Day. But the spirit of the day has already come to my life, to my home. For that, I'm most thankful.

"I can't wait for my retirement dreams to come true."

FAMILY

Gengle-Dobulis

Julie Gengle and Mike Dobulis, both of Grand Rapids, were joined in marriage at 2 p.m. Aug. 10, 1996, at St. Mary's Church in Charlevoix before 220 guests.

Julie is the daughter of Bill and Sue Gengle, of Charlevoix, and John and Barb Dobulis, also of Charlevoix. Father Tom Neis performed the double ring rites.

The bride wore an off the shoulder dress with a satin and pearl bodice and full organza skirt with flower motifs. The dress was handmade by Barb Dobulis, mother of the groom. The bride carried a bouquet of red gerbera daisies along with white daisies.

Organist was Gail Macks. Vocalists were Arlene Blissett and Leigh Lovell.

The maid of honor was Brooke Drysdale, a friend of the bride. Bridesmaids were Jennifer Gengle and Amy Krokos, cousins of the bride, and Hao Mei Wang, future sister-in-law, and Elsa Martin, friend of the bride. They wore off-the-shoulder, floor-length, red satin gowns and carried bouquets of red gerbera daisies and white daisies.

The flower girl was Amber Cummings, cousin of the groom. She wore a white satin dress. Ring bearer was Austin Joe Smith, cousin of the bride.

Best man was Dave Dobulis, brother of the groom. Groomsmen were Corey Crain, Travis Blissett, Dean Spaeth and Ken Olinger, all friends of the groom.

Ushers were Guy Gengle and Justin Gengle, brothers of the bride.

A reception, given by the bride's parents, was held at the Knights of Columbus Hall in Charlevoix. A rehearsal dinner was hosted by the groom's parents at Ferry Beach.

The couple are making their home in Grand Rapids. Julie will graduate from Grand Valley State University with a degree in business management on Saturday, Dec. 7. Mike is the general manager of T.S.O. Catering.

Annual book angel project takes flight

Each year, through the very generous support of a caring community, the "Book Angel" Project sponsored by Bridge Street Book Shop in Charlevoix provides the gift of books on Christmas morning to disadvantaged children in Charlevoix County.

In many cases, "Book Angels" enable a child to own his or her very first book.

Last year's contributions were called in from all over Michigan and from as far away as Florida, Arizona, Chicago, Indianapolis, and St. Louis. Summer residents, as well as the year-round community, have been supportive of this project. In 1996 there is no shortage of children who need our help.

On Nov. 15, the Book Angel Christmas Tree went up at Bridge Street Book Shop. The tree is ornamented with angels, each representing a needy child in Charlevoix County. As patrons select an angel from the tree and purchase a book for that boy or girl, at a 20 percent discount, the angel is replaced by a gold star.

The Book Shop staff are happy to provide assistance in selecting an age-appropriate book for the child, although many people come in, especially children, knowing just the right book to give. Oftentimes it's their personal favorite that they are eager to share.

The Book Shop staff will gift wrap the books and prepare them for delivery. A group of volunteers from the Charlevoix County Department of Social Services picks up the packages and traverses the county delivering the new books to children in Charlevoix, East Jordan, Boyne City, Boyne Falls and Beaver Island. The goal is to have every angel on the tree replaced with a gold star by Monday, Dec. 16.

A Christmas Book Angel gives a child a gift that will be opened again and again. For more information, contact Bridge Street Book Shop at (616) 547-7323.

The Charlevoix Courier office will be closed on Thursday, Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 28 so the staff may enjoy the holiday with family and friends. The office will reopen at 8 a.m. Friday, Nov. 29.

Wishing you a happy and safe holiday!

Get prepared for winter weather

With the winter weather upon us even before winter officially begins, officials from the Federal Emergency Management Agency and National Weather Service, part of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, are encouraging individuals, families, and businesses to be prepared for winter storms, flooding and severe cold.

Federal emergency director, James Lee Witt, emphasized that "preparing in advance and knowing what to do will save many lives, including a great many of those who die every year in fires caused by improperly-used space heaters and faulty furnaces.

"You should know the winter hazards you face in your region or when you travel, how to avoid or reduce those hazards, and you should take steps now to be prepared," Witt said.

According to Kay Goss, the agency's executive associate director for preparedness, training and exercises, keeping home heating oil and vehicle fuel tanks full will help avoid becoming trapped without heat when storms move in swiftly. Winter emergency kits for every car or truck are also potential lifesavers.

Last winter, most of the northern and eastern sections of the United States were blanketed with near-record snowfalls and extreme low temperatures. Nearly 15 major cities set all-time seasonal snowfall records.

Colder temperatures are forecast for the Great Lakes.

"While a repeat of the near-record snowfall and much colder than normal temperatures that impacted much of the country last year is unlikely, year-to-year and decade-to-decade climate variations tell us that such events are always possible," said Ed O'Lenic, senior meteorologist in Camp Springs, Md.

Thanksgiving Day service open

Thanksgiving Day provides the occasion for each of us to express gratitude in our own way for the good which we have experienced in our lives. But many people yearn for a more consistent expression of this goodness.

Christian Science teaches that God is responsible for this goodness, that he reveals himself to each of us as we open our heart to him and that his love and his laws sustain and maintain his beloved children. It also teaches that each of us can understand God and that this understanding leads to a greater sense of peace, harmony and goodness in our lives.

The members of Christian Science Society at 205 Clinton Street, Charlevoix invite the public to join them on 11 a.m. Thanksgiving Day, Thursday, Nov. 28, to observe Thanksgiving with hymns, prayer and expressions of gratitude to God. A lesson-sermon from the Bible and from the Christian Science textbook, Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy, will be read.

The service will center on the assurance of God's goodness and protection.

Following the lesson-sermon, there will be time for testimonies of healing and gratitude appropriate to the occasion. The service will last about one hour. Care will be provided for children too young to attend. No collection will be taken.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

By Dale Ostema
Charlevoix and Greensky Hill
United Methodist Churches

"But godliness with contentment is great gain." (1 Timothy 6:6)

One of Aesop's fables tells of a dog who was given a fine meaty bone by a friendly neighbor. On his way home, with the bone firmly between his teeth, the animal had to cross a bridge over a narrow stream. When he reached the middle of the bridge the dog paused to look into the water and saw his own reflection magnified. Thinking that the other dog had a larger bone, the animal decided to take it by force. He leaned over and snapped at his own reflection. As he did so, the bone between his teeth fell into the water and was lost.

This week we celebrate Thanksgiving. A holiday originally called forth by Gov. William Bradford in 1623 to "render thanksgiving to ye almighty God for all his blessings."

God's Blessings do touch our lives everyday in many and various ways. Some are great and some are small. Part of the knack for thanksgiving is to find contentment in the blessings we have. Like the dog who saw his reflection, there is always more to want. But the key to happiness is contentment in what we've already been blessed with. May your Thanksgiving be one of happy contentment gained through knowing God, who provides for all our needs.

Deer harvesting reports mixed for Michigan

Deer season is far from over, and this is expected to be one of the best seasons in many years, with the holiday weekend looming.

The Department of Natural Resources is predicting good deer hunting opportunities through the end of the season, in both the Upper and Lower peninsulas.

In the Upper Peninsula, poor weather caused a slow start on the deer harvest, according to Ed Langenau, DNR big game specialist. Conditions were poor opening day as high winds reduced deer movements and rain drove many hunters out of the woods and fields. As a result, late-season hunters in the upper peninsula will have more of the season's deer available than usual, and prospects should continue to be good until the season ends, Langenau said. As expected, the upper peninsula deer herd was smaller than last year, with a lower percentage of adult bucks and fawns due to last year's severe winter. Antler size is also smaller than normal this year, with both young and older bucks showing the nutritional stress of last winter's food shortage.

In the lower peninsula, snow and moderate winds produced excellent hunting conditions, especially in the western area. A good number of deer were harvested despite poor visibility infields of yet- unharvested crops.

"Even though many deer were taken, hunting should remain good throughout the season due to the large size of herd, especially in southern areas," Langenau said. "Deer hunters in southern Michigan are having some of the best firearm deer hunting in the past two decades."

The number of sightings, number of deer harvested, and condition of the deer all indicate an excellent season in progress with good hunting opportunities expected through the end of the season, Langenau stated.

The DNR has issued a record number of antlerless deer hunting licenses this year, providing opportunities for hunters to take antlerless as well as bucks.

"For the greatest chance of success, hunters should fill these antlerless licenses as soon as possible rather than waiting until late in the season when deer become more wary and are more difficult to spot," Langenau said. "There are still good numbers of leftover antlerless licenses for sale in about 15 deer management units in selected locations throughout the state with high deer concentrations."

Retired teacher's home filled with trinkets of thanks

She taught in a country school downstate in 1935. The living room wall of her house on Nettleton Street still sports the portrait of her painted during her earliest days as a teacher. One day, a little girl asked her teacher for a photograph. Jeannette gave her a picture and forgot about it. A few months later, at Christmas time, the girl carried a painting to school. It was a gift for the teacher, as painted by the child's uncle.

Gifts of all sorts dot Jeannette's homes, both in Charlevoix and San Benito, Texas, which is close to the Mexican border. Teaching is part of Jeannette, and it has found its way into Texan schools and the homes of illegal aliens.

For the past 20 years, Jeannette has been involved in the HOSTS program, Help One Student To Succeed. She joined forces with educators in Texas who shared a philosophy she had always lived by.

When not helping children read in elementary schools, Jeannette takes time to prepare adult Hispanics for the United States citizenship test. Many speak no English when she first enters their home. Charades becomes a beginning tool. Jeannette says a word and acts it out. She writes the word running, and then run across the room.

In ways, her 26 years, from 1945-1971, teaching third-grade in Charlevoix was easier. But never really easy. Jeannette struggled with seeing young people fail to excel. But she never gave up on them.

One student, who now wanders town bundled up in even the hottest weather, still receives flowers from Jeannette each year on her birthday.

Jeannette doesn't let economic or social status determine if her students have been successful. She looks at their heart and intentions in life.

> "Everybody can't perform the same. There's something to love about everybody. We all have our bad moments and our good ones. I learned from my mother that we always love people."
> — Jeannette Rogers,
> retired Charlevoix teacher

The unconditional love she considers the key to being a good teacher continues.

"I love any kid I ever taught in this town," she said, noting that nine of the school district's current teachers once sat in her classroom at the old K-12 school.

Through Jeannette's life, which has endured the loss of two husbands — Ron Cebfalter and Frank Novotny — she still considers Charlevoix home.

She is remarried now and lives six months at home and six months in Texas with Jack Rogers, who some people refer to as Mr. Jeannette.

During her travels, Jeannette keeps track of her kids by reading the local newspaper. She also spends time periodically taking out old school pictures and remembering the students as they passed through her classroom.

"I just can't forget," she said.

Although there have been difficult students and unfortunate circumstances in some of the children's lives, Jeannette loves them the same.

"Everybody can't perform the same," she said. "There's something to love about everybody. We all have our bad moments and our good ones. I learned from my mother that we always love people."

This motto remained with Jeannette as she taught mathematics, held students' hands while they were in jail and baked countless birthday cakes.

One student at a time.

Self monitoring needed on snowmobile trails

about a mile and a half from downtown. A public parking lot will officially mark the trail head and provide a place for sportsters to park vehicles and trailers.

The trail weaves mostly through woods along the old railroad route, which connects Charlevoix and Ellsworth.

"The economic benefits are going to be community wide," said John Fiedorek, president of the Charlevoix Snowmobile Club. "In Charlevoix, with all the restaurants, grocery stores and other stores, we can offer a gamut of availability to people during a time of year that we don't have a type of tourist trade."

However, not everybody is pleased with the opening of the trail. Land owners who fear intrusion have voiced concerns about damage to their property. Stories of snowmobilers carrying wire cutters to other tools to break through the fences erected to stop snowmobiles filter through the grapevine during the sledding season.

Ray Wallick, whose home is just off the route, stresses that he is not anti-snowmobile. He does feel sledders need a wakeup call to self-police the trail to keep property owners happy.

"We're trying to get them to realize that they are the only ones who can police this," he said, of trespassing. "The cops can't and we can't. The machines have no registration tags, they are unmarked. Hell, you can't catch them and you can't figure out who they are to turn them in."

> "We're trying to get them to realize that they are the only ones who can police this (trespassing). The cops can't and we can't."
> — Ray Wallick, landowner near Charlevoix's new trail

Charlevoix County Sheriff, George T. Lasater, doesn't agree that the sportsters can't be policed. His department will be spending the winter monitoring speed and protecting the rights and privacy of residents like Wallick. With spending approval, a sled will be purchased to help in patrolling the trail. The Department of Natural Resources also monitor the trail with sleds.

In the future, Lasater said he would like to see snowmobiles required to wear identification tags. Lasater would like to go beyond a simple license plate-like tag.

"I would like to see a more exacting form of identification," the sheriff said, referring to a law in Minnesota which puts identification on the snowmobile's tracks. "Every time you rotate your tracks, you leave your card. I like that."

Lasater admits that his department can only offer so much monitoring on the trail. He agrees with Wallick, that most of the burden will fall on the snowmobilers and their sense of responsibility.

Fiedorek is convinced that snowmobilers will obey and that the trail will help cut down trespassing.

"We understand the property owners' concerns, but there's never been a marked, groomed, and organized trail before," he said, " and it's not very objective to say we'll automatically ride off the trail and onto other people's private property."

Fiedorek did admit that of course bad apples will show themselves, and he called out, like Lasater and Wallick, for greater awareness on the part of the snowmobilers.

"It's like with any other motor vehicle," he said. "I can't take my car and ride around on someone's front lawn. With snowmobilers, we expect the same kind of common sense and common courtesy."

He said he feels this may be an important winter for Charlevoix and a peaceful first season. He expects the Charlevoix to East Jordan trail to eventually lead to other trails to further network the town to the web. He hopes a trail can more closely connect Charlevoix's downtown area.

"People should look at this as a way to help their children and make Charlevoix a viable year-round community," he said.

Charlevoix bank undergoes expansion of office space

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Customers of Charlevoix State Bank can expect to see a slightly different building once the winter carpet is rolled up and spring returns.

The bank will be widened by about 15 feet along the entire length of the west side of the building. The expansion serves two purposes, according to board chairman, Richard Hodgson.

One is the creation of three working offices.

"People are going to have better office space," Hodgson said. "Customers will have more privacy discussing their financial affairs with our lending officers."

Hodgson expects that a side-effect to that will be a simple brightening up of the workplace.

More importantly, though, after the expansion, the bank will at long last be barrier-free. A barrier-free bathroom will be on the main level, and the wider space will make wheelchair transportation a bit easier.

"The expansion is being made to accommodate the growth we've had, but also for the handicap requirements that we should be in compliance with," Hodgson said.

Despite approval from the planning commission, the expansion will not be without its troubles.

Timing may be poor to build anything, and Hodgson admitted that the March deadline for completion is "weather dependent." Also, once the building is under way, that the result will be a closing at least one of two drive-thru windows.

"We hope it will not be too much of an inconvenience, and we'll do whatever possible to not make it an inconvenience," Hodgson said.

The bank does not have planning commission approval to waive the green space clause, which would require a five-foot green space in between the alley and bank parking lot.

This, according to Hodgson, would force customers to have to back out into traffic, a dangerous maneuver. It will not hold up the expansion, and Hodgson conceded that more than likely a compromise to satisfy green space will be reached.

Academic champs

Rayder cross country team tops in state

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Let it not be said that the Charlevoix Rayder girls' cross country team failed to win a state championship this year.

While they placed tenth in the state tournament on the running field, it is off the course where this team is second to none. They took top academic honors as a team by having the best overall grade point average of all the team's in the state finals. It is an honor the team earned last year. So, these ladies are two-time defending state champions.

The victory was determined by averaging the top five grade point averages of the teams' top seven runners. The accumulative average was 3.976 with senior Chelsea Gorkiewicz, junior Candice Vandergriff, and sophomore Liza Gorkiewicz all carrying a 4.0; junior Monica Browe, a 3.97; and sophomore a Tricia Hodge, 3.9. The team's other two runners, senior Rachel Newcomb and freshman Winter Kyvik did not factor into that score, but, had they, would only have strengthened it.

Newcomb, a senior, has a 3.5 grade point average while Kyvik has a 4.0. Freshmen aren't eligible to be factored into this competition. Still, this was as much a team effort as anything else.

"To be in the top ten in running, and tops in books shows their character. It takes a lot to do both."
— Ken Plude, head coach

"To be in the top ten in running, and tops in books shows their character," head coach Ken Plude said. "It takes a lot to do both. They dedicated their summer to running, and to do all the schoolwork, it's not an easy double."

Studies show that the more athletics and activities students participate in, the better their interest and success in academics. That being said, perhaps there might not be a better academic inducer in the world of sports than distance running.

Rayders fall in district final

Season ends 11-12

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

The Lady Rayders' quest for a third straight district crown was halted Friday by a band of determined and talented Rams from Harbor Springs.

The game, ending 80-55, ended Charlevoix's season and shot the Rams into regionals.

Entering as distinct underdogs, having been defeated twice already by the Rams this season, the Rayders hung with Harbor only trailing 19-15 after the first quarter. They slowed down the pace of the game, and the Rams, who get much of their production via the fastbreak, were stymied in transition and were forced to settle for long jump shots.

"The girls never give up. Their hearts have always been in basketball."
—Rayder assistant coach, Leanna Mosoryak

"Our goal was to take away the fast break, and not let them get 30 points on the run," Rayder assistant coach, Leanna Mosoryak, said.

Having done that, though, Harbor Springs began pounding the ball inside, and using their height advantage to score 12-0 in the second quarter to run en route to an overwhelming 20-point halftime lead.

Ram center, Stephanie Adelaine; proved to be the difference scoring baskets in the paint, drawing fouls when not scoring, and sinking free throws when the Rayders could only stop her by fouling her. Nine of her 21 points came in the decisive second quarter when the Rams outscored the Rayders 27-10. According to Mosoryak, Harbor Springs versatility made them such a challenging opponent.

"You take one thing away from them, but they have other weapons they can go to. It's a luxury they have," she said. "We wanted to take their fast-break away, which we did, but we never did stop them on the inside and we got into foul trouble trying to do so."

For the Rayders, Lisa Parish scored 17 points with six rebounds, Amanda Eaton scored eight points and Lyndsay Blechel chipped in nine.

The Rayders battled until the end, but the halftime deficit was to much to overcome. Still, they placed themselves in a position to challenge for another district title with two tournament wins, a grinder down-to-the-wire affair with rival Boyne City, and a blowout win over Mancelona, a game which showed the potential of their full-court defense when clicking on all cylinders.

"The girls never give up," Mosoryak said. "Their hearts have always been in basketball."

The starting unit of Amanda Eaton, Lisa Parrish, Ann Marie Terryberry, Lyndsay Blechel, and Julie Gregory all return next fall as well as top reserves Angie Potter and Mandi Barrett. Also expect sophomores Julie Swenor, Jamie Gowell, and Liz Dohn to move from the junior varsity team and be key contributors to next year's varsity squad.

With a year under their belt, and, according to Mosoryak, better conditioning and better detail on defense, the Rayders will be in the thick of things next year and could wrestle the conference and the district crown away from Harbor Springs.

Steve Carland and Matt Mikulski were among six area soccer players named to the Class C All-Region team.

Carland, a senior and captain of the Rayder team, became the first four-year letter winner in the young sport at Charlevoix's high school. He scored a school record of 17 goals, four of those being made in a single game.

Mikulski, a junior, was recognized for athletic abilities and defensive play.

Sport teaches time management

Runners spend long hours running alone building stamina, and are used to the quiet and solitude needed for better studying; runners battle physical fatigue, but must continue, the same way a student must fight off mental fatigue during exam week; and a runner must be organized weighing at different times where they are on the course, when to change speeds, and where their competition is. The better organized, the better student.

"You're used to budgeting your time, and you can't really get lazy," Liza said, correlating her running with her studies.

Added Chelsea, "You learn to manage your time better. I know I can do these things, and then have a certain amount of time to do other things. Also, you can't slack off."

Plude, a history teacher, wasted little time placing perspective on his team's accomplishments.

His room is highlighted by maroon banners proclaiming cross county excellence over the last 15 years. The last of the banners is dedicated to the 1995 girls' team that finished at state as runners-up. It's the only banner that any Charlevoix girls' running team has earned. These women played a part in that, and combined with their gaudy academic achievements, have been writing their own chapter in the book of running success at Charlevoix.

"They are finding their place in Charlevoix cross country history," Plude said. "They're finding out what it takes to climb that high. In running there are no limitations put on you."

Chances are these women will just run through limitations.

The first passenger train to Charlevoix came in from the south in 1892. A crowd was waiting to see the first Iron Horse.

Train connects Charlevoix to open travel

The following article ran in the Charlevoix Sentinel on June 30, 1892.

A continuous line of steel now connects Charlevoix with the rest of the world. Charlevoix is in touch with the "outside" and has felt the pulse-throbs conveyed to us through the "iron sinews of commerce."

June 26 was Sunday, but, nevertheless, it was a great day for Charlevoix.

The train from the south was scheduled for 2:40 p.m., but at 2:10 p.m. a train appeared and was supposed to be the regular, but proved to be a special ... She sidetracked, and 20 minutes later the regular train appeared, pulled by engine No. 161.

A crowd of Charlevoix people boarded the train for the run to Petoskey, which was made in 21 minutes, taking the 10:30 train back in the evening.

There was music in the brakeman's voice as she shouted "Charlevoix," to the passengers returning to their homes happy in the thought that the days of compulsory staging and steamboating were the things of the past.

Head lice not dependent on person's cleanliness

Head lice has been reported to the health department. For some parents, it is a shock to be told their children have lice because they associated lice with filthy living conditions. Head lice is a common condition and is not related to home hygiene habits. It can occur at all social levels. Frequent bathing will neither prevent head lice nor eliminate an infestation once it has become established.

Children get head lice from close contact with an infested person or by sharing their hats, clothing, combs and hair brushes. Lice are small insects that live on the head and hair. Intense itching can occur when lice suck blood while feeding on the scalp. Head lice do not transmit diseases to humans. Scratching can result in bacterial infection.

The favorite site for lice and nits are the nape of the neck and behind the ears. If you suspect your child has lice, examine this area using a magnifying glass and a flashlight. Actual head lice are hard to see because they are tiny and few in number. Nits are found on the hair close to the scalp. Nits are gray white or silvery in color, oval in shape, and the size of a poppy seed. If one person is infested, all family members should be checked and treated at the same time.

There are a variety of medications that will treat head lice. Some are by prescription and others bought at the local pharmacy. Use medications specifically intended for head lice infestations. Never use home remedies such as kerosene or vinegar. All bedding and clothing used within the last 72 hours should be changed and laundered in hot, soapy water. Head gear, brushes and combs should also be cleaned.

Anyone with questions about head lice can call their own physician or the health department at 547-6523.

Height variance approved

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Jon Hisey was granted the height variance for his Bridge Street development easily by city council Monday.

But not until after he was railed by north side residents who are tired of looking at the Carriage House rot away on Cherry Street.

Council handled the two issues separately. First, hearing the concerns of the public, listening to Hisey and having their say on the dilapidating building. And second, voting to grant a 2.24 foot height variance so Hisey can add a three bedroom condominium and two offices on top of the old theater building on Bridge Street.

Norma Teague presented council with a petition containing about 110 names of people who want something done about the north side eye soar. The building sits in the back side of the municipal golf course.

Teague said that visitors pass by the Charlevoix the Beautiful sign, see the abandoned structure and must wonder what the city's slogan means.

"This isn't the first time we've come before you on this building and we're hoping something permanent will be done."

Council didn't present Hisey with conditions. But it did make it clear that something has to be done about deteriorating Carriage House.

Norma Teague, who lives across the street from the Carriage House, told council that she was shocked that Hisey could even be considered for a height variance to

Painful reminder

Pearl Harbor anniversary reminds veteran of friends lost at war

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

To Raymond Carr, the anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor rekindles memories that extend beyond Hawaii's harbor.

This Saturday, Dec. 7, the 78-year-old will take time to remember his friends who lost their lives in the South Pacific during World War II.

On Dec. 7, 1941, Carr was sitting in the nose of a B-17 destined for Hawaii. His crew, like the rest of the nation, was shocked at the news of the Japanese attack. Friends from his squadron were shot down as they unknowingly arrived during the attack.

"While we were waiting, our radio man tuned in to a news broadcast, and we all heard the announcer tell about the attack of Pearl Harbor," the former Charlevoix principal and teacher said. "At first we were so stunned we hardly believed it, but the announcer repeated several times that it was a fact and not an Orson Well's production."

During his year oversees with the 7th Bombardment Group, Carr flew on more than 100 missions, 68 of which involved targeting and signaling the drop of bombs.

Carr was a bombardier, and he manned a .50 caliber machine gun.

His diary of the early days of America's involvement in the war, as published in a historical book, walks readers through the long days and harrowing experiences of a man in the nose of a B-17.

One Charlevoixian shares Carr's involvement with the 7th bomb group

Around the world in 355 days

— C. H. Smith. However, they didn't know each other during the war.

Carr's story includes traveling around the world in 355 days. During the numerous missions, Carr would set the coordinates for the bomb drop. He would search the ground or water for the target while the pilot maintained the correct air speed and altitude.

When under attack by anti-aircraft guns, Carr's shout of "bombs away" would signal the pilot that he could maneuver some fancy flying to get the plane away from the advance of the ammunition.

Carr earned the nickname "Arsenal" by a Lt. Tarter who flew missions with him. The name came after a drop on some oil tanks that shot flames about 500 feet in the air. He said that planes, which Carr calls ships, really could drop bombs down a pickle barrel.

There were missions over the seas lasting more than 15 hours, times of getting planes up to keep them from getting destroyed in air raids and a Christmas dinner that consisted of a sandwich and a banana.

Carr traveled in the nose of a plane that had a nine-man crew. It was more than 74 feet long, traveled up to 302 mph and carried 8,000 pounds of bombs.

He flew over Singapore the night before it was surrendered to the Japanese. The city was aflame. Boats in the harbor burned brightly.

"I had so many of my closest friends killed over there," he said, noting that he still won't buy, or allow his children to buy, Japanese-made cars.

He remembers the March of Baton where 10,000 people died. He heard plenty of reports by Toyko Rose.

"She told us every night what was going on," he said.

For five years, Carr served the U.S. Army. During the war, he was the bombardier who volunteered for missions.

"If there was a flight going out and they needed a bombardier, I just went out," he said. "I'd rather be on a mission than sitting around."

To Carr, a mission meant that he was doing his job. His job came with danger that wasn't only found in the air. During one air raid in Java, Carr and two other men watched eight Japanese Zeros come in. They dove into the shelter after watching the bombay doors open on the bottom of the planes.

"Just as we got inside the shelter, the first bombs went off and we could feel the concussion," he said. "I remember Smitty saying, 'I don't care who knows it, I'm scared.'"

The bombs destroyed a Dutch hangar and damaged a large steel hangar. Three people were killed. After the bombing, Carr and his buddies hopped into a staff car to go out onto the runway to help.

Robert Carr stills wears his bombardment group's hat and the jacket that symbolize his role as a soldier in World War II.

"When we got in the middle of the field where the runways crossed, I looked up and saw three Zeros coming right toward us," Carr said. "By that time tracers were flying all around us. I yelled, 'Get the hell out of here.'"

The men turned the car toward some nearby woods. They jumped out while the car was still moving. Carr dove underneath a hedge and into a foxhole. He began shooting at the planes with his .45.

"As I looked up, there were holes appearing in the large palm leaves over our heads," he said. "After the attackers finally left, we came out and resumed our normal activities, but I told Smitty, 'Hell, man, you just thought you were scared when we were in the bomb shelter.'"

Carr hasn't forgotten the terror and loss that became a part of life during the war. He still cries when he remembers a friend from Wisconsin who was burned so badly that he died a day later.

A year in the thick of the fighting was enough. Carr was stationed stateside. Three days after landing on American soil, he married his Salt Lake City sweetheart, Lillian. The couple have now been married 54 years.

For years after the war, Carr didn't watch movies that recounted the killing experiences.

"I'd just turn it off," he said. "I'd had enough."

Carr came home and took a job as a teacher. He became a basketball and baseball coach. Low pay forced him into other jobs, like running a dairy farm and selling vacuums. He went back to school and earned a master's degree in educational administration.

After returning to the schools, Carr's career as a teacher and principal ended in Charlevoix when he retired. He was a Major when he left the service. And as the years pass, Carr refuses to let the ocean battles be lost.

"Too often you see so much written about the European war that people forget there was another war going on," he said, referring to the South Pacific. "It's important that my kids and grandkids get first-hand news of what happened."

A copy of the book containing Carr's diary is available at the Charlevoix Public Library. It is entitled "7th Bombardment Group/Wing 1918-1995."

School stepping toward portables for elementary

Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Action should be taken to temporarily solve elementary school overcrowding at the school board's Dec. 16 meeting. Expect two portable classrooms to be built and a new second-grade teacher to be hired for next semester.

"This will best fit our needs and be the least disruptive to the students in other classes," superintendent Roberta Jackson said.

The overall cost of the scheme may reach $100,000 and will come out of fund equity. Jackson admitted that it would be a challenge for the budget, but seemed sure they could squeeze out enough cash.

One idea, which was scrutinized and rejected in the end was the reshuffling of grades. The plan was to move the fifth-graders into the middle school where space is not nearly the problem it is in the elementary school. Middle school principal, Dennis VanGuilder, summed up why this proposal fell.

"I don't believe we have the space," he said, "even if we did we would have to have a teacher with a pushcart going from room to room, which would be undesirable."

There was also concern over where the fifth-graders would go for special classes, like music and gym, and how would they efficiently bus the students to the middle school.

Satellite Shelter Inc. could be granted the bids for the portables, pending further checking their references. The bids the board received came in around the same cost, but with Satellite the portables would be dry-walled instead of paneled, and would have aluminum siding instead of a wooden exterior.

"I don't see this as a long-term solution," said board member, Larry Levengood. "I want to know how this will lead to a long term solution."

Added board member, Allen Telgenhof, "I don't want the community to say 'well this problem is solved.'"

Still at issue is what to do with the new teacher once the semester ends, large class sizes for first- and second-grades, how the changes will be paid for, and what to do with the portables once they're not needed.

The board maintains that a solution will be rectified at least temporarily by the new semester starting in January. It looks as if no more classes will be taught in the hallway or in Telgenhof's word "an open space."

In other action, the board approved sans dissent as the baseball team's spring break trip to Florida for training, the foreign language summer study session, and the summer tax resolution where townships agreed to charge $5 per parcel for collecting taxes.

In athletic news, the board approved the hiring of Brandon Bruce as freshman boys' basketball coach and approved reappointment as recommended by Athletic Director Barry Anderson all the coaches from this year's fall sports.

Of the list, however, was varsity girls' coach, Hank Wagner, who just completed his first year as head-coach. Last week he tendered his resignation, which the board accepted. He gave no reason for his sudden resignation, but did wish good luck to the team and its eventual new coach.

Take steps against becoming a victim of car break-ins

EDITORIAL

Some downstaters are easy to identify.

Their cars and trucks bid them farewell and hello with a high-pitched bleep. Actually, there's nothing friendly about turning an automobile alarm system on and off. It's rather cold.

Yet, the bleep of downstaters could become more common in Charlevoix if people do not begin to take defensive steps against those who are preying on parked cars and trucks in search of valuables.

People are not being conscious of when walking away from vehicles, which are left unlocked and have tempting valuables in sight.

It's good to feel safe in your town. But there have been enough breaking and entering of vehicles throughout the summer for people to lose the "it-can't-happen-to-me" mindset.

One man was foolish enough to leave a handgun and a sizeable amount of money in a brief in his unlocked car. I'm sure the community felt much safer knowing that a practiced thief was now armed.

Steps to deterring thieves are easy and can become as habit forming as reaching over and locking the seatbelt into place.

Lock the doors, no matter how long you're planning to be away from the car. A short trip into the post office can be delayed by holiday lines or talking to a friend. In the meantime, a prowler could be stealing your valuables and leaving no trace behind.

Officers at the Charlevoix Police Department are asking people to keep their cars locked and not to leave a set of keys inside.

Most of the break-ins are occurring at night. But there is no pattern or part of the city which gets hit. Cars are being randomly selected. Many of the vehicles that have keys left inside are being driven away, only to be found later after being crashed and abandoned.

Locking the car or truck is not assurance that the window will not be broken. But it is a deterrent. And with the rash of break-ins that have spread throughout Charlevoix since spring, small steps can protect your belongings. During one incident, 17 vehicles were broken into in the airport parking lot. Just last week, five more were rummaged through at Harbor Industries. Individual cars parked on the streets at night have also been broken into.

According to officials at the police department, the break-ins are more in number than ever before in Charlevoix. Each time a car is entered and property stolen, a felony is committed.

There has been an arrest of a man for recently breaking into a van. However, there could be others out there lurking. Unfortunately, crooks move in when the innocent are unaware. Locking the car is a practice that should become permanent.

In addition to locking up, don't leave valuables in the car. Carry packages inside as soon as possible. If unable to stop at home, lock valuables in the trunk. Keep them out of sight.

Take whatever defensive steps you can when leaving your vehicle behind. It's the best defense a driver can take, outside of welcoming the bleep of a security system into their life.

Football coach thanks hometown support

Editor:

On behalf of the Boyne City Ramblers football team, the coaching staff, and me personally, I would like to thank those residents of Charlevoix who have shared this football season with us through encouraging words of support, attendance at our games, or by listening to the radio broadcasts. As a graduate of Charlevoix High School and current resident, I appreciate the breaking down of competitive walls in order to stand by the Ramblers during this very exciting year.

Thankful for father's life and example

Editor:

I recently endured the untimely death of a dear and most respected man, my Father. With the coming of Thanksgiving and Christmas without him, I can still be thankful for the many wonderful times we shared. Any day was considered special if my Dad was there. He could tackle problems of any kind with quiet dignity and intelligence. He taught me that anything worth doing was worth doing well and that was how he lived his life.

After retiring from Ford Motor Co. as an electrician, he was very active in the Volunteer Program to Reverse Heart Disease at Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit. He was an inspiration to many people who had been through mild to major heart attacks and was looked upon with admiration and amazement as an example of healthy living. Throughout the coming years he will be missed by many relatives and friends. I will always be proud that he is my father, and I will be grateful forever that I am his daughter.

EDITH GILBERT

Sometimes I wonder if Charlevoix isn't a suburb of Detroit?

A baker's dozen of us drove to Detroit to attend the elegant and formal Governor's Award dinner at the Detroit Institute of Art. More than 1000 people attended the lively ceremony where Jack Perry, founder of the Crooked Tree Arts Council, was honored with the Civic Leader Award by the makers and shakers of Michigan's cultural community.

The first couple I bumped into during the posh cocktail hour, where hot hors d'ouevres were passed, were my Charlevoix neighbors, who summer across the street, Dr. and Mrs. Van Duync. As Flint residents, they were there to support their Flint Cultural Center, a combination of 10 cultural institutions, who this year received the Arts Organization Award.

Everyone was assigned table numbers for the sit down dinner in the Great Hall, after which, we were invited to return downstairs for coffee, luscious desserts and loud and lively dance music. Here I visited with jeweler, Matthew Hoffman, who designed the stunning award that is proudly worn around the neck by all past recipients each year. We reminisced about his fabulous Venetian Wedding, which I attended, and about his jewelry display which was featured last year at Jack Perry's gallery. He promised to bring his gorgeous wife, Kerry, north again this coming summer.

I stood in line to have Michigan novelist, Terry McMillan, autograph my program. Still in her 30s, she received the International Achievement Award for her popular novel, Waiting To Exhale, which as you know, was made into a movie.

A friendly security guard struck up a conversation with me while waiting for the valet parking attendant to bring the car around. Turns out his last name is Boss, and a cemetery in Ellsworth is named after his grandfather.

The next day, my Charlevoix summer friend and neighbor, Connie Wineman, invited me to lunch downtown at the Detroit Club. Built in 1894, this historic treasure, and very private club, was fortunately rescued from bankruptcy recently by a farsighted group of younger men.

I expected that in the main dining room — a Baronial Hall with 30-foot ceilings, dark mahogany walls, a fireplace with hand carved ornamentation — that a group of minstrel singers in full costume might appear at any minute on the balcony.

Instead, there were black uniformed waiters, who could have been trained in France. Great service. A really appetizing, not too spicy, tomato bisque soup, followed by a moderate portion of Caesar salad, left us no room for dessert.

That evening, our group attended "West Side Story" at the Detroit Opera House. Built in 1922, the elaborate interior is still in the process of being faithfully restored to its former splendor, and the acoustics are great. The director of the opera House, David DiChiera, was pleased to see us. He has shared his talented group of singers with us up north more than once for programs at the McCune Arts Center and area schools.

Finally, one couldn't visit downstate, without stopping at the new, glitzy Somerset Mall on the way hoMe. We saw the 12-foot tall marionettes, shopped at Nordstroms, and were waited on by a delightful salesperson in the shoe department.

We had lunch at the Pub, which was a downer. Gloomy decor, with uncomfortable stools and the banquettes slow service and huge portions on small plates. One doesn't need to carry a doggy bag, when one is loaded with packages, while Holiday shopping. Avoid the Pub at all costs, but enjoy the experience of browsing at the mall.

To be perfectly honest, I used to think that one had to visit New York or Chicago for big city amusements, but Detroit is giving them a run for the money. We stayed at the Stroh River House, which was moderately priced, and we were pleased to learn that they provide a shuttle bus to take guests downtown.

Besides having a good time, you never know who you might run into from Charlevoix.

not vise versa.

The LCA is a non-profit organization whose aim is to achieve a high level of protection and conservation of Lake Charlevoix and its tributaries; water safety on the lake is another of their concerns. The Coast Guard Auxiliary conducts safety patrols on Lake Charlevoix, as well as assisting with regatta and racing events. Search and Rescue is another of our missions; we work hand in hand with CG Station Charlevoix. We also conduct Safe Boating courses and perform courtesy marine examinations of vessels. We have participated in pollution cleanups and stress ways to cut down on boating pollution in our classes. It was for these actions that we were so generously recognized by the Lake Charlevoix Association.

I am aware that many people do not realize that the Coast Guard Auxiliary, all volunteer, is the civilian branch of the United States Coast Guard, standing equal with the Active and Reserve units as Team Coast Guard. Perhaps this letter will clear up some of the confusion.

School supporters clarify recent letter

Editor:

We are responding to the article published in your paper, signed by Jim Hisey, regarding decisions of the Citizens Ad-Hoc Committee. Our names, along with several others, were attached to comments made by one gentleman at the meeting. These comments were not at all representative of our thoughts and feelings, but quite contrary.

We have actively pursued many avenues to help the Charlevoix Schools. We are working on enrichment programs at the elementary school. We volunteer at the elementary school and middle school. We are Star Reader volunteers. We worked as volunteers to identify positive voters for the bond issue. We attend school board meetings to support issues such as class size, space at the elementary school, and overall school facilities. We have also coached baseball and soccer teams (of our school age children) in outside recreation leagues and work with Brownie Girl Scouts. We are genuinely interested in helping for the sake of the children as are many, many others in this community.

For this reason, we attended the Citizens Ad Hoc Committee meeting. We admired the concept of a group of citizens, who did not all have children in the school system, but were concerned with the needs and best interest of our students. They meet to discuss ways to help and possible alternatives to reach the common overall goal of the administrators, teachers, school board, parents and community; that is to give the children of Charlevoix the best education possible. This is why the article published troubles us. We had a different understanding of the meeting discussed in the article. It was our understanding that the land issue was discussed and four of the seven present that day indicated that buying land was an important step for our school district. If the land was not used today, it was an invaluable investment in the school's future. This is important for a growing community like Charlevoix. The other issue we do not agree with is refurbishing and adding on to existing buildings, in particular the middle school. Putting a third floor and adding additional rooms in place of the portables to a building which already has too many other concerns did not sound reasonable. It was agreed that one gentleman at the meeting would look at this option with architects and see if it was feasible and cost effective. The majority of the meeting indicated not everyone agreed with this concept, but would be interested in seeing results of a study if it is free to the school district.

We are not trying to discredit this group. The members should be commended for their efforts and concerns, however, they cannot assume and publish that everyone agrees with their ideas.

The Charlevoix community should stop looking at the negatives and bring out the positives. This is what we want for our children, a bright and positive future. Focusing on the good and improvement will help us work toward a better future for the children of Charlevoix. To plan for a better future, you must invest in your youth today.

Sincerely,
Lori Foster and Sue Goss

Guest commentary

This guest commentary was written by Gordon Van Wieren, former superintendent for Charlevoix schools.

Editor:

The purpose of this letter is to offer some thoughts regarding the school facility situation.

It had been interesting to follow the proceedings and actions of the board of education for the past few months. Because of being the former superintendent of schools in our district, there has been a reluctance on my part to offer any suggestions or to ask any questions regarding the general operation of the school system, millage elections, bond issues, etc. Some people might interpret any involvement on my part as the meddling of a "has-been" superintendent with a large ego. I sincerely hope this is not the case. The fact is that after four years of not being part of the Charlevoix schools, I still care very much about the total system, especially the students, teachers, and other employees. The following is offered as a taxpayer, citizen, and supporter of our schools.

First and foremost, we must recognize the fact that the schools are not owned by the board of education, administrators, or other school personnel, but rather by the taxpayers, voters and parents. As owners, the voters will decide what changes will take place in their school buildings. As owners, they must understand why they should spend more money to improve the present buildings and/or build new buildings. As owners, they want to know how the quality of education will be improved. They want students to improve academically. Therefore, tell them how improving facilities will improve education. In turn they will vote to spend more of their hard-earned dollars to improve facilities. They will approve issues that do not divert a large part of their investment toward interest payments.

Facts:

— "General fund" monies should be used to maintain facilities. Using some of the fund equity for this purpose would lend credibility to the board on the part of the taxpayer.

— The elementary building is in urgent need of additional teaching stations and other facilities.

— Lower class size at the elementary level improves student achievement considerably. This is not an opinion, but a fact proven in many valid studies in the past. Education decisions can be based on best practice and sound research.

— Our elementary staff volunteered their time to carry out a study of our math and science curriculum. Michigan State University funded this unique project through a grant. Our teachers spent evenings, weekends, and one summer in a volunteer effort to improve the opportunities for our children. These teachers have the knowledge to make recommendations for additional facilities to improve student learning in these areas.

— In the past, voters approved millages for pay-as-you-go projects. Some examples include millage for technology, school buses and athletic facilities. These were all pay-as-you-go projects with zero interest payments.

— Some special education students have unique needs which cannot be met in a standard classroom.

With the above facts in mind, please consider the following for discussion.

Call for an election for a two or three year sinking fund (not a bond issue) as soon as possible. This will take about 45 days.

Have Brian Certa, along with his students and volunteers (consider me one) to build portables for the second semester. If possible, design the portables so they can be converted to a cottage or a house when the school system no longer has a need for them. This would make them saleable and the resale income would probably cover the costs to build. If portables cannot be built, implement Vane Smith's recommendation.

In December, work with teachers and architects to determine education specifications, design classrooms and other facilities. Prepare construction specifications.

In January, hold an election.
February, advertise for bids.
March, accept bids.
April, let the contract.
June, begin construction.
September, occupy new classrooms, continue construction on other facilities if needed.

While the new elementary facility is being completed, a program should be initiated to inform the public as to how the educational

United Way still expecting donations

There is still time to contribute to the CharEm United Way 1996-97 campaign. This year's campaign, the largest for the two-county area, has reached 60 percent of its goal, collecting more than $115,000 in pledges and contributions.

The CharEm United Way supports 30 local organizations whose services range from education and training, health care, youth development, hospice, elderly respite care, child abuse and neglect prevention and domestic violence outreaches.

Last year more than $169,000 was raised with $150,000 distributed to local agencies. Due to an increase in agency requests, the United Way has raised its goal to $195,000.

"We set a goal we think is possible and necessary to support our local communities," said United Way president, Ellen Zienert. "Public funding sources have made cuts, and we are being asked to fill in the gaps. Together we can reach this year's goal."

Many local companies have met the challenge and increased their employee and corporate gifts to match the increased campaign goal. The six pacesetter companies — CB North, FMB Northwestern, Boyne City Schools, City of Charlevoix, UPS, and J.C. Penney Co. — have all increased their gifts significantly this year showing their leadership and support of United Way.

Anyone wanting to contribute to the campaign may do so by contacting the United Way office at 347-0115 or sending their tax deductible gift to P.O. Box 21, Petoskey.

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Bruce Hamilton
Community Church of God

Have you ever heard that old song "over the river and through the woods to Grandmother's house we go?" Nestled just off of Interstate 24 halfway between Nashville and Chattanooga, Tenn., is a little town called Tullahoma. That's where one of our grandmas happens to live and it's where we headed for the Thanksgiving holidays.

Tullahoma is about the size of Petoskey and probably has more in common with northwest Michigan than you might expect. Where you and I think of places like Harbor Industries and America Mold, they talk about Wilson Sporting Goods or the Arnold Engineering Development Center. When we stand up and cheer for the maroon and white of our Red Rayders, they're on their feet for the red and white Wildcats. But what makes Tullahoma special to us is that it's one of our family's hometowns and after all, isn't there another song that says "there's no place like home for the holidays?"

All the children drove in with their children to fill grandma's nest. There was the usual "my haven't you gotten taller" and "oh, how pretty you look" comments. It took 12 feet of table to get all of us seated for turkey and the trimmings. But is was really just being together as a family that made all the difference in the world.

Will you indulge me as I play around with some words? I hope you know that there is no place like home for the "holy-days" as well. We're on a fast track for what a lot of families feel is the most exciting time of the year and that's Christmas. Well what would Christmas be without family? And by family, I don't just mean those that you are related to by marriage or your family tree. I'm talking about the folks who are related to you thanks to the most marvelous Christmas gift any of us could ever receive — God's gift to each of us in Jesus.

Every time you worship in God's house this "holy-day" season, I hope your Father in Heaven's love for you will remind you to turn your heart toward its real home. Oh the snow covered hillsides that surround our Charlevoix the Beautiful are marvelous to look at. And viewing a starry sky on a frosty winter's evening has no equal anywhere. But this world is really not our final home. We're only passing through.

What God gave us in Jesus was not only a connection to a bigger wider family than we could ever have on our own. He also gave us a hope that stands up to the toughest tests life can dish out. He gave us a peace that can give you a sense of well being in the wildest storm. He gave us a love that finds reason to believe and trust in places that we never would have considered on our own.

It's a good thing to go home for the holidays every once in awhile. It's an even better thing to go home for the "holy-days," home to the house of the Lord where you'll find a spiritual family who will pray for you, stand by you, and encourage you when your physical family is a long distance away. May both your holidays and "holy-days" be blessed with all the love and encouragement you need.

Janenne Irene and David Matthew Harrington

Janenne Irene Froats and David Matthew Harrington were joined in marriage during a 7 p.m. Friday, Nov. 8, wedding at the Emmanuel Episcopal Church in Petoskey.

Janenne, of Charlevoix, is the daughter of Janet Froats-Shepherd and Jim Shepherd, and Jerome and Ruth Froats, all of Boyne City.

David is the son of Floyd and Carol Harrington, of Petoskey.

Father Jack Meyer, priest at the Emmanuel Episcopal Church, and the Rev. Kimon Criner, pastor at Harvest Barn Church in East Jordan, performed the double-ring ceremony before about 150 guests.

The bride was escorted down the aisle by Steve Newland, of Kalamazoo, and Jimmie Lee McWatters, of Ellsworth. They are both friends of the bride.

She wore a matte satin, off-the-shoulder white wedding dress with a drop waist and semi-cathedral length train. Her hat included rosettes that matched the dress. It was handmade by her mother. Satin, elbow-length, fingerless gloves were also worn. The bride carried a dozen red roses with miniature daisies and a pearl angel that was a gift from the groom.

Organist Kay Farrimond played "Jesu, Joy of Men's Desiring" for the processional and "Trumpet Voluntary" for the recessional. On piano during the wedding, she accompanied Tracy Brandon, of Georgia, in singing "Great is Thy Faithfulness."

The matron of honor was Bridgette Criner, friend of the bride from East Jordan. Bridesmaids were Barbara Troyer, of Tulsa, Okla., and Tracy Brandon, of Augusta, Ga. They each wore red velvet, floor-length gowns and white lace gloves. They carried single red roses with tiny daisies and white satin streamers.

Flower girl was Kari Jean Nulph, niece of the groom and god-daughter of the bride. She wore a white lace dress with red bows and a white and red wreath, made by her mother, Julia (Harrington) Nulph.

Ring bearer was William Matthew Hiatt, nephew of the groom. He wore a black tuxedo, which matched that of the groom.

Best man was Floyd John Harrington, Jr., brother of the groom, from Harbor Springs. Groomsmen were David Millar, of Petoskey, and Jimmie Lee McWatters. They wore black tuxedos with red paisley vests. Ushers were Steve Newland and Jimmie Lee McWatters.

A reception dinner was held at the church following the candlelight ceremony, which included the lighting of a unity candle and communion between the bride and groom. The dinner was hosted by the parents of the bride with preparation by Sally Flowers, aunt of the bride, and friend Phyllis Cooper.

A rehearsal dinner was hosted by the groom's family, prepared by his sister, Julia Nulph, and held at the church Thursday, Nov. 7.

The couple are making their home in Charlevoix, where Janenne is editor of the Charlevoix Courier, and David is a self-employed builder/painter.

The "Festival of Carols" will usher in the Advent and Christmas season. Participants come from Bellaire, Boyne City, Central Lake, Indian River, East Jordan, Petoskey and Gaylord as well as Charlevoix.

Ellen Addington will direct the chorale and orchestra. Also performing will be the Charlevoix Men's Glee Club, directed by Fran Tollas, and the Pilgrim Bell Choir, directed by Roger Waters.

Charlevoix girl going to state pageant

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Linda Marie Smith

Royalty is within Charlevoix's domain. Linda Marie Smith, 10, has been awarded the honor of Miss Pre-Teen Charlevoix, and will take that title with her to the state competition February, Dec. 13, in Detroit.

"I felt happy, excited," she said, when she opened the package which came in the mail announcing her win. Her mother, Anna, recalled Linda Marie wearing the tiara around the house that evening as her brothers and sisters cheered "their princess" on.

Linda Marie, who beams a wide smile, has a variety of interests.

"I like hitting home runs and making more scores," reading mystery books because "it makes you think about what will happen at the end," and acting in church plays because she loves, "dressing up in costumes and saying lines," she said.

That love should come into play in the state pageant, where much of the judging will be during the question and answer segment of the pageant and the skills competition.

For that part of the show, Linda Marie will be wearing a bright purple jingle dancer dress and perform a jingle dance, a Native American custom.

"When someone is sick they would call on a jingle dancer," her mother explained. "It's like a prayer, but in the form of a dance."

The costume has many tiny cones, which make music as the wearer dances. The dress normally has a cone for every day of the year, but Linda Marie will only wear 200 because her dress will be smaller. Still, Anna recalls the challenges of rolling each cone by hand.

"It took three hours using needle-nose pliers to do 200 cones, not to mention all the blisters I got," she said.

Anna took time to thank her friend, Pearl Broome for helping to create her daughter's costume. The Grand Traverse Bay Band of Ottawa and Chippewa Indians is sponsoring Linda Maria's trip.

Anna Smith is guiding her daughter into the world of pageants with a tinge of apprehension.

"I'm excited with her," she said, fondly remembering seeing her daughter's biggest the day she won. "I'm just hoping it doesn't spoil her if she gets through, and not disappointed to much if she doesn't. But I am a proud mom."

Linda Marie's father covers any excitement her mother may conceal.

"He says I'm going to go down and watch my princess on stage," Anna said.

Guest commentary on schools continued from page 6 programs can be improved with new and/or improved facilities at the middle school and high school.

Our curriculum should be planned and educational decisions should be based on sound research. Smaller class sizes at the lower elementary grade levels improve student achievement considerably. This cannot be done with the existing facilities.

I do not see the board and administration getting in the position of "selling" the voters on new and/or improved buildings. Instead, let's explain the options for better educational opportunities. Let the owners decide if they should spend more of their hard-earned dollars to build the necessary facilities in order that these options may be initiated. If the owners want improved education, they will approve the dollars required. If not, you as a board have done your job and then can get on with operating the school system as best you can under the present circumstances.

It is very easy to offer simple solutions for complex problems. I hope this is not the case in what I have presented. If you find any merit in this proposal, consider it. If not, get on with other ideas. I really do not care who is right as long as what is right is done in the final analysis. We are fortunate to have a group of students and teachers of the highest caliber and they need this community's support.

Please accept this letter in the spirit it is offered — that of cooperation and a sincere effort to solve a dilemma.

Thank you for your consideration and best of luck in facing the difficult education decisions you will be making in the future.

'Bankers hours' less applicable to customers

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Merging onto the information highway can be a challenging venture, what with all the user codes, chat rooms, and new and improved software updated with every moon cycle.

Charlevoix banks have met that challenge, in the name of customer service, by providing their clients an on-line banking service which can be easily accessed from a home computer.

"Our bank is a firm believer in providing convenience and the best possible customer service," said James Connaughton.

"It's in the middle of a snow storm and your mortgage is due," he said, prophesying the system's convenience, "the schools have been closed and you can't get out of your unplowed driveway. Now you can turn on your computer, pay your mortgage, and other bills without leaving home."

At FMB, customers will pay a monthly $3 fee for the ability to update checking and savings accounts, transfer funds within accounts, make advances and payments on lines of credit, and breakdown personal finances, on your own time, to help plan family and individual budgets.

For another $6, FMB offers a bill paying service which will enable the client to pay all bills through their on-line bank account. The fee is for a block of 20 payments, which will "eliminate the need for mail stamps," Connaughton said.

FMB is not the only Charlevoix bank entering the information age. CB North plans to offer on-line services by the first quarter of 1997 and soon after that provide a bill-paying service similar to FMB's. CB North does have a system in place, but it's still experimental. However, it appears ready to go.

"I think it's fun," said bank employee, John Kurtz, who is testing the system from his home computer. "Last Sunday night, I transferred money from my checking to savings, and paid some bills. I did not have to go to a teller."

One aspect of banking on-line that appeals to those who use it is the ability to have immediate posting and access to funds. On Christmas Day, for example, it will be feasible to deposit the check from Aunt Ruth and then immediately use it to pay-off a credit card bill which has grown from holiday shopping. If the bank's offices are closed, no matter, as computers are not limited to working just during "business hours."

"There are more and more people using home computers to do more and more things, and banking can be one of them," Kurtz said. "This service will not be much of a profit provider for us, but what we wanted to do is give the customer a chance to do their banking at home whenever they want, be it at midnight."

The banks see the change as keeping up with changes in how to do business.

"This is part of the future of banking," Connaughton said. "People are traveling more and more and having the time to come into a branch office may be a challenge. Now they still have access to their accounts."

So for the farmer secluded in the dell, the traveling salesman, and elderly and handicapped persons who struggle to get out and about, having to do that one banking chore doesn't require a major venture into town. It may all be done by simple navigation with a mouse. Just don't forget your user code.

Business in brief

Donna DiMartino, of G.H.A. Insurance Agency in Charlevoix, recently was awarded the designation of certified insurance service representative. She successfully completed a rigorous education program administered by the Michigan Association of Insurance Agents.

The certificate program is tailored to the unique needs of customer service representatives in insurance agencies.

The Michigan Association of Insurance Agents is a statewide trade association that represents 10,000 independent insurance agents and industry employees.

further improve the old theater before the house in her neighborhood is condemned and torn down.

"This decay is going on and on and on underneath the patches," she said, noting that she thought the building had become a hangout for the homeless and teen-agers, and dangerous for children in the neighborhood.

Hisey admitted to council that the building was "an embarrassment."

"I'd sure like to do something," he said. "It's been on the back burner too long. We're ready to tear down if that is what everybody thinks."

Hisey said, however, that in order to build a new structure on the property that more variances would be needed because the lots are only 50 feet wide.

He presented council with four options for the building in a letter submitted earlier Monday:

1. Try again to convert the main frame building to residential condominiums or apartments,

2. Patch up the building and actively pursue the storage business, maybe create and sell separate units,

3. Demolish the structure and sell the eight lots individually,

4. Sell the property to the city for zero money down and interest below prime over 10 years.

The future of the building was not decided Monday. Hisey was told that something needed to be done with the building.

Tuesday, Hisey said that he plans to meet with city planner, Gerry Harsch, to discuss his next step with the carriage house. He hopes to have a plan before the planning commission within the next three months.

"I think the city's ready and the neighbors are ready to do something," Hisey said, hoping for cooperation in his upcoming plan.

Following the discussion, council approved the minor height variance for Hisey's current project. The variance affects a small portion at the back of the building which measures over city regulations because it is measured from the ground at the rear parking area, making the back of the building 37.24 feet.

Cranberry Cup won Sunday

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Rain or shine.

The Cranberry Cup brought sailors out for the finale of fall arena racing Sunday.

The regatta in Round Lake wasn't delayed because of a cold, misty rain and 37 degree temperatures. Instead, skipper Tom Barnes said the day offered "ideal" sailing conditions with winds gusting to 15 knots. The rain kept sailors from overheating as they worked their boats around the tight turns of the buoys.

"It was cold for the first race," he said. "Then, you get so excited that you get numb and enjoy the race."

Each race consisted of two times around the markers. Six races were held, allowing for one throw out. Scores were totaled to decide an overall winner.

First-place winners of the cup were Kevin Meier, of Charlevoix, and his crew, Don and Ann Brimmer, of Petoskey, aboard H.S. Moisture Missile.

Coming in a close second were Chris and Tammy Kuhn, of Boyne City, aboard Gecko. Less than 1.5 points separated the two boats.

Barnes boat, Cathach, came in third. David Strawbridge, skipper of Swine Flew came in fourth. York Gruitzmacher and crew, sailing aboard Floyd finished fifth, and Bob Grove lead Pale Face Lite to a sixth-place finish. Pete Funck and the crew of Kamikazi came in last after pulling out a race early to give his crew — two doctors — a chance to answer their pagers.

With the cup's seventh year finishing strong, some of the sailors are still hesitating about pulling their boats for the season. Barnes said the J-22s could be seen in Round Lake until the New Year.

The boats are prepared for the cup by gathering each Sunday until the race weekend, which traditionally follows Thanksgiving.

Some might say it's crazy to sail when some people are donning snow skis to hit the slopes. Skipper Pete Funck calls arena racers "true, dedicated, lunatic friends."

"If people don't say you're crazy, you're not having fun," Barnes said. "This is the most fun sailing we have all year."

Racing late in the fall, Barnes said, is no crazier than being a deer hunter who sits still in a blind in wait of getting a deer.

The arena races begin when the Charlevoix Yacht Club's summer season ends in October. Mostly, J-22s race. The cup was also entered by Funck's San Juan.

Barnes said he likes arena racing because it has so many shorter races, each taking about 20 minutes.

"If you make a mistake in the beginning, you still have other races," he said. During the yacht club's summer series, the weekly Wednesday races take up the evening.

> "If people don't say you're crazy, you're not having fun. This is the most fun sailing we have all year."

Coon hunting not like in 'the old days'

By Nancy Ritsema
Courier columnist

Anyone who hunted coon in northern Michigan 50 or more years ago had a hound dog tied out behind the house and a sturdy coop for the dog to sleep in. Blue tick hounds and walkers were favored for coon hunting.

Dinner scraps or cornmeal mush were scraped into an old pie tin, unfit for homemade pies but just right for a hound dog's food dish and dinner.

Stanley "Stubb" Lord ordered his first coon dog COD (cost on delivery) and paid $40 plus $8 freight costs from Ohio. He picked up his registered blue tick pup at the Charlevoix train depot.

The first thing he did was to get the pup, named Kate, to bark.

"I wanted to be sure she had a good baying bark for hunting," Stubb said. "Today, a good blue tick dog like Kate can go for $3,000 or $4,000 or more."

An older experienced coon dog taken out with the new pup taught her the ropes of tracking and treeing a coon. Additional lessons were given to the pup by dragging an old coon hide along the ground and securing it in a tree and then getting the pup to "track" it.

Coon hunting season opened the first day of November. Tracking the coon and shooting them with a "22" had to be done from November 1 until the first snow, for once the snows came tracking with the dogs was useless.

The hills and swamps around Norwood and beyond were the hunter's domain, all the way from Charlevoix to Elk Rapids and over to East Jordan.

Raccoons are nocturnal animals so Stubb and his cousin, Milt Richardson, hunted after work at night and on weekends at first, and then taught their dogs the cold trail during daylight hours.

"You've got to have a pretty good dog with a good nose to cold trail during the day," Stubb said.

A kerosene lantern, and later a flashlight, carried at night lit their way in the woods and helped to spot the raccoon in the tree. A compass was a necessity.

"We always checked our compass when we started so that when we got turned around in the swamp we knew which direction to take to get out," Stubb recalled.

"In late fall the fur was primed up and the inside of the hide turned white," he said. "When fur buyer, Ham Shiviline, of Central Lake examined and found a good primed up pelt, we would get from $2 to $2.50 for each one in the 1940's and 1950's.

"In the 1970s and 1980s, I got as much as $40 for a large coon hide. I usually got about 50 coon hides a season," Stubb continued.

"We never did our Christmas shopping until after Stubb sold the hides," the hunter's wife, Cathy, chimed in. "That was a lot of money to us in those days."

When asked why he liked to hunt coon so well, Stubb replied, "Because of the dogs. There's nothing like owning and working a good coon dog."

More than man and dog entered the woods at times.

"Sometimes we wives would go along and sit under a tree while the men went and got the dogs," Cathy said, "and we might have a coon supper later on at Alice Richardson's.

"We all had such a good time. I don't think folks have good times today like we all did years ago during coon hunting season."

Tree seekers

In search of the perfect evergreen

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Some Christmas tree shoppers take time to inspect nearly every needle on the lot. Others look for length and haul their find away while still tied in a bundle.

Christmas tree preferences are deeply rooted in tradition. Some prefer the stiff stance of a Blue Spruce, while others look for the softness and scent of a Douglas Fir.

Underneath the nighttime lights and winter's snowflakes in East Park, shoppers are choosing the tree that will next hold family heirlooms and a splash of icicles.

About 275 trees were put on display in the Lion's lot. One-by-one, the trees are finding a home.

James Steen, of Charlevoix, carried a five-foot tree from the lot Saturday. He didn't take time to untie the Blue Spruce he was

Three felonies connected to local car break-in

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

When Leo Joel Sarasin walked into his preliminary hearing Monday, he was facing two felony charges.

When he walked out of Judge Richard May's district courtroom in Charlevoix, a third felony charge accompanied him.

Sarasin is accused of breaking and entering Bonnie Webster's van with intentions to steal, attempting to drive it away and possessing a controlled substance. Each charge could mean more prison time for the 30-year-old parolee.

Sarasin, of 06684 M-66 in Charlevoix, was arrested Nov. 20 near Harbor Industries after a foot chase with city police and a county deputy, according to Charlevoix officer, James Schlappi.

Early that afternoon, Webster came home and parked her 1993 GMC van behind the house in the driveway. She put the keys underneath the front mat and went into the State Street house, she testified.

The dog began barking from the back yard.

"I went out to tell the dog to be quiet," she said. "There was a man getting out of my car."

Webster identified Sarasin from the witness stand as the man who mumbled to her as he got out of the van, noting that he said he was looking for Steve Johnson. After she told the man to leave, Webster immediately went into the house and called 9-1-1.

Police, however, were already in the area, searching for a man who had earlier been found in a nearby house when the owner's mother came home from walking the dog.

The suspect's clothing from the two reports matched as being jeans, a jean jacket and ball cap turned backward.

Shortly after losing sight of the suspect, Sarasin was found laying down in a field and was arrested, Schlappi said. A yellow pill that tested to be Diazepam, similar to a Valium, was found in his pocket.

During the hearing, Sarasin sat at the defendant's table with his tattoos of a skull and cross

Charlevoix students learn by doing, not just reading

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Gay Paree. The banks of the Seine. Architecture landmarks like Notre Dame and the Sacre Coeur. The priceless louvre, and, of course, the can-can lifestyle of the "City of Lights."

Charlevoix French teacher, Tom Shelton, hopes he will be doing more than just telling his class about these monuments, but that he will be doing so in their historical shadows.

Shelton is planning to take fourth- and third-year French students to Paris and other French outposts during a field trip next March 25-April 8. The itinerary calls for extensive visits to Paris, Nice and South Avignon. During the final six days spent overseas, each student will be placed into an adoptive home in Geneva, Switzerland to see firsthand how foreign families interact.

Seeing the sites is one thing, but Shelton will encourage the students to become active in the events like shopping and bartering in the various street markets which dot the Paris scene.

"All of a sudden it's real, it's necessary," he said. "You can't survive the trip unless you can speak the language. It's a great motivator for the program."

To that end, Shelton feels the in-home stays are the key to this experience, and that it comes during the final week of the trip, so as to calm the nerves of the students.

"It can be a real language shock, this way they will have been speaking it for a few days, and it won't be much of a transition," he said.

> "All of sudden it's real, it's necessary. You can't survive the trip unless you can speak the language."
> —Tom Shelton, high school French teacher

There won't be any need for a transition if the school board fails to grant approval for the field trip. During its last meeting it heard a report from Shelton and plans to vote during their Monday, Dec. 16, meeting.

The board routinely approves similar trips for Charlevoix students. Eighth-graders go to Washington D.C. each spring, a group of high-schoolers in government class are railing out to the capitol in January for Clinton's inauguration, and the baseball team will be training in Florida for a week this spring.

In fact, Shelton has co-chaperoned two other overseas jaunts since his arrival at Charlevoix High in the fall of 1994. Last year, he guided students through the streets of Madrid, Huelva and Seville, and in the spring of '95 they went to France.

Obvious problems arise with extensive field trips such as this one, and should the school board automatically say "yea?"

Class time is missed. In this case, the trip is buffered by Spring

Tree lover inspires Shade Tree Commission during tenure

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

The term "tree-hugger" has evolved into a derogatory designation for environmental activists. Yet, Barbara MacArthur would not only wear that tag during her years on the Shade Tree Commission, but she would wear it with aplomb.

"She's probably a true tree lover if there ever was one," Bern Cannan, fellow commission member said. "She would defend every last tree to the last minute before it was cut down. She hated to see a tree go down."

The Shade Tree Commission, founded as a city commission in 1975, is dedicated to the preservation and replacement of trees in the greater Charlevoix area. It upholds an arbor tradition, which dates back to 1884 when Village of Charlevoix president, Amos Fox, put into place Ordinance 7, dealing with the protection of trees along the streets and all other public lands.

After 10 years as the emotional driving force behind the commission, MacArthur is stepping down, but not after leaving an active legacy for her follower. Mary Adams has been appointed to take her place.

During MacArthur's tenure, the count of city trees has increased from 3,200 to just under 4,000, and Charlevoix has won the distinction of Tree City USA each year since 1987. The honor is shared by 2,000 U.S. cities ranging in size from New York City to Rodney, Iowa, population 65.

MacArthur will be quick to point out that she has been just part of a team, a spoke in the wheel, but there is no measuring the care and devotion she has to some of God's more taller creations.

"Even though she won't be on the committee, her voice won't be stopped," Cannan said.

MacArthur will be stepping down so she can spend some time on other volunteer projects, and she felt it time to turn the post over to someone who had a bit more "true horticultural knowledge." What she claims to have lacked in academic knowledge of trees has been returned in the form of drive and emotion.

"I saw so many trees coming down, that didn't seem necessary," she said. "There had been a commission, but it had become a little inactive. It was time to react and give a little attention to the trees."

> "She's probably a true tree lover if there ever was one. She would defend every last tree to the last minute before it was cut down. She hated to see a tree go down."
> — Bern Cannan, fellow Shade Tree commission

MacArthur gives scientific reasons for her role in safeguarding trees. Their shade provides a cooling effect, and they help buffer pollution from cars. However, it's the aesthetics of trees which is at the core of her inspiration.

"It's the serenity," she said. "There is nothing like a tree-shaded street, the arch of the trees is so pleasant."

Although she stresses the need to plant a variety of trees, MacArthur will admit to having favorites: the maple, partly because of the syrup, mostly because of their fall kaleidoscope and the Bradford Pear because of the phases of its color changes. The pear tree spurts white blossoms in late winter and spring, bursts with green come summer time, and explodes a majestic gold during color season. Although predominantly found along the central Atlantic coastline, some can be found in Charlevoix. The MacArthurs have one in their yard.

She does have one other favorite.

"Of course, we all love Christmas trees," she said.

This maple tree at 208 Clinton St. is the most magnificent tree in downtown Charlevoix, according to Barbara MacArthur, who is pictured measuring it. The roots are endangered by cars parking at the base of the tree and paving of the adjacent Erber parking lot. The tree measures 12 feet around and is more than 100 years old.

Events in brief

More business break-ins downtown

Three more businesses were broken into over the weekend, according to Charlevoix police.

The Rainbow Thrift Shoppe, Seeley's Printing Service and Village Inn Pizza were all entered either late Saturday night or early Sunday, chief Dennis Halverson said.

A small amount of cash was take from the Rainbow Shoppe. An employee at Seeley's said the shop was messed up and a small amount of money stolen. Nothing appears to have been stolen from VIP.

An investigation is ongoing and involves other businesses in town that have been broken into recently, Halverson said.

False alarm for emergency workers

Emergency personnel from around the county were called out early Dec. 4 to help people who had gone through the ice on Suzanne Lake.

The dispatch authority at 9-1-1 had been notified of the accident and called out rescuers from the Charlevoix area.

Fortunately, the U.S. Coast Guard was involved in a training session, and emergency personnel were able to go home.

Another car stolen in Charlevoix

A 1993 Chevy was stolen from the owner's driveway Saturday night. The car belongs to Roberta Corp. The keys had been left in the car, which was parked in the owner's driveway at 302 Sherman.

The vehicle was located late Saturday by police. It appears to be undamaged and has been returned to Corp.

Halverson said department employees are working overtime to end the rash of stolen cars that has been plaguing Charlevoix.

Salvation Army needs bell ringers in town

The Salvation Army needs volunteer bell ringers for stores in Charlevoix. Anyone interested in helping may call 347-3531. Office hours are 10 a.m.-2 p.m. and 1-4 p.m. Monday-Friday.

Annual cribbage tournament to heat up

The Odd Fellows and Masons groups begin the annual cribbage tournament Thursday, Jan. 2.

For 10 consecutive weeks, games will take place at 7:30 p.m. each Thursday at the Masonic Temple, at the corner of Bridge and Mason streets. All Odd Fellows and Masons are invited to play.

The losing team will host a dinner for the winners at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, March 13. There is a 50 cent charge per night for eight games, which buys the food for the dinner.

The Odd Fellows have won 40 times and the Masons 26 times.

Pets can pose with Santa

Santa will be available to have his picture taken with pets from 2-4 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 14, at the County Post, 6675 M-66.

The event is being sponsored by the Charlevoix County Humane Society.

Teen center turned over to social worker

Club closer to a dream

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Fifteen months ago, Scott Kelly had reached a crossroad. He was having a difficult supporting his family from his life's creation, Bay Area Substance Education Services (B.A.S.E.S.). To compensate, he was working the midnight shift at his parents' furniture finishing store, and contemplated leaving the program behind.

For a man who has devoted his education and much of his adult life to helping people cope with substance abuse, such a move would require a major veer at the crossroad.

One morning his phone rang. On the other end was a representative of Club 77, Charlevoix's teen center. They wanted Kelly to oversee the club's daily operation, and, despite only paying about $1,000 a month, Kelly leapt at the offer.

Like a Dicken's novel, it was the best of times, and the worst of times. The best of times came because the extra cash would go a long way in keeping Kelly and his life's work open. The worst of times came through the poor shape of the teen center.

The building was littered with trash, much of the equipment was either broken or rendered useless from age. The place reeked of sweat and garbage. And there was nothing for the kids who did stroll through the doors to do once they got there.

"To be honest, I thought I was there to put the whole thing to rest, to dismantle a corporation," he said, admitting that before he was hired, he thought the club had already been shut down.

However, through Kelly's guidance, the club has thrived in Charlevoix as a center for teen activity like never before.

The club has been cleaned and outfitted with pool, air hockey and ping-pong tables. It has a back room for skateboarders to practice their moves once wintry sidewalks become too icy to wheel. There are a handful of televisions to watch a ball game, movie, or play video games on. Music blares from the stereo, and diner-like booths surround the main room to give teens a chance to snack and relax. The center has become a legitimate teen hangout.

"I wanted to offer things to kids 11-15 years of age," Kelly said. "Each year we can keep them from experimenting with drugs and alcohol increases their chances of never having a problem with it."

As a tribute to his resurrection efforts, the center's board of directors has turned complete control of the center to Kelly allowing for the center to merge, so to speak, with B.A.S.E.S. The result is nothing short of a lifetime contract for Kelly to run the teen center.

Now one man is at the forefront, and Kelly has a free hand to move the center from a struggling non-profit organization to a deeply rooted community institution that will have a positive impact for generations to come.

"Right now, we're just trying to keep the doors open, bills paid and a warm, safe place for the kids," he said.

However, living in his mind is a grand scheme. At the forefront of that plan is economic stability through massive fund-raising campaigns. Living and praying by the month is fine, but a competent budget plan needs to be created.

Kelly envisions a project run by the teens themselves, like selling Charlevoix commemorative cups during the many festivals which dot the city's calender.

"Kiwanis has their kielbasa. Lion's club has their chicken, maybe our little niche could be these cups," he said.

Through that and other fundraisers, Kelly would like to see a yearly budget of $40,000 to cover operational expenses and the salary for a future full-time director.

Kelly is looking to employ two lobbyists to help drum up funds and support. He has also hired an assistant, Travis Mulhauser, of Petoskey.

"He's able to see things better than I from the kids' eyes because of his age," he said of the 20-year-old. "He is very warm and friendly, and what keeps kids coming back is that they're developing a relationship with Travis."

Kelly would like to expand the center's hours during the week into the evening, a practical time for high-schoolers whose after school time is gobbled up by extracurricular activities like athletics. He would also like to purchase new computers and set up an "Internet Cafe" so teens may go on-line while at the club. Eventually, the club could either relocate to a new building or purchase and renovate the present location on West Lincoln Street.

Much of this is a long way off, but the invigorated teen center seems primed to anchor itself as a viable drug-free hangout for teens.

Big Rock Point plant trips off line

Big Rock Point nuclear power plant is still doing repairs on an automatic voltage control circuit that caused the plant to shut down at 12:10 p.m. Dec. 7.

When the circuit failed, the plant's safety systems caused the turbine and reactor to trip, shutting the plant down automatically. It controls voltage to the electrical grid for the entire plant.

"You don't want an increase or decrease in voltage," said plant public affairs director, Tim Petrosky. "This is an example of the plant operating correctly."

Plant employees are in the process of locating a replacement part and performing other maintenance jobs while the plant is not in service.

Petrosky said he isn't sure if this part has been replaced before, and that a full investigation as to why the circuit failed will follow repairs. If found necessary, the circuit could be placed on a preventative maintenance schedule.

For now, efforts are centered on getting the plant back on-line. The plant is expected to begin producing electricity again by the middle of this week.

The plant has been operating for 33 days since the last unscheduled shutdown.

Vengeance and settlements don't heal the ailing

EDITORIAL

Physicians were once looked on as people who offered hope to the ailing.

Patients allowed doctors to use their knowledge of the human body and available treatments to do all they could to help. If a cure didn't come, it was unfortunate, but accepted.

No longer.

Today, if the miracle cure doesn't arrive, the doctor has done something wrong. He's overlooked a test result, a remedy, a new medicine ... anything.

America has adopted a mind set that if there's pain, someone will pay. And the onslaught of malpractice and civil lawsuits hitting the courts today shows that a thirst for vengeance abounds.

Unfortunately, society has yet to see the backlash of its attitude. One side effect has been that doctors no longer offer much hope to the ailing. They have been forced to stand by sterile reports. After all, if the best doesn't occur, they could end up in court with someone trying to take everything they own. People have pressured physicians into giving worst-case scenarios. Then, if all goes well, everyone is relieved.

Hope is an important part of healing. It gives a person strength when their body is lacking. It helps them look beyond the present circumstances to a better day.

We need to untie the hands of our physicians and allow them to administer hope with medication and other treatments.

In Texas over the weekend, a father from Taylor, Mich., took his 12-year-old son, Richard Schulte, to Houston for unapproved cancer treatment. The boy's parents are pinning their hope for a cure to a brain tumor on a physician who refuses to just give the boy a year to live.

"This is our only chance," are the words of the mother, according to The Detroit News.

The family has run into the arms of Dr. Stanislaw Burzynski, who has treated more than 2,500 cancer patients since 1977 with chemicals called antineoplastons.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration is trying to close the doctor's clinic for using unapproved treatment and has brought a 75-count indictment against the 53-year-old physician.

Richard Schulte has become part of a study. The medication could and could not work. But in the meantime, his parents are filled with hope that their son will recover. This alone could help the boy beat the strike that has been called against his life.

Instead of mourning over his bedside and limiting his life before its time, the Taylor couple will speak words of encouragement and accomplishment to their son. If Richard dies in the end, his final days will have been made more pleasant.

It's unfortunate that people are having to flee to maverick doctors to hear words like, "We are always hopeful. In children, sometimes we see quick results."

Some people would consider Burzynski a villain for giving false hope. Can hope be false?

Burzynski has become a safe house for the refugees of our lawsuit-ridden society. And the only way to stop that tumor is to end the cry for vengeance.

There are accident claims that should be settled in court. But money is not the best medicine for grieving.

Bad things do happen to good people. And blaming other people is a far cry from working through the situation and taking steps toward real healing.

American elm trees not newcomers to Charlevoix

Editor:

An article titled "The re-elming of American" appeared in the Petoskey News-Review on Dec. 3, page 16. It reported the return of the disease resistant American Elm to the American scene. Trees in the only locally known American Liberty Elm scout nursery have been growing in Charlevoix for almost three years, maintained by Scout Troop 11 in cooperation with the city.

Now many of these trees will be ready to be sold to the public next spring, initially in the Charlevoix area and planted along Charlevoix streets.

If you're interested in more information on the trees, please call Scoutmaster Tim May at 547-0979. The city in cooperation with the scouts also will plant Elms along — yes, Elm Street — and other streets.

We welcome the return of the true American Elm to our communities and hope you will too!

Shift students before building portables

Editor:

While attending the Nov. 4 meeting of the Charlevoix Board of Education, I proposed the following short-term solution to the expressed need for classroom space for the first- and second-grades. My statement to the board was very short, and I have added some reasons to clarify my position. What I proposed was as follows:

1. The elementary school was designed as a K-4 facility. Move the fifth-grade to the middle school. This would free up for classrooms.

2. Make the middle school a 5-7 facility. Move the eighth-grade to the high school. Students now in the middle school are currently taking such classes as foreign language and instrumental music in the high school. This has been going on for a number of years. The student enrollment at the middle school will remain about the same.

3. When the high school was remodeled and additions built in the late 1970s, the facility was designed to accommodate approximately 600 students. The high school has the facilities and the administration to handle the addition of the eighth-grade.

I feel this proposal should be given study and consideration as a SHORT-TERM solution and it may very well be cost effective. This change could be put into effect no later than the start of second semester this school year. This proposal more than likely will bring out the emotions of some parents but given a chance, it might give the district some "breathing room."

Thanks to unknown road rescuer

Editor:

I want to take my hat off to an unknown rescuer. I went to a friend's for lunch, during which time I left my car lights on. The battery was dead upon my return, and there was no way I could get home. My friend said she had some jump wires, so I opened the hood of my car.

Alas, she couldn't find the wires. Just then, a friendly young man came by in his red car, saw my difficulty, stopped, extracted his jump wires from his trunk and poof. My car was operable once again.

It was like being "touched by an angel." I have no idea what his name is, but I do so want to thank him.

I hope this letter to the Courier will take my message to him.

Fund-raisers help students head to foreign lands

Break, so only five days will be missed, three days before break and two afterwards. However, that is not always the case. The government trip faced dissent by one board member because the trip took students away from classes during exam week.

Costs for such trips are high. The trip to France will cost students $1,600 apiece, which leads many to wonder that since not all students can afford such a price if these trips will create a wave of elitism among a clique of students.

Shelton said that much is done throughout the year to defray costs, to help those who wouldn't usually be able to afford such a trip. Students sell Santagrams for 50 cents, hold a bake sale in January and sell carnations during Valentine's week. Many students take part in the receipt-saving promotions run by local supermarkets where customers can get a 1 percent return from grocery bill receipts.

"Some have made $400-$500 by doing this," he said, opening a drawer full of receipts already turned in. "Most of the students have been saving for this since middle school, it's why they enter the program."

The home stays are a little shaky as students will be detached from their chaperones. They will be placed within the framework of a family.

Students have filled out an intense questionnaire to match them with a host family. Shelton plans on living in a Geneva hotel during that week, and plans to maintain contact a couple of times with each student during the week.

"I will not be taking a week off to ski in the Alps," he assured the board during his presentation.

"You can read it in books, but you'll just forget it."
— Annie Campbell, high school senior

For the most part, the home stays come off with resounding success.

"It was the best part of trip," commented Charlevoix high school senior, Annie Campbell, who went to Spain last year. "You are there as tourists, but when I was with my family I was Spanish, not the big dumb American. That is when I really learned the culture."

For Shelton, the underlying theme is that experience, in this day and age, counts for everything, and these experiences are vital for student development. He should know having studied abroad in both Leige, Belgium and northern Germany during his high school studies in Kalamazoo.

"Foreign language and travel in Europe has always been important to me," he said. "I'm from a small town like Charlevoix, and I was unaware of the world outside my own sphere. These trips will help kids discover different cultures and different lifestyles in the world."

Perhaps Campbell puts it best.

"You can read it in books, but you'll just forget it."

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Philip G. Schairbaum
First Congregational United Church of Christ

The Advent season, which many Christians observe as they prepare for Christmas, is a wonderful time for trying to keep in touch with what really matters most to us, and to be more attentive to the ways that God is trying to break into our life. The next few weeks can be very tiring, even exhausting, if we let ourselves get caught up on all the commercial bedlam that is everywhere around us. The Christmas message can be so easily missed in that secular environment.

That is why Jesus warned us to "keep watch." Someone once said, "God is more likely to be found not in the hustle and bustle of the inn, but in an out-of-the-way and subdued stable," which is another way of saying that we are to watch for the revelation of God not in places like malls and supermarkets, but in the common places of our life — in our marriage and family life, in our child-rearing experiences, in our work sites, in the totality of our human relationships as we live them day by day.

And especially if our life in these areas is uncertain, if it seems unmanageable or feels chaotic, we are to keep watch all the more carefully and faithfully for signs of God's presence. Advent is a time to be surprised again at the gift of God's grace and the extent of God's love that surrounds, upholds, and up builds us day by day.

There is a beautiful story about a four-year-old little girl who was becoming aware of the meaning of numbers. Rushing up to her mother she said, "Mommy, I love you 10 times." Then after a moment's reflection , she said, "Mommy, I love you 20 times." Then again after a short pause she said, "Mommy, I love you 600 times." Finally, when her mother knelt down and gave her a grateful hug and a kiss, the four-year-old burst out with great joy, "Mommy, I love you more than all the numbers!"

That's a reflection, too, of God's great love for us, a love which can help carry us through the ups and downs not only of Advent and Christmas but our whole life. We may not know all about the future and what is in store for us, but we know that it is God who holds the future. We may not know when the fullness of God's kingdom will break into our world, but we know that God is at work for the good in the world and that you and I are included in God's plan for the future.

The Apostle Paul wrote that as we wait for the day of the Lord, we can still live confidently. Why? Because "God is faithful," and in Jesus Christ has called us into an everlasting relationship with him which cannot be broken. So, this Advent season, while the fullness of God's reign clearly is not yet here, the fullness of God's love for us already has been revealed and it is, to use the phrase, "more than all the numbers."

Charlevoix man bound over to circuit court bone underneath the left eye and tears under the right facing the judge.

Next to him sat his attorney, Gordon Boydston. Defense called no witnesses and was surprised to see a third charge after the judge asked the prosecution if they planned to add the attempted driving away based on Webster's testimony.

She said that the keys had been placed in the ignition and partially turned while she had been away from the van.

Webster said there were no valuables in the van because she had cleaned it out to take it for repairs the day before.

After Sarasin was arrested, Webster identified him in a police lineup. The other woman, however, who came home from walking the dog, could not identify Sarasin as being the man inside the home.

The three charges Sarasin is facing are punishable by up to five years in prison. He was bound over to circuit court, which means that judge May decided there was probable cause that Sarasin had committed the crimes for which he's charged.

A $10,000 cash or surety bond was continued. Sarasin will be arraigned in circuit court later this month.

Real trees rate No. 1

- Continued from page 1-

taking home to his four children. He said he's confident that the tree will be full.

The greatest quality of his tree — it's real.

"It's gotta be a real tree," he said, noting the pine scent. "That's what Christmas is all about."

He also noted that the tree had a nice tip to hold the angel topper and that it won't be cramped in his home.

"It can't be too tall," he said, "it will touch the roof."

Katy Conlan and her father, Tom, found a bushy tree that fit the height limitations of their living room — seven-and-a-half feet.

Larry Levengood, who helps sell trees each year during the Lion's fund-raiser, has grown accustomed to helping people pick a tree. He's observed that the size of the tree chosen can be connected to who's doing the shopping.

"Typically, the male is the one who has to carry it," he said. "So, he picks out the smallest tree."

Other shoppers are more choosy.

"The wife stands up every tree in the place and the husband stands back and rolls his eyes," Levengood added.

In addition to watching shoppers inspect the greenery, Levengood and the other Lions give advice on helping the tree keep its needles and explain the differences in tree types.

Lion Traver Wood describes the Douglas Fir as "huggable." The Blue Spruce has sharper, harder needles.

"If you're the person who does the light hanging, it's a lot less dangerous," he said of a fir.

Once the decision is made, Lions load the tree into the family vehicle and bid farewell to another tree, another shopper — until next Christmas season, when people start the shopping process over.

Retailers expect big sales this season

Michigan retailers have double-digit expectations for the upcoming holiday shopping season.

Three of every four retailers across the state — 75 percent — expect increased sales over last year's season, according to the annual Michigan Retailers Association pre-holiday survey, conducted jointly with the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago. Sales will increase by an average of 13 percent, the retailers project.

"Michigan retailers believe this will be a good shopping season, certainly much stronger than last year," said Larry Meyer, CEO of the Michigan Retailers Association and former Director of the Michigan Department of Commerce.

"Although there are five fewer shopping days between Thanksgiving and Christmas, we believe shoppers will be out in force. The economy continues to perform well and our state is enjoying record low unemployment."

Retailers are looking for a strong season after last year's disappointing holiday performance.

Heading into last year's holidays, 78 percent of retailers were forecasting increased sales, with gains averaging 12 percent. Those gains never materialized, however, and only 42 percent ended up reporting increases. Gains averaged two percent.

In 1994, 78 percent of retailers projected increases averaging 11 percent. Actual sales were close to projections, with 68 percent reporting increases. Gains averaged 12 percent.

For the 1996 holiday season, jewelers are the most optimistic group-97 percent expect to increase sales. They are followed by gift store retailers, 84 percent, and electronics and computer retailers and general merchandise retailers, 75 percent.

The Michigan Retailers Association has 4,400 retail business members who operate more than 8,000 stores across the state.

Kappa Sigma Sorority Charlevoix Home Tour co-chairman, Cyndie Lieberman (far left) and Dianna Phillips, chairman, visited Charlevoix Area Hospital's birthing center recently to present a check for $5,440, which paid for a biliblanket photo therapy system for newborns and a PCA pump for patients to self-administer pain medication. Mary Terryberry, supervisor of the birthing center, receives the biliblanket equipment as Richard Krueger, hospital president, looks on.

The weather has taken this stand-up snowman and melted him to the ground. With the weather fluctuating between warm and cold, many of these icy creations are looking for trains to take them further north, until their preferred frigid winter sets in.

Home tour proceeds help hospital

New babies and patients requiring pain relief at Charlevoix Area Hospital will benefit from last summer's Kappa Sigma Sorority Charlevoix Home Tour.

Dianna Phillips, tour chairman, and Cyndie Lieberman, co-chairman and next year's chairman, visited Charlevoix Area Hospital last week to check out their "purchases" of a biliblanket device and a PCA pump totaling $5,440.

The biliblanket photo therapy system is used when an infant is born with a condition known as hyperbilirubinemia, which is an excessive amount of bilirubin (the pigment in bile) in the blood. It causes the infant to be jaundiced and, in extreme cases, can cause brain damage.

Mary Terryberry, Charlevoix Area Hospital birthing center supervisor, said, "The wonderful thing about this new equipment is that it can be used continuously, providing uninterrupted treatment while the baby is being fed or with the mother." Formerly, babies were laid under a light and received intermittent treatment. Now babies "wear" a small pad hooked to a portable device.

"Our moms will love it," Terryberry said.

A PCA pump is used to allow patients to self-administer pain medication on an as-needed basis. These are used for patients in all nursing units of the hospital.

"We continue to be grateful to Kappa Sigma, all the volunteers, and the homeowners who allow their homes to be included on the tour," Richard Krueger, hospital president, said. "This event takes an enormous amount of planning and organization, and we are so thankful to everyone for making the hospital a beneficiary of all their hard work."

The total amount contributed was $8,440 with other area organizations sharing in the proceeds.

Sears owner, Joe Trojanek, sweeps away dust created by the recent expansion of his M-66 store Thursday. After nearly four months of squeezing into part of the store during construction, Sears is spreading out into its 6,220 square feet of sales space.

Construction ends at Sears

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

The construction squeeze came before the elbow room. But Sears Roebuck and Co. is spreading out.

The store, located across from Kmart on M-66, is almost finished with an expansion that will take its square footage of service area from 3,800 to 6,220.

"In Sears terminology, we've gone from an extra small to a large," said store owner, Joe Trojanek.

With the additional space, the store is adding exercise and built-in cooking equipment. Also, the lines previous found in the store are expanding. Appliances account for a major portion of the sales in Charlevoix.

Construction began Aug. 28, and the store has remained open for business daily. Work should have been finished by Nov. 1. However, Saturday's completion of the tiling brings the store close to an end of the construction phase.

Trojanek said he didn't want construction flowing into the Christmas shopping season, but he's plowing through the season anyway. All construction is expected to be finished by Saturday, Dec. 15, leaving the store with nine shopping days to Christmas and a new batch of goods filling the space.

Trojanek said he is expanding because he needs a larger selection of products in the store, which carries major household purchases.

"When you're spending that kind of money, it's hard to buy it from a picture," he said. "You'd like to touch it and kick the tires."

Sears has been a part of Charlevoix since 1968. Trojanek bought the store in 1989. Four years later, the corporation underwent major changes, closing catalog operations within individual stores. Many locations closed and mail order began to go directly from the company to homes.

Sears developed dealer stores to bring the corporation back to rural America, where it began.

The changes have been good to Trojanek. Having products available for customer inspection and fewer Sears stores in the area has helped increase business enough to justify the addition.

"Running out of room is a nice problem to have," Trojanek said, referring to his customers as extremely loyal.

Trojanek is now concentrating on decorating his new store more than decorating his Christmas tree. Merchandise will be put in rows for easy customer inspection as the countdown to Christmas draws to a close.

"The goods are already on the way to fill the store," he said.

Business hours are 9 a.m.-6 p.m. Monday-Thursday and Saturday and 11 a.m.-4 p.m. Sunday. For more information, call 547-9945.

Charlevoix skiers train at Olympic camp

Tiffany Fisher and Troy Smith, of Charlevoix, have just returned from an eight-day Junior Olympic Development Camp in Breckenridge, Colo., for the Hurricane Racing Team. They also trained with the Hurricanes in August for three weeks at Mt. Hood in Oregon.

Both skiers have competed for more than three years in the Central United States Ski Association program for the Hurricane Racing Team, and train locally at Boyne Mountain and Boyne Highlands.

The Hurricanes are coached by Bob Vial, of Boyne City.

Tiffany is the daughter of Tim and Tori Fisher and will ski as a freshman on the Charlevoix High School ski team.

Troy is the son of Steve and Mary Lou Smith, and is in the eighth-grade at Charlevoix Middle School.

Troy competed in the Junior Olympics in Vail, Colo., last year. He will be skiing on the middle school ski team.

Rayder basketball gets underway

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Coach Jim Kanine hopes an infusion of new faces will help solve what may be the Rayders basketball team's most pressing problem. Who will score?

Last year's squad failed to remedy that problem, having only three regulars who averaged more than five points a game, stumbling to a 5-16 record, 3-9 in Lake Michigan Division play.

The fact that their top returning scorers, Ben Owens and Steve Carland average only nine points between them leave many to wonder if Kanine will be bringing in the Fonz to teach the lads something about the fine art of scoring.

Instead, Kanine will plug two promising sophomores into the lineup. Matt McClellan and Jim Kanine, the coach's son, will make the coach a little less queasy about his team's offense.

"We'll be better on offense with those five because now we have more people who can touch the ball and do things with it," the coach said.

When things are not rolling for the starting five, Kanine does a deep bench to call on for help. Sean Smith, Matt Jacobs, T.J. Carey and Sean Kimble all will log quality minutes as the season grows into the winter. However, Kimble is suspended from play for the first four games.

"It makes a big difference if you got people who can come into the game and create things," Kanine said, assessing his reserves. "You want to notice them and have them be aggressive."

A smallish team, only Kimble stands taller than 6-foot-2-inches. The Rayders will have to do their best when battling for rebounds. The key for Kanine is just to be competitive and hustle for the boards. After that, it's a wonder if the two sophomores can provide enough punch to get the Rayders back to the .500 mark.

"They are up here to play, not pad the roster," Kanine said.

If they can play as advertised, then more than five wins should come Charlevoix's way.

The varsity boys' basketball season kicked off Tuesday. The next home game is 7 p.m. Friday against Rogers City.

3-on-3 champs: Charlevoix division champions from the Michigan Basketball Academy's tournament held in Traverse City over Thanksgiving weekend.

Team Charlevoix is (front) Shawn McDonough and (back, from left) Jim Shepherd and Keith Daly. The team was coached by Frank Shepherd.

Mail carrier ushers in new age

By Geoffrey Reynolds
Courier columnist

The process of delivering the U.S. mail is approaching yet another distinct change, and I don't mean another price increase of the first class stamp.

In the near future customers of the United States Postal Service will be able, for a nominal fee, to send their mail electronically with an official electronic stamp from the United States Postal Service. While this may seem redundant because of the fine delivery process currently being used, this process will enable mail delivery in minutes instead of days. But this will not be the first time Charlevoix has been witness to a history making event.

Another first came in 1912 with the appointment of what is thought to be the United States' first Native American chief mail carrier. Many Charlevoixians remember him as Daniel McSauby.

McSauby's title of chief of the local Odawa people came with his birthright to the A-mi-ca-sau-be (submerging beaver) family name and its status brought to Charlevoix in 1855. In that year McSauby's grandfather, Louis McSauby, relocated to Charlevoix from the Kalamazoo Valley because of encroaching settlers and government treaties in that region.

Upon his arrival the elder McSauby claimed much of the land eastward from Lake Michigan and north of what is now Division Street. He built his home, a simple log dwelling, in the shallow ravine at the bottom of the sand dune that still bears his family's name. It was also in that year and in that home that Daniel's father, Alexander McSauby, was born and eventually raised. Throughout his life Louis was an active leader, both locally and nationally, in land, fishing and hunting rights of the local Odawa people.

Alexander McSauby became heir to the title of chief with the Oct. 13, 1897, death of his father. During his lifetime, Alexander was the secretary of Charlevoix Township and the local longshoremen's association. He later purchased land and built a home on Waller Road around 1880, and their raised a family. This home and the adjoining land were sold in 1897. The house he built stood until 1968. After a prosperous life, Alexander died on July 4, 1907, at the age of 53.

With the death of his father Daniel McSauby, born on May 10, 1892, became the titled chief of the local Odawa people. While the title had lost most of its past meaning, the honorary title was nevertheless placed on Daniel by local Charlevoix inhabitants. He attended Charlevoix schools until leaving in the eleventh-grade to support his aging mother. In 1912, the Charlevoix Post Office postmaster decided to add more mail carriers to its staff and gave interested local inhabitants the government test for postal workers. Along with several high school graduates, Daniel, now 20, took the test and scored the highest. It was at this point that he became, what is thought to be the first Native American chief mail carrier in United States' history.

After receiving the appointment, Daniel's first delivery was made to the M.A. Levinson clothing store, now Trademark Clothiers. The post office at that time was located in what is now the Charlevoix Abstract and Engineering office. From that day Daniel delivered the mail to the residents of the north side until 1920.

Daniel McSauby died Nov. 26, 1975, at the age of 83. While his legacy is unknown even to the United States Postal Service, it is still carried on today in the names of his descendants and many Charlevoixian's memories.

The Charlevoix Historical Society will be gathering written information and oral testimonies concerning Daniel McSauby and his historically important employment with the United States Postal Service. Anyone interested in participating should contact executive director, Betsy Reynolds, at (616) 547-0373 for more information.

Santa's elf helps needy children

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Anne Staley has turned her love for gadding garage sales into an outreach to needy children. She rescues stuffed animals, dolls, books and games from the seller's junk pile.

"I'm so glad they're going to homes where the kids are somewhat deprived," the 84-year-old said. "It makes you feel good that you might bring a smile to some of them."

Most of the children Staley helps are those whose families receive a Christmas basket through Charlevoix's Community Christmas Project. This year, about 127 families will receive Christmas dinner and gifts.

Staley takes the stuffed critters and sprucees them up with soapy water and the scrub from a toothbrush. She combs their hair and adds the color of crisp ribbons around their necks. Small tears in fur or dolls' clothing are darned.

Finally, the smile on the children's faces is previewed by Staley. The sight of the mini friends

Arrest made for six Charlevoix business break-ins

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

A 25-year-old Alpena man has been arrested for breaking into six Charlevoix businesses recently.

Kevin Shane Lancewicz is lodged in the Alpena county jail awaiting sentencing for felonies there.

According to Charlevoix County Sheriff, George T. Lasater, Lancewicz will be brought to Charlevoix to face local charges later this week.

The break-ins involve at least six felony counts, allegedly committed during the breaking and entering of Seeley Printing, Village Inn Pizza, Juilleret's Restaurant, Chee Peng, The Rainbow Shoppe and most recently, Marvin's Gardens. Attempted safe cracking is listed among the charges.

Money was stolen from most of the businesses. Merchandise and office equipment was also broken and thrown around.

Lasater said that Lancewicz confessed to the crimes when a local detective was in Alpena questioning him last week.

According to the sheriff, tracks were followed from Marvin's Gardens, which was broken into Dec. 12. The tracks headed to a local motel where Lancewicz had been registered.

Police later discovered that Lancewicz was being held in the Alpena county jail.

Gary Marvin's trust has been violated.

As owner of Marvin's Gardens, he has left merchandise sitting outside for years.

"With my type of business, I always trust people," he said. "You can't always lock up plants and trees and shrubs."

Marvin has intended to fence in the perimeter of the nursery, but just hasn't rushed into it.

Since having his business broken into and robbed last week, the Charlevoix man's plans are no longer stalled.

Nowland Lake residents want tri-country landfill closed

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

A smelly issue nosed itself to the forefront of what otherwise had been a loose and inconsequential county commission meeting Dec. 11.

Members of the Hidden Valley Resort voiced their opposition to the future expansion of Waste Management's Cedar Ridge landfill site.

Cedar Ridge is located in Eveline Township, adjacent to Nowland Lake. The landfill has been used since the 1960s. Waste Management purchased it in 1987.

According to Stephen Grove, president of Hidden Valley Shores Association, developers had promised in 1990 that the landfill's life expectancy was only 6-10 years. It would then be capped and a site in another country, perhaps Emmet or Antrim, would be used.

As 1997 approaches, it appears that the landfill will not be capped, and that it will be expanded by about 37 acres to remain a stigma in the backyard of homeowners near Nowland Lake.

"We need to state at some point in time that this will be capped, or they'll just reopen it again," said Paul Lindberg, owner of Golden Eye farms, a new housing development about a half-mile from the landfill. "We have done our share and it's time for other counties to participate in this."

The landfill operates through a tri-county agreement between Charlevoix, Emmet and Antrim, which provides for the easy flow of solid waste throughout the counties and eventual relocation of the landfill to another location within the pact. However, the document is short on specifics, and Nowland Lake homeowners are asking commissioners to discuss the issue, and maybe show some muscle with the other counties towards fulfilling their part of the bargain.

Even though Lindberg would like to see the landfill capped, he said that if the landfill must stay, it's okay with him, as long as some improvements are made.

"Do a little beautification, and shield it," he said. "If you can't see it, then it's not as much of a problem." He suggested foliage and large trees to fence the landfill.

Others are not as temperate. They point to the large seagull population, which wades in the landfill, then in the lake creating rashes of swimmer's itch, constant noise of bulldozers, the smell on a breezy day, overall debris, and potential run-off into the lake as reasons why the landfill should cease to exist in Charlevoix County.

Don Pizzurro, Waste Management division president, said the desired expansion includes plans to better shield the landfill. The expansion, which hasn't officially been requested, involves adding 37 acres to the area permitted for disposal. The landfill property covers about 120 acres, 40 of which are currently approved for use. The expansion plan includes two areas, about 20 acres and 17 acres to be added onto each end of the land-pleases her, too, as she looks at each toy after touch-ups. A few animals — including a gray mouse in a Santa suit — stay at her house, keeping her company in her living room on Prospect Street.

Charlevoix woman fixes up furry friends

More than 85 toys were given to the project this year, and more than 100 last Christmas. Others are fixed up and given to the Women's Resource Center in Petoskey.

But none, no not one, of the toys get by Staley if they don't pass inspection during her summertime collections. Her ventures begin when winter weather breaks each May and continue through September. Most Friday and Saturday mornings, Staley can be found inspecting tables at sales along Charlevoix streets.

"Some of them are just beautiful," she said. "I can't believe they're being sold at a garage sale. The younger generation, they don't hang onto things like my generation did. You can find some nice things at garage sales."

In a day when many children are absorbed into computers and video games, stuffed animals and dolls don't always become valued friends. Staley hopes that her playthings will find a warm place in the arms of a loving child.

"Those little tots can be so brokenhearted," she said, noting that many of the children at the resource center come from broken homes.

With maternal instinct, Staley makes sure that none of her toys have small objects that can be pulled off and swallowed by the children.

Although Staley is a Charlevoix native, she admits to never having seen the kind of needs in her hometown that are being met through the Christmas project. She now knows that the needs are there. And though she still doesn't observe with her eyes, she does with her hands what she can to ease suffering through the gift of giving.

Greg and Lindy Smith won first place in this year's residential lighting contest for their district — in town, north of Bridge Street. Their house is located at 520 Michigan Ave. For more residential and business lighting contest results, see page 13.

Events in brief

Shopping spree winners announced

Winners of the Christmas Open House Bullseye contest include shoppers from three Michigan cities.

Sandy Boss, of Charlevoix, Mary Kerscher, of Grand Blane, Edie Kuhn, of Grand Rapids, and Ann Peterson, of Charlevoix each won a $100 shopping spree at any of the stores that participated in the promotion during the open house Dec. 7.

The winners were drawn at the chamber of commerce Dec. 11 from a mass of entries that were collected from the 33 participating businesses.

Big Rock Point still shut down

Consumers Power Company's Big Rock Point nuclear power plant will be out of service for an estimated 30 to 45 days so that repairs can be made to the turbine.

While operators were preparing to return the plant to service on Dec. 11, testing determined that the turbine was out of balance. The plant was immediately shut down to permit an inspection of the turbine. During the inspection, plant employees discovered a small piece of metal that may have come from a turbine blade or associated turbine systems.

The turbine cover will be removed this week to allow employees to determine the extent of repairs necessary. The cause of the failure is under investigation.

Big Rock Point was the world's first high power-density boiling water reactor and a research site for the nuclear power industry. The plant has generated electricity since 1962 and was named a Nuclear Historic Landmark by the American Nuclear Society.

Handmade dollhouse makes money for scouts

Boy Scouts Troop 16, which includes south Charlevoix, Ellsworth and Atwood are auctioning off a handmade doll house at Sears of Charlevoix.

The house is on display at Sears and silent bids are being taken.

Scoutmaster, John Wilkenson, said the troop made the house as a fund-raiser for camping equipment. The house is about 34 inches tall, has stained glass windows, two floors and a porch. It was designed for full-sized Barbies.

City board of appeals meeting tonight

The city board of appeals will meet at 7 p.m. today for a public hearing on a request for a height variance from Harbor Industries, 107 Airport Drive.

The variance is being sought for the construction of a government-required dust collection system, according to city records. The system includes a dust storage bin, which holds saw dust until it can be recycled. The bin is 37 feet, 5 inches tall and will be added to a cyclone that is 9 feet tall, for an overall height of 46 feet, 5 inches. This would require a 16 foot, 5 inch variance.

Also, the board will decide on three requests for variance extensions for Weathervane Inn, 106 Pine River Lane, Larry Sullivan, 222 Sherman St., and Richard Vance, 600 Park Ave.

Appreciation plaques given to city residents

Three residents were honored by the city council Monday with plaques in recognition for their service to the community: Melvin Renaud for serving on the planning commission from 1991 to 1996, Barbara MacArthur for 10 years on the Shade Tree Commission, ending this month, and John Cross, III, for his years as as a city council member, from 1991-1996.

School district looking to buy land on M-66

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

The school board voted unanimously to pursue buying property on M-66.

The long-awaited land purchase, whose true location is still being kept a secret until the sellers sign the same document that superintendent Roberta Jackson and board secretary Larry Levengood now have authorization the sign, should go a long way towards improving the Charlevoix public school system.

"This site supports the long-range plan we have for the next 30 years, and has enough room for three schools," Jackson said.

A more centralized school system will be beneficial economically, according to Jackson, as schools can share facilities without having to bus students back and forth across downtown Charlevoix, This, she said, will especially be the case with the middle and high schools.

Of course, many think the land option is four months too late. One of the leading responses as to why the public voted down last fall's bond issue was that the board had yet to show voters where the new school would be built.

"It was loud and clear," Jackson said, noting that the board asked for too much at the polls and it was unable to show a plan of where the district was headed for the next 15 years.

> "This site supports the long-range plan we have for the next 30 years, and has enough room for three schools."
> — RobertaJackson, superintendent.

Board member Allen Telgenhof explained that a land purchase is a three-step process. Identifying the right piece of property, negotiating with the sellers and finally drafting the correct language for such a transaction.

"It's always the lawyers," Telgenhof, a lawyer himself, joked.

More seriously, Telgenhof admitted that the step which took the longest to complete was actually finding the piece of property. He said it was better to take as much time as they needed because of the importance of the matter.

Captain's Corner keeps growing

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Captain's Corner Shopping Center is growing bigger than originally planned. Expansion to Glen's Market and the back of the current Rite Aide was approved by city council Monday.

"Glen's got serious about expanding," said Jim Malewitz, of Performance Engineering, as he presented the changes to council.

According to the plans, Glen's will add a compression room, which will be enclosed to minimize noise at the back of store. A new loading area will be added to the rear and the main entrance expanded.

Glen's will be expanding into the current Rite Aide building when it moves to one of the anchor store locations within the strip.

The change at the front of the store is design to ease foot traffic among cars pulling up to pick up groceries, said Glen's representative, Ed Hunt. The walk-in entrance is being moved more to the east.

The addition square footage requires five more parking spaces and one more tree, which are being added.

The revised plan, according to zoning administrator, Kathleen Staton, does meet city zoning requirements.

The original development plan for the corner was approved by council Dec. 18, 1995. Since then, there have been three amendments approved, which include efforts to scale back development costs while making adjustments to the desires of store owners who have committed to renting business space.

In other business:

— Jeff Pines was appointed to the Zoning Board of Appeals for a term expiring Dec. 31, 1998; Steve Bennett and Marilyn Wilmot were appointed to the Planning Commission to terms expiring April 30, 1998.

There is still one opening on the board of review.

Development authority passes annual budget

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Charlevoix's Downtown Development Authority has $125,000 to spend, but most of its cash is going to lessen debt for Bridge Park.

A proposed 1997-98 budget was passed Dec. 11 during an authority meeting at city hall.

"We feel that we are conservative in our budgeted figures for the completion of the Bridge Park project. Hopefully, we will have some money left over when all is said and done," city manager, Mike Wiesner, told authority members in a memo.

In the coming year, the authority plans to spend an additional $73,000 to complete the total refurbishing that has happened at the park.

The $125,000 has been budgeted as a line item so the authority can continue with small projects while the authority pays for the $5 million worth of bonds for the park. The debt will be totally paid for in 2014, Wiesner said.

The authority has yet to decide how to spend what has been set aside for downtown projects this year. Whatever is chosen will be the last project or projects by the authority for some time. Wiesner said that in the near future, there won't be funding for anything other than normal operations.

Within the budget annually, the authority will be setting aside about $340,000 to cover its bond payments. There is also a $56,300 for the land contract which covers the public parking lot across from the post office. This payment decreases each year until it is completely paid for in 2000.

The authority's revenue is generated through taxes on property within the central business district, interest and rents, and a small amount of state shared revenue. Total collections for 1997-98 are proposed to be $555,300.

However, expenses are tallied at $746,267. More of the fund balance will be used to cover the difference in revenue generated and planned expanses. The fund balance grew as the authority planned the major project that was executed at Bridge Park. It reached more than $2 million while the project was on the drawing board.

Force fair charges: Check shopping sales receipts

EDITORIAL

Buyer beware.

Paying for Christmas gifts in Charlevoix is usually as easy as watching an employee punch in the price found on the sweater, battery-operated car, wrench set or even foot massager.

To most local stores, manually keying in prices is easy. But many large companies are using scanners that will ring in the price by the swipe of the tag.

Unfortunately, computers are only as reliable as the people who program them. Shoppers need to be on their guard when purchasing items at stores which use electronic scanners. Don't pay more for your gifts than is being advertised.

Michigan Attorney General, Frank Kelly, is investigating repeated errors by companies using the scanners. He warns shoppers to check prices at the register. Scanners are overcharging customers throughout the nation. And that quick shopping trip to Traverse City could end up costing more than the price tags are saying.

For every $1 that shoppers are charged under the marked price, they pay $4 more for products, Kelly said, noting that if the stores were losing money, the technology would be removed.

Most buyers will not take the time to check a long sales receipt, especially when Christmas preparations are pulling. We must watch out for over dipping into our checkbooks.

The attorney general has invested time into investigating the programming errors of the scanners. He's issued his warning and continues to be watchful. Now, it's our responsibility to take his findings and apply them to our lives.

If store managers can't keep sale and correct prices programmed into the computer, or develop a system for prompt corrections when shoppers report errors, the scanners haven't improved efficiency for businesses.

Store employees are responsible to make sure that advertised items leave their stores for the same price that was used to woo shoppers through the doors.

Not doing so is neglecting one of the greatest responsibilities of their position — fair and courteous service to customers.

Letters to the editor

Thanks to community for help with school craft day

Editor:

I wish to express my sincere thanks to the businesses in Charlevoix for their devoted support to the schools. This past weekend the elementary school sponsored the Santa Luncheon and Children Craft Making Workshop. This was our first year, as in previous years it was done by the local sororities.

The businesses that we approached for donations not only gave us what we asked for but offered whatever else we needed. I'd particularly like to thank Pizza Hut, Little Caesars, Burger King, McDonalds, Glen's, Olesons, Don's IGA, Friske Orchard, Kmart, Rite Aid and Ben Franklin. A few others made donations toward tickets for needy children.

I would also like to thank all of the volunteers who organized; worked, baked and cleaned up. Without these supportive helpers this day could not have been possible.

It was truly a wonderful, worthwhile day seeing the children excited about the crafts they made and anxiously waiting for and finally talking to Santa.

I would like to thank Ted Felter and Mary Shaver for making sure that Mr. & Mrs. Santa Claus were there to greet the children. Also, a special thanks to Becky Blissett for playing piano and putting everyone in a festive mood.

The money raised by this event will go into the Elementary School Enrichment Fund to set up scholarships for needy children and to purchase supplies and equipment to enhance the program.

Again, thank you to everyone for the tremendous support. You all have succeeded in making Christmas brighter for many of the Charlevoix community's children.

Sincerely,
Lori Foster

Sports story should have been positive

Editor:

I am responding to Jamie MacMillan's "kick-off" article for the 1996-97 Rayder varsity basketball team. I was discouraged rather than encouraged when reading it, as it seemed negative, sarcastic, and a "downer." I think our hometown newspaper should be upbeat, positive, and hopeful, especially when writing about a bunch of high school kids who spend innumerable hours preparing.

In conclusion, please get the names correct, and report the facts more objectively. I'm still hopeful that our hometown newspaper will no longer be nicknamed "The Charlevoix Discourage."

Now I clearly understand why people carry on about kitchen fragrances at this time of year. Anise cookies, cinnamon rolls, chocolate rum balls, turkeys stuffed with apples and chestnuts. English grandma's roast beef and Yorkshire pudding, Norwegian grandma's herring in wine sauce and German grandma's "stollen." Wunderbar!

These once-a-year treats still have many American families passionately choosing sides as to whether one really needs to have mashed potatoes along with stuffing, pureed turnips, creamed corn and clover leaf dinner rolls, as opposed to sweet potatoes topped with marshmallows.

Without a microwave, Cuisinart, blender, freezer, dishwasher, coffee maker, and garbage disposal — cooking from scratch was then, and still is, a big deal.

But what about the rest of the year? A friend of mine from Plains, Ga., and no relation to the Carters, gave me a cookbook to peruse, "Plains Pot-Pourri" dated 1976. The only thing French is the title. One whole section was devoted to recipes by every female relative of former president, Jimmy Carter; his wife, his mother, his aunt and his cousins. I use the word recipe loosely. This crowd could not have survived without canned cream of mushroom soup, canned tuna, canned pineapple, Worchester sauce, catsup and mayonnaise. Jello was right up there as well.

Not only did the folks in Plains support the canning industry, but the rest of the country did, too. It wasn't until the 50s that we were introduced to selected frozen foods by Birds Eye. Before that, people only ate produce that was in season. Lettuce in the spring, strawberries in the summer, apples in the fall, and raisins and chestnuts in the winter.

Home canning in Ball glass jars of meat, fish, vegetables and fruit was popular everywhere. The one exception, often referred to in local Charlevoix history books, was the delicacy, oysters. We read of frequent "oyster parties" in this area during the cold winter months, which were always well attended. It seems that oysters, packed in ice, were brought here by railroads from the eastern shores. Today they are still popular. We have an Oyster House on Bridge Street that serves oysters the year 'round.

We may wonder what grandma of yore would say if she were invited to one of our Christmas dinners today? She may well recognize the familiar spicy fragrances wafting from our contemporary kitchens, but what about the rest of the year? How does pasta salad compare to potato salad made from scratch? What about fat-free Danish compared to apple pie? Chances are she didn't know a calorie from a cantaloupe and would be puzzled by the current popularity of tacos and nachos.

Think back and try to recall, if you can, the recipes back then on your family's dinner table. Would your children consider them yummy or yucky today? For sure, it will make interesting dinner table conversation during the holidays!

Grand Traverse Band makes move

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Like their ancestors before them, the Grand Traverse Band of Ottawa and Chippewa Indians are on the move.

However, instead of packing necessities into canoes and paddling the shores of Lake Michigan to spots unknown, the band will be packing boxes of office supplies into moving vans, and trucking them to their new location in Charlevoix at 06439 M-66 across the street from Wolohan lumber.

The present location on U.S. 31, across from the airport, just isn't cutting it. Simply put, its too tiny.

"It just gets so cramped around here, it's hard to do community functions," said Janet Stainbrook, rural health coordinator for the band. She pointed out that at this year's Halloween gathering, 75 children and tables of refreshments had the place ready to burst.

Christina Dobrowolski

Christina Dobrowolski, 73, of Ellsworth, died Dec. 7, 1996, at Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey.

A memorial service was held at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 10, at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Charlevoix. The Rev. Thomas Neis will officiate.

Mrs. Dobrowolski was born April 23, 1923, in Innerleithen, Scotland, the daughter of William Oliver and Helen (Simpson) Oliver.

She graduated from Business College in Edinburgh, Scotland, and on Sept. 6, 1941, she married Tadeusz Dobrowolski in Glasgow, Scotland. In 1952, they moved to Long Island, New York, where they made their home until moving to Bridgeport, Conn., in 1954. Later that year, they moved to East Detroit where she worked as assistant bank manager for Public (now Manufacturer's) National Bank in Detroit. She attended Macomb Community College for two years studying pre-law.

In 1974, the Dobrowolskis moved to East Jordan where she joined her husband as a restaurateur, owning and operating the Jordan Inn. They retired to Ellsworth in 1985.

Mrs. Dobrowolski was a member of St. Mary's Catholic Church in Charlevoix and the Ellsworth Senior Citizens.

She is survived by her husband, Tadeusz, of Ellsworth; two daughters, Wanda Steely and her husband, Dan, of Fayetteville, Ga., and Helena Hall and her husband, Dennis, of Sunrise, Fla.; a son, Ted Dobrowolski and his wife, Janet, of Charlevoix; four grandchildren, Chris, Adam and Kyle Dobrowolski and Andrea Hallup; a brother, William Oliver Jr. and his wife, Nettie, of Edinburgh, Scotland.

Memorial contributions may be made to the American Heart Association or to the Arthritis Foundation. Envelopes for memorials are available at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix, where arrangements were made.

Lisa K. Harrington

Lisa K. Harrington, 29, of Hayes Township, Charlevoix County, died Monday, Dec. 16, 1996, at Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey.

Funeral was 10:30 a.m. Wednesday, Dec. 18, at the Stone Funeral Home in Petoskey with the Rev. Steve Beigle of Trinity Missionary Church officiating. Burial will take place in Greenwood Cemetery, Petoskey.

Mrs. Harrington was born April 3, 1967, the daughter of James and Janice (Johnson) Harvey. She grew up and attended school in Charlevoix, graduating from Charlevoix High School in 1985.

On Nov. 25, 1989, she married Timothy Harrington in Petoskey. They have made their home in Petoskey, Grand Rapids and since April 1996 have been living in Hayes Township, Charlevoix County.

She had been employed at Subway Submarine Shop in Petoskey.

Lisa loved music. Her faith was very important to her, and she was a loving mother. She was a member of Trinity Missionary Church in Petoskey.

Survivors include her husband, Timothy; one daughter, Kristin Lee Harrington, at home; parents, James and Janice Harvey, of Charlevoix; and one sister, Paula Burwell, of Charlevoix.

The family suggests memorial contributions be made to Trinity Missionary Church.

Visitation was 7-9 p.m. Dec. 17, at Stone Funeral Home.

DNR report on fall deer harvest

The Department of Natural Resources estimates that 177,000 antlered and 102,000 antlerless deer were harvested during Michigan's firearm deer hunting season, the state's fifth-largest harvest on recorded.

This was also Michigan's safest deer season ever, with 15 accidents including one fatality and 14 non-fatal incidents.

The 1996 firearm harvest was exceeded by the record takes in 1989 (334,940), 1995 (319,290), 1990 (316,400), 1988 (294,310) and 1991 (293,710).

Almost 700,000 hunters took to the field during the Nov. 15-30 hunt.

There was also a 20 percent increase in the Northern Lower Peninsula antlerless harvest over 1995.

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Bruce Hamilton
Community Church of God

I think Paul Harvey must have someone on his staff that he has do nothing but scan the newspapers and other media sources for strange and unusual events. He mentioned an item on Saturday that nearly sent me off the road into a ditch with laughter. It seems that there is a company in Illinois marketing a new men's cologne called "Whiff." That ought to be a tip off in and of itself but there's more.

Believe it or not, the secret ingredient in "whiff" is essence of skunk. Now please, somebody tell me what man in his right mind wants to smell like a skunk? This outfit must be serious though. They even have their own toll free number for ordering. But all of that did not get to me enough to send my driving into a dither (wait for it!).

What got to me was when Paul Harvey said, "It would be a great gift for women to get ... for their ex-husbands! Page Three ..."

Have you ever noticed how good we are at keeping track of people's wrongdoing and shortcomings in life? I know folks who live by the motto, "don't get mad, get even." More say that revenge is sweet, but do they really think about its aftereffects?

If you're going to take an accounting of some things in life, why not take an accounting of the good things? Why not spend a little time reflecting on all the messes the Lord has managed to save us from in spite of ourselves? Why not think about the folks who stepped in and helped you when you least expected it? Why not add up the people in your life that have made a real difference in the things you have been able to learn and do?

The world kind of slows down just a bit at Christmas time anyway. Haven't you noticed that? The news shows take on a different tone. While work may lay some heavy loads on you, there's a little more of the proverbial "peace on earth, good will towards men" because even the stiffest most formal person you can imagine knows there's something special about Christmas. So why not take advantage of it all? Why not use the time to look at your life and instead of dwelling on all the pain, aggravation or frustration that you've faced during the year, look at some of the good things that have happened to you?

Mary and Joseph could have said "no" when the Lord spoke to their hearts about being parents for his Son. Aren't you glad they didn't? All kinds of good things have been made possible for you and I because the couple did not let life discourage them and they trusted the voice of God that echoed within them.

All kinds of good things lay ahead of you if you will have faith, even in the face of tough times, that the blessings of the Lord lay just around the bend.

New location offers safe parking games, activities, or anything really fun," she said, mentioning that in their new facility comfortable capacity will be for more than 150 people.

The new building will also give the band 15 offices, up from their present number of two, four barrier-free bathrooms, front and back exits, and paved parking all around the building. Stainbrook especially likes the controlled parking it will create. Their lot now is full of crater-like potholes, and being off of a highway can be dangerous.

"We won't have the ongoing traffic, and especially with the youth groups and all the children, we won't have to worry about someone getting hit."

> "We won't have the on-going traffic, and especially with the youth groups and all the children, we won't have to worry about someone getting hit."
> — Janet Stainbrook, rural health coordinator

In all, the band's services will be improved because of the size of their new location. Green space in the back will provide a play area for children. Swing sets and a basketball hoop may be installed. The extra office space will give privacy and a dose of confidentially for their substance abuse counseling. The kitchen provides space to prepare and warm up foods for their community meetings. And the band will be providing better health services.

Beyond this move, the band is planning another, more final move to a facility on Ranney road between Charlevoix and East Jordan.

The 87-acre facility will include housing, an elders' complex and a community building. The development could be ready by fall. But the band is looking at the interim building as an $350,000 investment that is part of a greater master plan.

Stainbrook said there is no guarantee that the Ranney Road complex will be ready on time. And the band plans on maintaining ownership of it, and turning it into their health services building.

"This way we won't have to transport our people to Sutton's Bay, Traverse City and even Sault Ste. Marie for services we could be offering here," she said.

The band is planning an open house at their new location for 11 a.m. Friday, Jan. 18. More details will be released as the open house nears.

Developers never promised Cedar Ridge landfill would be closing fill. The sites would be tied together for better aesthetics and run-off control.

Pizzurro said developers' promises that the landfill was closing in the mid1990s never originated with his company.

"We never would have bought it on the pretense that it would close in a few years," he said, in a telephone interview Monday.

Residents claim that Waste Management offered to pay $500,000 to clean up run-off, should it occur. Instead of appeasing homeowners, it irked them.

"When you're talking about ruining 128 acres of a lake and a lot of high priced homes, then that money isn't even going to nick it," John Yaroch told commissioners.

Dawson Way, however, lauded the landfill as one of Charlevoix County's better attributes. Way is former owner of the landfill.

"As a result of Cedar Ridge, Charlevoix County has never spent a nickel on solid waste disposal," he said.

To move the landfill, the county would have to build a transfer station, and that, according to Way, would cost a lot of unnecessary money. He hinted that the problem doesn't lay with the landfill, but with homeowners who knowingly built on property in "the shadow of a landfill."

Pizzurro said relocating the landfill would mean starting from scratch, a move that would only be in the best interest of the minority.

Cedar Ridge brings in about $20,000 a year to Eveline Township, according to township supervisor David Willson. However, should the landfill be removed, he said the money would only slightly be missed, perhaps a road may not be finished as scheduled.

Still, it's money other townships don't have, and Willson isn't anxious to part with it. He does want to make sure that the landfill's services are not abused.

"I don't think it's quite right to have solid waste imported from faraway places like New York, Ohio, or even from downstate," he said, later noting that he was referring to a newspaper article about other states looking to ship waste elsewhere. Historically, Willson said that Waste Management has done a good job of cleaning up the landfill and covering the garbage.

"Nobody likes a landfill," he said. "But we all make garbage."

Pizzurro said that 90 percent of the garbage received at the landfill comes from Charlevoix, Emmet and Antrim counties. The rest of the waste comes in from three other area counties.

"There's a lot of landfills between here and New York and Canada," he said, noting that it's highly unlikely that Cedar Ridge would be a feasible site for the distant trash.

Still, some residents want to see an end to nearby land being used as a dumping ground.

"We're tired of lip service and just want to know when we can expect action or answers to our questions," Yaroch said.

"Just to close a landfill doesn't make it go away," Pizzurro said, noting that it still has to be maintained. "I don't know what they're hoping to gain just by closing the facility."

Commissioners will be discussing the landfill at their second meeting in January. The exact date and time of the meeting has yet to be announced.

Residential decorations lauded

It was truly a winter wonderland in Charlevoix when the Petunia Truck visited all registered homes and played Christmas music while the judges concentrated on making difficult decisions Thursday.

Nuclear plant employees give to Salvation Army

Employees of Consumers Power Company's Big Rock Point nuclear power plant contributed more than 150 toys and about $300 to the Salvation Army while at their annual holiday party. The event was held Dec. 6 at the Petoskey Holiday Inn. Admission to the party was an unwrapped gift or toy.

For the past nine years, plant employees have hosted a holiday celebration to benefit local families through the Salvation Army. As a result of these events, more than $8,300 and 875 toys and gifts have been donated to the Salvation Army. Toys and gifts donated will be matched with individual requests received by the organization. The money will be used to purchase food for Christmas baskets and additional toys.

Local McDonald's owners receive award

Bill and Marilyn Becker, franchise owners of the McDonald's restaurants in Bellaire, Charlevoix and Petoskey, recently received McDonald's Total Customer Satisfaction and Outstanding Restaurant awards.

The Total Customer Satisfaction Award recognizes the Beckers for creating a friendly atmosphere, anticipating customers' needs and providing impressive service in all areas of restaurant operations.

The Beckers' Petoskey restaurant, located at 1340 U.S. 31 North, received McDonald's Outstanding Restaurant Award. The award is designed to recognize those franchises, managers and restaurant teams doing an excellent job of impressing customers with fast, friendly and accurate service. Customers play a role in determining which restaurants receive awards by filling out customer response cards, and by participating in phone and in-restaurant surveys.

The McDonald's Grand Rapids Region (outstate) Co-op includes more than 260 restaurants operated by 50 franchises and McDonald's Corporation operators. The region's geographical boundaries span from the west side of Detroit to the east side of Benton Harbor and from Sault Ste. Marie south to the Indiana-Ohio border.

Business in brief

Health department shifts positions

District Health Department No. 3 is expanding its service area by two counties: Benzie and Leelanlau. All costs incurred by the department for services rendered will be reimbursed by the Benzie Leelanlau District Health Department.

Responsibilities of three employees have changed.

Linda Yaroch, R.N., has been appointed interim Leelanlau District Health Officer. She has been with the department's family health services division since 1989 and has been employed with the department since 1978.

She will continue to direct the department's dental health program. About 20 percent of Yaroch's time will be spent on local services with the majority going toward the new position.

Patricia Fralick, R.N., has been appointed family health division director, under which she will serve as a member of the department's administrative staff and will be responsible for directing the activities of the family division.

Residential housing construction up again

Michigan housing project starts are up 11.7 percent from October 1995 to October 1996, according to the Michigan Association of Home Builders.

"Michigan housing starts gained ground while housing starts nationwide dropped," said Rick Delamater, association president.

Fixed-rate mortgages fell to 7.86 percent in October from 8.28 percent in September, which is only slightly higher than they were a year ago. Lumber prices for 1,000 board feet of framing lumber dropped to $409 in October from $453 in September.

Alpena man admits to rash of Charlevoix break-ins

Alpena county jail.

Halverson said the man was believed to have left town shortly after the last break-in, and that he was traveling back and forth across the state during the crime spree. Arrests of this kind are difficult because suspects are not known to area officers and are not interacting with people from the community.

The man is believed to have been alone during the Marvin's Gardens break-in. However, that may not be the case with the downtown businesses. An investigation is ongoing.

"We're still putting things together," Lasater said, who noted how closely officers from city and county agencies are working together on the case. "We're all the same community," Halverson said.

More evidence is being looked into at the Michigan State Police crime lab in Grayling, including fingerprints, Lasater said. Although there has been one arrest for the downtown break-ins, Halverson said he doesn't believe that the Alpena man is responsible for the residential or vehicle break-ins that have been on the rise.

"We do not believe this individual had anything to do with the car thefts," Halverson said.

Investigations on those open cases also continue.

"Our job is never done," Halverson added.

Lancewicz's arrest is being credited to the cooperation of officers within various agencies.

"If both agencies hadn't cooperated, it wouldn't have been solved as quickly," Lasater said of the Charlevoix Police Department.

Business owner adds steel doors to prevent future crime

"We know that the area is changing," he said, mentioning his plans to also add steel doors and steel frames. "This just makes it happen all the faster."

The outside isn't even where the thief struck. He pried the back door open, stole the day's cash and tampered with the computer system.

Knowing that an Alpena man has confessed to the crime and will face charges for several Charlevoix break-ins doesn't help Marvin relax. It just got him some items back that had been thrown into nearby snowbanks when the man told police where to find them.

The steel will still frame the nursery's entrances for safe keeping.

According to Charlevoix Police Chief, Dennis Halverson, everyone should be on guard against crime.

"Business or residential, you should still maintain a level of personal and professional safety for yourselves and your property," he said. "It should never be out of your mind."

Halverson said that "break-in type of people" usually follow patterns and they look for places that offer the least amount of resistance.

The chief suggests that businesses and home owners check their buildings for security.

"Crime prevention is a joint effort with the residential and commercial communities," he said. "We're more than willing to review security upon request."

The police department checks summer homes while the owners are away and offers free checks of buildings to help owners find the weak points in security.

Scarce land cost school board times

Jackson offered another take as to why the process took the board longer than expected.

"Available land is scarce in Charlevoix, and it was a challenge to neogiate with sellers who were not in town," she said. "Still, it took longer than anticipated."

As for the cloak of secrecy yet to be shed about precisely where the land is, Telgenhof said that a private investor could catch wind of the offer and in turn offer the seller more money than the board. For the board to match that offer, more taxpayers' money would be needed.

"There is no reason to believe that that would actually happen, but there's no real reason on the board's part to leave us open to that," he said.

Added Jackson, "It's not good practice to announce things before it's official."

It's only half-official, but the board has done their signing. Jackson hopes that at the board's next meeting on Monday, Jan. 6, the site be announced to the public with a tangible site plan on the table.

Safe snowmobile season encouraged

Another snowmobile season is fast approaching, and the Department of Natural Resources is encouraging snowmobilers to get this season off to a smooth, safe start.

There were 45 snowmobile fatalities last winter in Michigan. To prevent that from happening again, the DNR is urging snowmobilers to think about safety even before fueling up. Tops on the safe rider list should be a pledge to leave the alcohol alone until riding is done for the day, along with a resolve to ride prudently. This means slowing down and saving the racing for the track.

Also be sure your registration is up to date, and that you have your snowmobile trail permit.

Three things have changed with the trail permit this year.

1. The Snowmobile law was amended to exempt snowmobilers from purchasing a permit if they are using their snowmobile solely for transportation on the frozen surface of public waters for ice fishing. If you are just joy riding on the ice, you still must have a permit.

2. Trail permits can now be purchased wherever fishing or hunting licenses are sold, and all the various outlets as previous years.

3. A Trail Permit Application, including identification information, must be provided to purchase a permit. However, when purchasing through the electronic licensing system, the application is not requited.

Make sure your snowmobile is in top working condition before taking to the trails, and let someone know where you are going, your planned route, and when you expect to return.

Wrestling team places in first meet

James Pop goes 3-0

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Through a bizarre scheduling quirk, it appeared that the Rayder wrestlers needed to be in two places at once.

A Star Trek-like gadget would have been needed for coach Phil Christ's team to be at both the Mason County Central Invitational and the Petoskey freshmen/sophomore tournament last Saturday afternoon.

Being humans, though, they could only appear in one event, and Christ chose the latter. With so many of his grapplers in their first season of wrestling, the choice for Christ was easy.

"At Mason, many of the kids would not have made it out of the first round," he said. "What's the point if you're getting pinned in twenty seconds."

A wise move considering the competition at Mason County Central. Christ's band will get their chance in January, especially at the Gaylord Invitational (Jan. 25) and their own Charlevoix Invitational (Jan. 18), to test their clout among the area's best. For now, Christ wanted to get his young muscles some quality wrestling time.

"We're trying to get the kids a good match," he said. "The more mat time, the better you'll get."

The mat time proved more than fruitful as four of the five wrestlers Christ brought to Petoskey medaled. James Pop, wrestling at 160, placed first with a 3-0 record including three pins; Luke Whitley, 135, placed third; Brandon Perry, 112, placed fourth, as did Preston Pitawauakwat wrestling at 171.

Of all the praise, the raves were saved for Pitawauakwat who on Saturday wrestled for the first time ever in an organized setting.

"He looked good, and I had a lot of other coaches comment on that," Christ said. "He's a hard worker, I wish I had 15 of him."

Night and day: Rayders swap approaches to first games

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

The Charlevoix Rayders experienced an identity crisis last week that would even have had Clark Kent disordered.

In their opening night defeat to Cheboygan, the Rayders seemed unwilling to put the ghosts of the gridiron to bed, as their basketball contest turned into a football game.

"We did not handle it well and got frustrated," coach Jim Kanine said. "We were jumping for rebounds instead of blocking out, and it just kept snowballing."

The Chiefs, taller and stronger than the Rayders, managed to turn the game into a bump and grind affair. Their physical defense after giving up 18 points in the first quarter clamped down, allowing Charlevoix just 21 points in the final three stanzas.

Luckily, the Rayders regained their proper identity by Friday night's tilt with Rogers City, defeating the Hurons 84-67 using a blitzkrieg of a fourth quarter to put the game away.

"McClellan intercepted two or three passes, Owens intercepted two or three passes," Kanine said, recalling the overwhelming 44-13 run over the game's final 11 minutes that helped the Rayders climb out of 14-point deficit. "We made the press work and even when they broke it, they were out of sync and could not get the shots they wanted."

Matt McClellan lead Charlevoix with 26 points, and Steve Carland poured in 23 points. A third Rayder creeped into double digits sophomore Jim Kanine scored 15. Matt Jacobs, Josh Miller and Ben Owens each scored six points. Despite the gaudy scoring numbers, Kanine pointed to something else that defined the Rayder success against the Hurons.

"Steve Carland had 12 rebounds and that was easily the game's most important statistic," Kanine said. "He got 23 points, but his 12 rebounds were much bigger than his points."

The reason for the success has everything to do with one word — tempo. The Rayders are as quick and athletic as anyone they'll play, and when clicking, the results are clear.

They were Globetrotter-like in the second half turning Rogers City into their own Washington General punching bag. However, as a team they lack size, and two tall, physical challenges await the team this week with a home date against St. Ignace and a road rematch Friday night at Cheboygan.

"These are great football schools, with football players who are great athletes that also play basketball," Kanine said.

Again the task for the maroon and white will be to stay away from the football mentality and stick to the game. They jumped out to a 10-point lead in the first game with the Chiefs before things unraveled, yet they never fell far enough behind where a comeback was unlikely.

Chalk it up to opening night jitters, Kanine said. In fact, he likes what he has seen after one week of competitive play, and the explosion against Rogers City was one of the best executions of the press Kanine can remember from any of his other teams. And, they're scoring points.

"They might see that Matt went for 26 points, and they'll try to take him out of the game," he said. "I say 'go ahead' because we have four others who will beat you, and Matt will be the one passing to the other guys."

For now the Rayders just need to keep a grip on their ID card.

Ben Owens goes up for two points as one of the Cheboygan chiefs looks as though he laying out the white carpeting for him. After the Dec. 10 lose to the chief, the Rayders have their next chance at defeating them Friday in Cheboygan.

Radon: An unseen danger

Radon has been identified as an unseen threat to health in American households. As many as 1 in 8 homes in Michigan may be affected by the naturally occurring radioactive gas produced by uranium as it breaks down in the soil.

Radon's presence outdoors is not dangerous because it is diffused. However, Radon is dangerous in enclosed areas because slowed diffusion into the air causes a build up. This is particularly true during the winter months when Michigan homes are sealed.

Radon enters through cracks in the foundations, basement walls, crawl spaces and hollow block walls.

Prolonged exposure to Radon at elevated levels poses a threat to health.

Coffee clutch recalls car chase

By Dale Boss
Courier columnist

Each evening at approximately seven o'clock, a group of Charlevoix old timers meet in the front window at Burger King. Various and sundry items are discussed, ranging from local tidbits from last week to eventful things from years ago. I came home the other night laughing and my wife asked me what was so funny.

Oscar Stroud and I were telling the gang about the high speed police chase which happened back in the fall of 1956. I was coming to town to mail some letters about 3 p.m., and when I was right in front of Don Meggison's house, I had to bring my car to a screeching halt.

Just beyond the curve, an automobile was coming past the IGA, heading for Petoskey at a very high rate of speed, and was cutting the inside corner so he wouldn't overturn.

Behind him was the deputy sheriff, Philo Sumner, in the county-owned Oldsmobile patrol car. Following him was Glenn Rose, the county sheriff in a brand new 1956 yellow and white super 88 Oldsmobile he had just purchased for his personal use. Bringing up the rear was Joe Smith, city police chief, with the city-owned Ford police car, with the pedal to the metal. He was leaning into it hard, and the car would only go 45 or 50 mph, because with most police cars at that time, it was all carboned up because of city driving, and it refused to perform.

Unbeknownst to me, Oscar Stroud and young Brad Ward, who had been helping him rake leaves, jumped into Oscar's little 3-year-old Chevy pick-up, and followed the crew because they knew something big was up. It seems as though what had happened, (in talking to the sheriff the next morning, and Oscar) the Cheboygan County Sheriff was taking a man who was behind on his alimony to Traverse City.

On the way down, the sheriff stopped at a drug store in Elk Rapids, left the car running and went in to buy something. When he came out, the man had taken the car and was headed back toward Charlevoix on his way to Cheboygan.

When he came down through town, the bridge was raised purposely to block him. The sheriff, deputy sheriff, and police chief were there, standing beside their cars to apprehend him. The man made a fast left turn and went up Park Avenue, and before they could get in their cars, he ditched them.

So, the bridge tender put the bridge back down. The man then made a second high speed pass through town. Glenn Rose fired two shots, trying to blow his tires out and the pursuit began. Glenn had the fastest car, and in the area of Nine Mile Point, after driving at speeds up to 120 mph, came alongside him.

The man refused to pull over. Oscar and Brad, in the little green pickup kept going just as hard as it would go. The city car gave up near Shanahan's farm, because it wouldn't run fast enough. When they got to the Petoskey city limits, Hodgkiss and Douma had pulled a huge tractor trailer across the highway, completely blocking it.

When Oscar and Brad arrived, Glenn was just putting the handcuffs on the escapee. Glenn said to Oscar "Where did you come from?" Oscar said "I've been following you. Look at my truck!" The little truck had worked so hard, the steam was boiling out of the radiator.

This little town has never been a dull one. There have always been certain ones who chase cop cars and fire trucks, and still do, whether they are doing it legally or not. It's just one of the things you do for excitement in a little town.

PUBLIC NOTICE

The City of Charlevoix City Council will hold a public hearing on Monday, January 6, 1997 at 8:00 p.m. at City Hall, 210 State Street, Charlevoix, MI to discuss a proposed amendment to Chapter 51, Zoning and Planning of the City Code, Section 5256 (6) CONDITIONS OF APPROVAL.

The text of the ordinance within which the proposed ordinance change is found is as follows:

(6) CONDITIONS OF APPROVAL. In granting a variance, the board may specify, in writing, such other conditions regarding the location, character, landscaping or other treatment that will, in the Board's judgement, be reasonably necessary to the furtherance of the intent of this Chapter and the protection of the public Interest. The breach of any such condition shall automatically invalidate the permit granted. Each variance granted under the provisions of this Chapter shall become null and void after six (6) months unless construction or occupancy authorized by such variance or permit has commenced and is being carried to completion. After a variance has been denied in whole or in part by the Board, then no application shall be resubmitted for a period of one (1) year from the date of the last denial; provided, however, that a denied variance may be reconsidered by the Board when, in the opinion of the Zoning Administrator, newly discovered evidence or changed conditions warrant such reconsideration.

Within this text it is proposed to change the time requirement from six (6) months to eighteen (18) months.

Written comments may be sent to the City Manager's Office, 210 State Street, Charlevoix MI or may be presented at the City Council meeting.

Sophomores hope to boost talent of boys' varsity team

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Coach Jim Kanine hopes an infusion of new faces will help solve what may be the Rayders basketball team's most pressing problem. Who will score?

Last year's squad failed to remedy that problem, having only three regulars who averaged more than five points a game, stumbling to a 5-16 record, 3-9 in Lake Michigan Division play.

The fact that their top returning scorers, Ben Owens and Steve Carland average only nine points between them leave many to wonder if Kanine will be bringing in the Fonz to teach the lads something about the fine art of scoring.

Instead, Kanine will plug two promising sophomores into the lineup. Matt McClellan and Jim Kanine, the coach's son, will make the coach a little less queasy about his team's offense.

"We'll be better on offense with those five because now we have more people who can touch the ball and do things with it," the coach said.

When things are not rolling for the starting five, including last year's returning starter, Josh Miller, Kanine does a deep bench to call on for help. Scott Smith, Marc Jacobs, T.J. Carey and Sean Kimble all will log quality minutes as the season grows into the winter. However, Kimble is suspended from play for the first four games.

"It makes a big difference if you've got people who can come into the game and create things," Kanine said, assessing his reserves. "You want to notice them and have them be aggressive."

A smallish team, only Kimble stands taller than 6-foot-2-inches. The Rayders will have to do their best when battling for rebounds. The key for Kanine is just to be competitive and hustle for the boards. After that, it's a wonder if the two sophomores can provide enough punch to get the Rayders back to the .500 mark.

"They are up here to play, not pad the roster," Kanine said. If they can play as advertised, more than five wins should come Charlevoix's way.

The varsity basketball season kicked off Dec. 10. The next game is 6 p.m. Friday in Cheboygan, which defeated the Rayders in the first game of the season.

Junior varsity basketball

Junior varsity boys' basketball team topped by height

Six players over 6-foot-1

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Coach Jim Kanine bemoans the fact that as varsity coach for Charlevoix he has never had a really tall team. His days are coming.

Six players on coach Todd Klinger's junior varsity roster stand taller than 6-foot-1.

Despite the height, the name of the game for Klinger will be up-tempo pressing.

"I'll dictate tempo, rather than sit back and let someone else dictate it for me," Klinger said. "I can still press because my big guys all can run well."

The end result of pressing an opponent is to gain easy transition buckets. It's an important part of the game, especially on this level where players might not be sophisticated enough to produce points out of a half-court set.

If a go-to guy develops, it might come from sophomore Colin Carr or the set of twins, freshmen Skyler and Spencer Handy. Others expected to contribute are Justin Thorp, Tom Cunningham, Keith Grunch, Jeremy Rafacz, Tino Tripicchio, Carl Goff, Brian Ward, Tom Schaperkotter and Erik Butcher.

> "I want to see how these young men develop as a group by going through the trials and tribulations anyone will see during the course of a long season,"
> — Todd Klinger, junior varsity coach

Klinger wants and expects his team to perform well and win some ball games, but he has one other goal in mind for his players — learn how to cope with the grind of the season.

"I want to see how these young men develop as a group by going through the trials and tribulations anyone will see during the course of a long season," Klinger said.

The team next plays at 6 p.m. Friday in Cheboygan.

Freshman depth points toward bright Rayder future

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Brandon Bruce is entering his first season with the freshman boys' basketball team in a predicament any coach would love. He has too many quality players. He said he feels any of his 13 kids can play, and that a talent drop-off will not be noticeable down the bench.

"I can't single anyone out," he said. "I decided not to cut down our numbers, thinking I'll keep them all and see what I can do. A deep bench is an advantage to me."

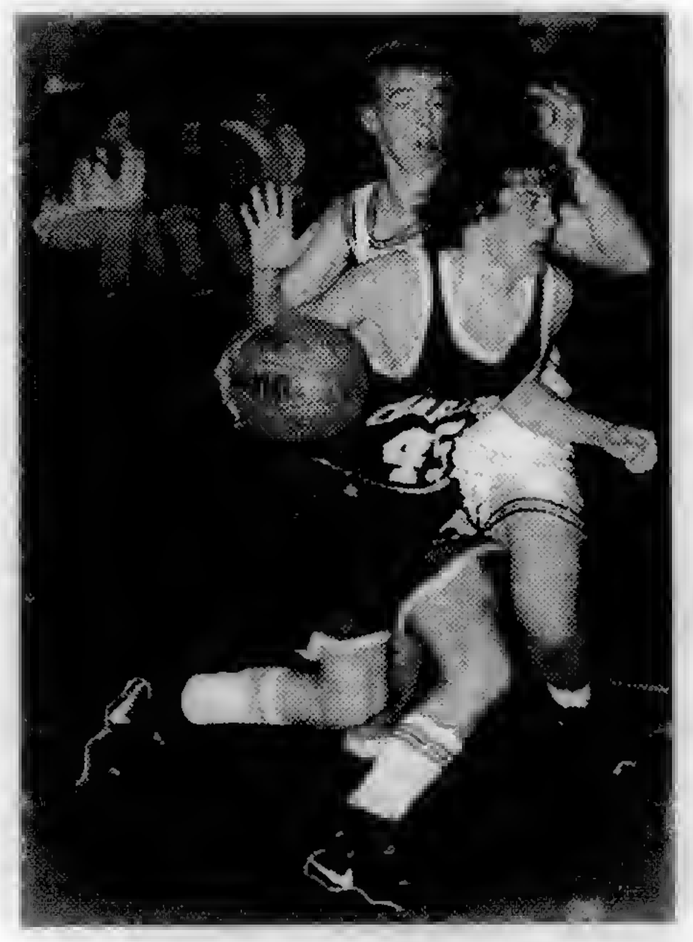
Bruce has been spending his time juggling possible starting line-ups, and on the eve of his team's first game was unsure of which five players to start. He said that those who watch his team play will notice the variety of starting combinations as the season progresses.

Adam Wood, Shay Hutchinson, Andy Granath, Sean Stockman and Russ Ward figure to be leading candidates to, if not start, at least log a lot of playing time. Whoever is playing, Bruce is excited at the team's potential and said the future of basketball in Charlevoix is promising.

"It's a tight group of kids, they work well as team and that's what really excites me," he said.

If the team begins to run and gun like their varsity counterpoints, the fans shouldn't rub their eyes. It's part of Bruce's game plan.

"Freshman ball is a stepping stone," he said. "Everyone's goal is to play varsity, and we practice the same philosophy as coach (Jim) Kanine so they're being prepped to someday play on varsity."



Forward Steve Carland blows by his opponent during the Dec. 10 game against the Cheboygan Chiefs. The Rayders next face the Chiefs during Friday's away game. Junior varsity kick off the action at 6 p.m.

Varsity volleyball builds on experience

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Returning a solid, athletic nucleus, coach Brenda Bryan's varsity volleyball squad looks to build off of an impressive finish to last season, which saw stirring tournament runs that brought a district crown to Charlevoix.

Lisa Wheat returns as the team's top hitter, and along with Amanda Eaton, Emily Murray, and Sarah Furman, will play many points on the front row.

On the defensive row, Lyndsay Blechel, Jessica VanGuilder, Carrie Blanchard, Mandi Barrett and Laura Maltese will see plenty of action.

Bryan expects the addition of three sophomores elevated from the junior varsity roster to plug the holes due to graduation. Jamie Gowell will play some on the front row.

"She'll be a blocker, she's tall and really aggressive," Bryan said. Fellow tenth-graders, Chris Sweeney and Ann Spang, play a more defensive game and will see action along the back row.

Volleyball may be a sport where one's versatility gets tested, but Bryan would prefer her club strive for perfection at one position before rounding out their overall game.

"It helps to learn just one position," she said. "They can work on that one spot and work on it to make the team better because you are going to one spot once the ball is served."

While much of the team's action will take place after the New Year's holiday, they will get to test their talent Saturday, Dec. 21, at the Roscommon Invitational. First serve is expected to be at 10 a.m.

Younger team builds on basics

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Annemarie Statsick is in an interesting position as coach of junior varsity volleyball.

For the most part, this is the girls' first taste of organized volleyball, and Statsick has spent much of her time as coach simply "building solid skills." Highlighted by Statsick were passing, serving, spike approach and movement around the court.

"Of course we are also emphasizing teamwork, good sportsmanship, team pride and having a lot of fun," she said, noting that it's not just a first taste of organized volleyball, but of organized sports for some of the players.

Fourteen girls comprise Statsick's team. Unfortunately, she was forced to cut 13 from the squad prior to the season.

"We don't have time for a freshman team because there is no available gym space," she said. "Our concern now is that the girls I do have all play enough so that when they get to the varsity they are ready to go."

Statsick highlighted Julie Swenor, Michelle Potter, Wendy Wood, Taya Drost and Kristy Shindorf as players to watch as the winter progresses.

Wrestling

Charlevoix hopes to pin matches with fresh wrestlers

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Youth may not be served, but it certainly will be wrestling for the Rayders this winter. Of coach Phil Christ's team of 10 grapplers, nine are either freshmen or sophomores.

To that end, Christ has spent more time this year going over fundamentals like stances, pinning combinations, landing properly and proper conditioning.

> "It's a world of difference from the middle school world to the high school world, and they have to learn to make time for everything."
> — Coach Phil Christ

"It's a brand new world for them to do all this heavy duty exercise," he said.

The team should be at a disadvantage during most of their competitions because their inexperience will play against them. They won't be as strong, conditioned, or, most importantly, have as much wrestling savvy.

"You have to learn one part of a move then there are about three or four other parts to it before going on to the more intricate moves," Christ said. "You have to start at the beginning before getting to your more advanced levels."

To help even the wrestling mat, Christ has scheduled his team to play in some junior varsity and freshmen tournaments. Admitting defeat, perhaps, but Christ is determined to focus on sound scheduling. His goal is to have his club participate in events where they have a chance to win.

One problem that Christ is already having with his young troops, is remaining eligible. Only four wrestlers made the trip to Mancelona last Saturday for the team's first competition. The rest were injured or ineligible.

"The kids get disillusioned that they're there for sports and not for school," Christ said. "It's a world of difference from the middle school world to the high school world, and they have to learn to make time for everything."

Of the four wrestlers Christ took to Mancelona, the early returns show that youth might be yet served. Freshman Brandon Perry in the 112 pound division went 4-1 to place second; senior Robert Reiter, 125 pounds, wrestled to a 3-2 or a second place finish; and sophomore James Pop, 160 pounds, and freshman Luke Whitley, 140 pounds, both won two matches for third-place finishes. Combined, the Rayders were able to nudge out league rival Elk Rapids to finish in fourth place.

The team's first home meet is at 6 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 7, against Petoskey and Pine River.

Numbers shift from last year's ski teams

Sue Miller, coach of Charlevoix's downhill skiing teams, has a numbering problem which might have her thinking she's chasing her tail.

Last year, she didn't have enough members on her boys' team to compete, going as far as using girls to fill missing spots. This year, however, it's the girls' team which Miller feels may lack the numbers to produce overall team success.

"Ski racing is very difficult to fine tune," Miller said. "It takes the top-four times, so you don't so much have to be good, as you need to be consistent and have enough skiers."

While at times Miller may not be able to fill enough spots for the Rayders to dent team competitions, the individual talents is making Charlevoix a force on this year's slopes.

Kevin Meier, Wally Wujcik and Eric Halverson will lead the downhill charge for the boys' team, while Meg Spang, Kelly Kusina, Brooke Block and Shannan Martin are returning letter-winners on the girls' squad. Miller pointed to a strong freshman class, which will keep the talent pipe lining into the program and eventually help ease the numbers problem.

For now, the teams are amid difficult dry-land training involving a lot of running and agility drills. However, Miller is watching snow conditions.

"It's good snow," she said. "It's not soft like you'll see in the spring, and it's not icy because we haven't had an icy, cold December."

The teams will not compete until after the New Year, as the schools and slopes like to shy away from events during the holiday season. The first gates will be skied through on Tuesday Jan. 7, at Boyne Highlands in the Harbor

Cross country skiers in wait for race terrain

By Jamie MacMillan

Contrary to gridiron lore, the football shrine (stadium), is not sitting idle this winter, contemplating next year's pigskin's paladins.

Now it serves as practice field for the cross country ski team, the school's only winter athletic club. With early December snow conditions keeping fall a lingering memory, the team has sought refuge practicing on what may be the largest uninhibited open space in the school's vicinity.

How can such flatlands be a challenge for the durable cross country skier? Well, technique is everything, and many of the skiers are relative newcomers to the sport, and can use all the repetitive tooling they can get.

To coach Nick Baic, this is the beauty of the sport.

"What other sport can you learn in high school, and do the rest of your life?" he asked.

Although the skiers are learning a life-long skill, Charlevoix stands to be at a disadvantage when it comes to winning high school meets.

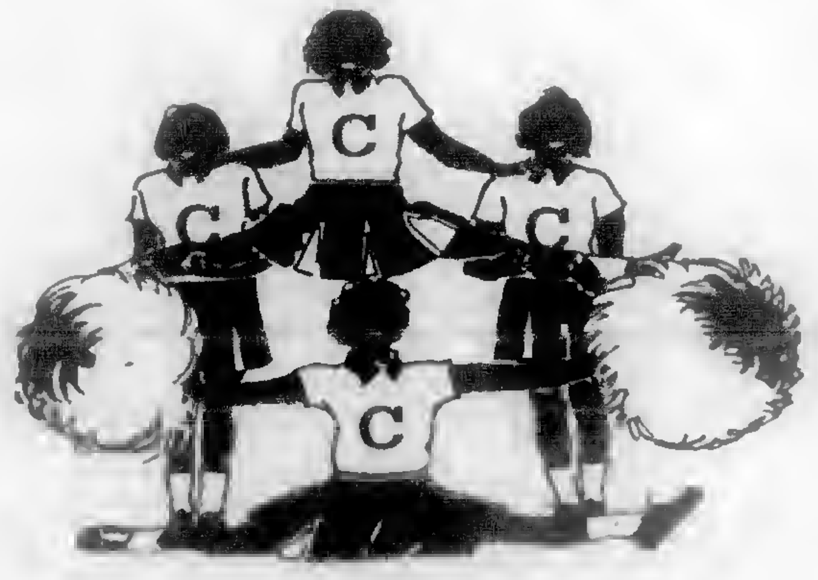
Springs Invitational. A meet on Thursday, Jan. 9, at Boyne Mountain is still in limbo as schools iron out exactly who will attend. Still, Miller would like to see more events for her skiers.

"In January we have some meets, and then boom we're in conference and regionals," she said. "January is not a season."

All the playoffs will be held in the area. Regionals will be skied at the Boyne Mountain, and the state meet in Harbor Springs at Nub's Nob. The location of the conference meet still needs to be determined, but will either be at Nub's or the Mountain.



Cross country club's depth improves

Meets are scored by the times of the team's top four skiers. Historically, by a sheer lack of numbers, the team could not win. However, that might change this winter.

"The quality of depth is the best we've had," Baic said, "of course that will help in the state meet."

This is especially true on the girls' side, where Baic looks to Chelsea Gorkiewicz, Lisa Gorkiewicz, Emily Martinus, and Candice Vandergriff to push their way to the top of the time list.

Depth still may be a problem for the boys, where only Brian Martinus and Nate Martin return as seasoned cross-country skiers. Baic said that, in general, his entire freshmen class looks promising for the future.

The team's first race will be Saturday, Dec. 21, in the Boyne Valley Lodge Pursuit. The starter's gun goes off at 10 a.m., all weather permitting. Baic said ideal conditions for these events are 25 degrees and a lot of groomed snow.

For now, watch out for the goal posts.

Middle school Magic Kingdom

Kids collect cash, food for Charlevoix's needy

By Janenne Irene Harrington

Just before emptying for Christmas break, the middle school became a magical kingdom. But not because roller coasters, spook houses or Mickey Mouse ears filled its crevices.

However, the spirit of giving did.

Middle school students, teachers and staff have massed 40,000 food items, including about $7,000 for Charlevoix's needy since returning from Thanksgiving break.

During Friday's final count and assembly, the gym roared as students were recognized for donations, in which $1 counts for four cans of food.

Jessie Murray set an all-school, all-time record by bringing in the equivalent of 2,267 items during the Spirit of Christmas Canned Food Drive. The eighth-grader topped the tote board that keeps an ongoing record of the goods coming in.

Jessie surpassed her goal of 2,000 items by turning in lunch money, her allowance and going door-to-door collecting from businesses during her lunch breaks.

"It's something you look forward to like basketball season," she said, this being her third year. With less than a full day left in the contest, Jessie and her friends were plotting more fund-raisers. One involved whip cream

Zoning board passes height variance, denies one extension

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Harbor Industries is getting its new dust collection system. A height variance was granted by the Charlevoix Board of Appeals Dec. 18 on the grounds of government requirements.

The extra 16 feet, 5 inches will enable the company to install a dust collection system at its Airport Drive plant that will comply with the 1990 Clean Air Act.

Harbor Industries manufactures display racks out of wood and wood products.

The closed-loop system will collect saw dust until it can be recycled.

"The current dust collection system is very inefficient, allowing large quantities of saw dust to be emitted into the atmosphere," Harbor Industries communicated to city officials in a memo accompanying its request for the variance. The new steel collector is designed to keep all saw dust within the system.

The storage bin is 37 feet, 5 inches tall, which is topped by a 9-feet cyclone for an overall height of 46 feet, five inches. The bin will be built about 1,250 feet from the airport runway, which puts it outside the Runway Protection Zone for Charlevoix's airport.

Although the company received a green light from the city, it now must wait for approval from the Federal Aviation Administration before the system can be installed, said Michael Shaw, an industrial engineer at the plant. "That could happen in a month, or six months."

In addition to approving Harbor Industry's variance, the board of appeals denied a variance request by the Weathervane restaurant and approved two others.

When variances are approved, they are good for six months. Extensions must be sought if the work is not completed.

The Weathervane was originally given permission to add a 16-by-16-foot cooler in December 1995. In a letter to the city, Dudley Marvin, Staffords Hospitality president, asked that an extension until Oct. 31, 1997, be given to construct the cooler this spring.

However, the request was denied because the variance had been expired six months before a request for extension.

City planners are attempting to change the ordinance which limits the variance to six months. In January, city council will be discussing planners' request to make initial variances good for 18 months.

Larry Sullivan and Richard Vance were granted extensions for construction work that couldn't be completed before winter set in. Their requests were made before the original variance expired.

Christmas story helps youngsters understand spirit of Christmas

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Each Christmas middle school librarian, Tom Sothard, tells a story. It's one of many he's collected from students who grab onto the spirit of giving. He passes it on to sixth-graders who are about to become part of the annual Spirit of Christmas canned-food drive that has enhanced Christmas for much of Charlevoix.

One of the 15 years the collection has been happening, Sothard watched a boy pull a sled to school the last day of the drive, the last day before Christmas break. His somewhat worn clothes were not name brand. Regardless, he toted his gifts down State Street to the middle school.

Sothard tells of how the boy came from a poor family, "a boy who probably needed help himself," he says.

As Sothard and the boy safely tucked the canned goods into the library before they would be taken to the local food pantry later that day, the boy asked if he could help haul the food that had been collected.

Sothard was happy for the extra hands, and for the offer that came as

City cemetery ordinance in for review, changes

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

One thing Charlevoixians can expect in the New Year is a change in the city's cemetery ordinance.

Proposed resolutions and ordinances were put on the back-burner during a recent city council meeting and will be further discussed with more public input sometime in January, city manager Mike Wiesner said. Wiesner said that concerns over residency and non-residency definitions are mainly what caused the measure to be delayed.

Presently, the ordinance states that a resident is a registered voter or a taxpayer of the city of Charlevoix. Under the proposed ordinance the definition of a resident would be expanded to include anyone who pays real or property taxes to the city or anyone who could legally register to vote in the city.

Sounds a little nit-picky, but not after realizing that present rates for an adult plot for a non-resident is $600, $200 more than the resident rate. Also just about every service offered by the city-managed cemeteries — ranging from openings, removals, cremation burials, and perpetual care fees — are higher for non-residents. Cemeteries under city care include St. Mary's Catholic and the Brookside cemeteries.

The proposed ordinance does restrict, though, the definition of an immediate family member. Currently burials are restricted to plot owners' family and immediate relatives, a fairly open-ended definition.

The new ordinance as previously presented to council would define immediate relatives as mother, father, spouse or child of owner, provided the child is less than 18 years of age. In the age of broken families, the ordinance would encompass stepsons and stepdaughters in the sphere of son and daughter. However, siblings seem to be left-out of the city's proposed definition of immediate family.

The proposed ordinance is laced with 19 resolutions, which restrict the size of cemetery plots, what exactly may be placed on a grave site (artificial flowers are not allowed, while trees and shrubbery are allowed, pending approval by the sexton), where in relation to the headstone these items may be placed and times when burials must occur.

Burials are always tough, but need they be this challenging? According to Wiesner, these restrictions are not new, but, rather, becoming official.

"It's my understanding that we're just putting to paper what's been going on for years," he said.

Resident Bob Gill, though, voiced concerns which led the council to table the matter until the New Year.

"It's prudent to take a look and make sure what you get is what you want," he said, mentioning that just reading the new set of rules and regulations will "bog you down."

"They need to sit down and discuss this some more, he added. "We have an existing ordinance, and this one will not really enhance it."

Young boy helps before being helped an innocent desire to help.

Once there, the two saw bags with names on them lining the tables.

The Community Christmas Project was about to hand out Christmas dinner to Charlevoix's needy families.

The boy went down the line looking at names. He stopped at one bag. It was for his family.

Peeking inside, he said, "Oh, so this is what we're going to eat for Christmas dinner."

Sothard's voice gets quieter when he tells this part of the story. His eyes brim with small tears.

"If that boy can find the spirit of Christmas in his heart, how can we do any less," he tells the youngest middle school students as they step into a giving tradition that has become a part of Charlevoix Middle School history.

Corrections

In an announcement of the Charlevoix Area Garden Club's new officers in the Dec. 18 issue, Pat Marshall, first vice president, and Peg Johnson, second vice president were omitted.

In assumed names in On the record Dec. 18, the filer was misnamed. It should have read: Castle Farm Community Center, by Castle Farm Enterprises, Corp., a non-profit corporation.

Events in brief

Police seek warrants for accused car thief

A 1988 Pontiac Grand Prix was stolen from outside a residence at 220 Antrim Street about 2 a.m. Thursday, according to Charlevoix police.

The vehicle, which is owned by Mark Labeau, was found in a ditch off of Waller Road about 5:30 a.m. the same day. It had been entered and keys found stashed inside the car.

In the same area of the stolen car, property was stolen from a car on Park Ave., police reported. Other cars were entered, with some thefts occurring, on Clinton Street and Park Ave.

Police have interviewed a suspect and will be submitting warrant requests to the Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney.

Officer Jim Schlappi investigated the incidents from about 4:20 a.m.- 3:30 p.m.

"To work nonstop, over this long of a time period, showed a great deal of dedication and effort to solve these crimes," said Charlevoix Police Chief Dennis Halverson.

Planning commission cancels meeting

The city planning commission will not meet at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 25, because of the Christmas holiday. The next meeting is scheduled for 7 p.m. Monday, Jan. 13.

A complete agenda will be posted prior to the meeting.

Lecture series to benefit cardiac patients

The first in a series of cardiac rehab lectures via interactive television will be held from 7-8 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 2, at Charlevoix Area Hospital.

The speaker, Dr. Pat Friedli, of Munson Medical Center, will speak on "The Treatment of Obesity." There is no fee for the lecture, however, preregistration is necessary. Call Connie Roland, at 547-4024, for more information and to register.

The series will continue on Thursday, Feb. 6, with the topic "Women and Heart Disease."

Only one flu shot needed for some

Brian L. Youngs, M.D., medical director for District Health Department No. 3, announces that people who received the flu vaccine from the health department do not need a second dose. The flu vaccine administered by the health department was manufactured by Wyeth Laboratories not by Parke-Davis.

Creative ideas bring in cash, food for school pies that sell for $1 and a guarantee a teacher will take it in the face.

Other students are stationed outside stores collecting cash or selling baked goods and even selling dream puffs at ball games.

The tote board in the library is updated several times a day by librarian Tom Sothard. Students bop in to check leaders. They sneak into teachers' rooms see how much they have stashed in closets. Food is horded until the final day of collection arrives.

"It's really exciting," Jessie said. "It's kind of like mission impossible."

On Friday, the thunder of feet comes down the hallways as classes bring in their offering for the counting.

During her collections, Jessie found that people were more than happy to give. And those who didn't give to the middle school's drive have generally already supported the pantry.

"Most people, when they give you cans, they say 'thank you,'" she said. "A lot of people want to help, they just don't know where to go."

For 15 years, the middle school has provided a place for the entire community to help people during the giving season. Each year, more food and money is collected, and a larger chunk of the community takes part.

"What could be a burden to one person or company has been spread out among the community," said Beth Shepherd, a mother who helped Robin Berry's third-hour home economics class collect more than any other class this year.

It all began when someone said that middle schoolers are selfish and didn't think of others. Staff and teachers refused to surrender to that narrow view.

A plan was devised to give the students a chance to prove the notion wrong, all while learning the true meaning of Christmas.

"The spirit of Christmas is giving," Sothard said. "Jesus came here to serve, not be served."

The collection was slow at first, bringing in 300-400 cans. Then, competition kicked in when it became a contest. The class that collects the most goods becomes keeper of the Golden Corn Award, a floating trophy that is actual made of a can of Golden Corn. Now, like the Olympics, new records continue to be set.

"Every year we start this, we never know if we're going to do what we did the year before, but we just do," Sothard said. He is the one who watches the collection grow in the back corner of the library as he updates the tote board.

(From left) Sixth-grader Todd Carey collected 1,312 cans of food or equivalent of cash during the middle school's Spirit of Christmas Canned Food Drive. The school's top winner was Jessie Murray (see story), followed by Kelly Zimmerman, who brought in 1,594 items.

Then, after the final bell signaled the beginning of Christmas break Friday, students and other volunteers gathered in the library to haul boxes and bags of food into a big yellow school bus and two pick-up trucks.

According to Mary Helen Riggle, treasurer for the food pantry, the sight of having the bus pull up to the door and a mass of students unload the food is exciting. They fill shelves that have become bare from meeting the needs of the Community Christmas Project.

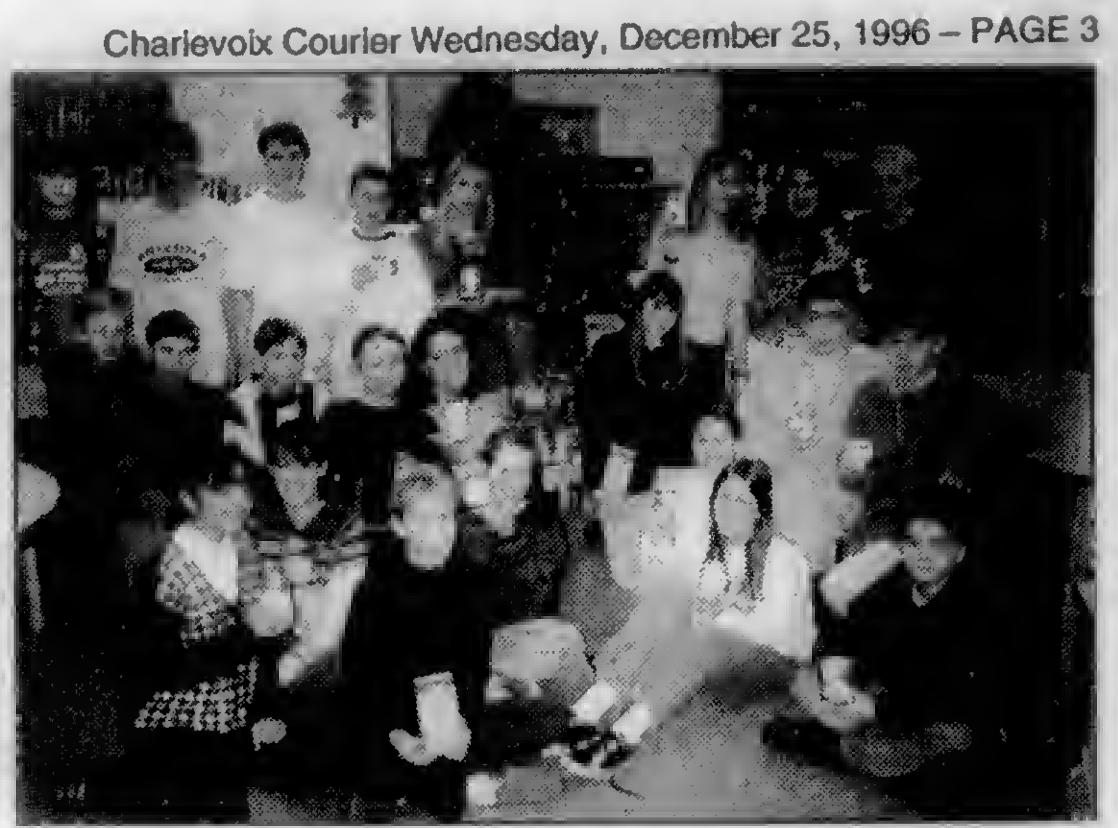
"We become overloaded, which we like," Riggle said, noting that reduced federal grants only cover community needs for about three months of the year.

The food pantry services an average of 50-55 families each month as it distributes food each Thursday morning from the First Congregational United Church of Christ. The students who canvassed the community for donations don't see the families as they gather their next meals. But they do remember how the enthusiasm of helping them filled the school. And how the community responded to their requests for help.

Robert Tripichio will remember why he rolled up his childhood penny collection and carried the 52 rolls to school in a box.

"That's going to be one of my Christmas stories," Sothard said.

The stories continue to come, to emphasize the meaning of Christmas, as class after class of Charlevoix students pass through the canned food drive of the giving season.



Robin Berry's third-hour home economics class gathered the most food and money for the Charlevoix Food Pantry in the middle school's recent contest. They collected 6,300 cans of food or money, in which each dollar is given credit for four cans of food. LexaLite has committed to match the school's collection of 40,000 cans.

Christmas presents a special opportunity for friendship

EDITORIAL

We all have George-Bailey days.

We focus on what isn't instead of what is.

Christmas offers an opportunity for us all to be reminded that truly, "It's a Wonderful Life."

Christmas is much more than putting up a tree and rushing from store to store to get just the right gift for each relative.

Childhood memories become picture shows of family traditions. Early teachings of the birth of Jesus Christ are renewed. Smiles along the streets show the possibility for peace on earth and good will toward men. Family gatherings confirm that differences in beliefs and personalities are not synonymous with division. A hug from an acquaintance or a card in the mailbox from an unexpected someone gives a glimpse into how our lives are often unknowingly woven into tapestries other than our own.

Christmas is a celebration for America and most of the world. It was a time for George Bailey to have his life put into perspective. It's also a chance for our lives to be rebalanced, refocused.

According to a U.S. News & World Report/Bozell poll, 82 percent of Americans agree that Christmas is a time of reflection. Let's reflect on all that's good and right.

If nothing else, George Bailey has shown us why that's important.

Each year, more suicides are committed in the holiday months. People grieve over lost loved ones and fail to look for strength in other people. Young people give up before giving life a chance to fully unfold the plan beyond the tests of puberty. Some divorcees can't seem to face the Christmas tree alone.

Charlevoix has been pulling together for a month to provide food and gifts for the many people who need a hand in affording the extras that come hand-in-hand with Christmas, nowadays. As we look to the day of celebration, let's look for the final acts of Christmas kindness — befriending, listening to and caring for someone who can't get beyond their George-Bailey day.

While reflecting on our own lives, let's reach out and create a future reflection for someone who is losing hope. Sometimes that can be done with a phone call. Or, there might be someone who needs to be adopted by a family who can provide the type of atmosphere a lonely person lives for.

Enjoying Christmas can be more than ripping into gifts and overeating the glazed ham. It can be a day of peace of earth and good will toward men that goes beyond the safety zone of our living rooms.

Holiday brings thoughts of thanks to community

Editor:

As the holiday season approaches, I can't help thinking back on all the northern Michigan volunteers and supporters that made the ninth year for the kids of Camp Quality such a huge success. These 60 kids from 5-years-old to 18, whose lives have been touched by cancer, spent a fun-filled week at Camp Daggett which began Aug. 10, 1996. It was both exciting and rewarding for the campers and "over much too soon" based on their replies to a close-out questionnaire.

Another of the many highlights of the week — miniature golf at Petoskey's Pirates Cove, boat rides on Walloon, airplane rides from Boyne City airport, antique car rides through Charlevoix, hot air balloon and elephant rides at Camp Daggett and much, much more — comes to mind several of the replies from the kids identifying their favorites as the Petoskey and East Jordan cheerleaders.

When campers were asked what they like about camp, they resoundingly replied cheerleaders, cheerleaders, cheerleaders.

The lives of these kids with cancer have been enriched as a direct result of the many individuals, groups and communities involved as well as the lives of the many volunteers being profoundly touched. Now, thinking back on that week of adventure, the fast approaching holiday season of giving (and just hearing of the recent loss of one of our kids), the staff of Camp Quality and Eleanor West, Michigan camp director, wants to extend our "from the heart" thanks to all your readers that made that special week happen at Camp Daggett and Merry Christmas and a happy New Year.

Kristen Ricks, a 1992 graduate of Charlevoix High School, graduated from Central Michigan University Dec. 14 with a bachelor's degree in Applied Arts. She majored in interior design and minored in industrial technology. Kristen completed an internship with Steelcase Headquarters in Grand Rapids in the summer. She is the daughter of Patricia and Jeffrey Ricks of Charlevoix.

Susan Killam earned a master's degree in nursing from Northern Michigan University Dec. 14. She is one of 51 students to accomplish that goal in her graduating class.

Elementary kids recorded

Each voice filling the air with recess shouts has been captured on Charlevoix Elementary School's first recording "United We Sing."

The collection of children's songs was recorded in the school gym by Playtown Sound Productions from Petoskey, said school music teacher, Marina LaBlance.

Each grade sings about four songs, some heing old-time children's favorites that parents and grandparents will recognize.

The tapes are on sale for $8. However, they're going quickly.

Even the cover of the tape was produced by a local student. Jacky Heckendorn, a fourth-grader, drew the picture of children raising their voices while they hold onto hands.

LaBlance said every children's voice in the school was allowed on the tape to help the project truly represent the title, "United We Sing."

Songs include "What a Wonderful World" and "My Favorite Things."

BEACONS
OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Lowell Anderson
Charlevoix Assembly of God

What's in a name?

Choosing the name for a new baby is always a matter of interest to the expectant parents. It's seldom less than a matter of hours, or at most a few days, after the doctor confirms that a woman is pregnant that thoughts and discussion begins regarding possible names for the child.

In Bible times names were chosen for children a little differently than in our modern times. Names in Bible times often were chosen because of the meaning of the name. For example the name Isaac (the son of Abraham, Genesis 21) means "he laughs," because his mother Sarah laughed when the angel of God told Abraham and Sarah they would have a baby when they both were beyond child-bearing age.

Names of many other Bible characters had specific meaning and significance. Today we often select names that we like because of the way they sound, or because they are unique, and not because of any particular meaning necessarily. You may know someone named Isaac, but you probably didn't know that name means "he laughs," and quite likely his parents didn't know that either when they named him!

The familiar Christmas story in the Gospel of Luke shows us that the selection of a name for the one to be born as Savior was a matter of consideration from the moment the angel Gabriel appeared to the Virgin Mary. The name for the holy child takes a prominent place in the announcement.

"You will be with child and give birth to a son", Gabriel told her, "and you are to give him the name Jesus. He will be great and will be called the son of the most high." (Luke 1:31-32)

"So the holy one to be born will be called the son of God." (Luke 1:35)

Jesus Christ came as a son. As the human flesh-and-blood son of Mary, Jesus was 100 percent man. But by immaculate conception through the power of the Holy Spirit, he is the son of God; 100 percent God!

The title "son" not only reveals a lot about Jesus Christ, it also speaks of his vital relationship with God the Father. Jesus Christ came from the Father and his mission on earth was to reveal the Father and fulfill the Father's will.

The son of God, through his life, death, and resurrection made a way for us to have the same relationship with the Father that he had. By the miracle of new birth, we can become a child of God just as Jesus Christ is the son of God by virgin birth.

The apostle John, in his Gospel, says this about the advent of Christ, "He was in the world, and though the world was made through him, the world did not recognize him. He came to that which was his own, but his own did not receive him. Yet to all who received him, to those who believed in his name, he gave the right to become children of God — children born not of natural descent nor of human decision or a husband's will, but born of God." (John 1:10-13).

So what is in a name? In the case of Jesus — your eternal salvation. Have you received him and believed in his Name? Receive Him! Experience new birth! Become a child of God!

New hall dedicated

Knights lauded by bishop for well-doing nationwide

On Dec. 8, Father Pierre Charlevoix Knights of Columbus Council #7172 celebrated the dedication of their building with Bishop Patrick R. Cooney officiating.

Father Thomas Neis, pastor of St. Mary's Catholic Church was in attendance as well as the color corps of the Petoskey assembly.

Many knights and their wives throughout northern Michigan witnessed the ceremony.

Bishop Cooney praised the knights of Charlevoix, as well as all knights in the United States for their accomplishments.

He emphasized Boysville, Right To Life, and the Special Olympics, and urged them to continue these noteworthy projects.

Refreshments were served following the ceremony.

Bishop Patrick R. Cooney heads the dedication ceremony of the new Knights of Columbus hall, which was built outside Charlevoix on Bell Bay Road.

Musicians take Rayders to area honors band

Three of "Charlevoix's finest" represented the community recently in the District 2 Honors Band Concert hosted in Petoskey on December 8.

Charlevoix High School Band members Lyndsay Blechel (cornet), Dena Sheldon (flute), and Lori Stargardt (flute), participated in the concert by auditioning on Nov. 7 in Charlevoix. More than 200 students from 25 schools in District 2 competed for positions in the 1996 Honors Band. Only the most accomplished musicians are accepted.

After the auditions, a weekend rehearsal was held on Nov. 24 in order to read through the new music and to develop a team concept. The band members gathered again on Dec. 7 for an all-day rehearsal with Dr. John Whitwell, conductor of bands at Michigan State University. Under the expert hand of Whitwell, the group perfected their repertoire, which included works by Malcom Arnold, Gustav Holst, and Frank Tichelli.

The band members were able to relax and socialize pool side at the Days Inn of Petoskey before performing the next day for a full house in the Petoskey Middle School auditorium. Whitwell praised the group for their love of music and their strong work ethic in preparing for a successful performance while stressing the importance of instrumental music in the public schools.

Lynn Hall keeps track of the movie selection at Horizon Video's new store, which is located in Captain's Corner Shopping Center.

Horizon Video doubles in size

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

A new frontier is on the horizon for Charlevoix's Horizon Video franchise. Moving from its cramped quarters next to Kmart, the store has relocated into a 4,000-square-foot space in Captain's Corner Shopping Center.

"It represents more than a doubling of size," Scott Hicks, Business Operations Manager for Horizon Video said. "Our customers No. 1 comment on their wish list was to expand the selection."

Hicks particularly likes the new location because of its proximity to the city's neighborhoods and the main U.S. 31 and M-66 thoroughfare. In addition, Hicks enjoys his new neighbors, Glen's Market and Little Caesars.

"We can take advantage of each other's customers," he said. "Pizza and food are very complimentary to movies."

The store now holds more than 8,000 copies of movies in categories ranging from drama, comedy, horror, action/adventure and mystery/thriller. An extensive new release section lines the perimeter of the store, holding about one quarter of the store's selection. According to Hicks, a batch of new releases comes in each week with about 30 titles. Some future new releases to expect are "Eddie" and "Phenomenon."

Horizon offers customers some intriguing promotions. With any rental, one could rent for any kids' movie free or renting five movies for seven days for $5.

"A lot of people return movies late because they don't have the time to watch them," Lynn Hall, store employee, said. "This way you have all week to watch these movies."

As for recommended viewing, Hall offers a handful of suggestions. "House of Cards," a story about an autistic child starring Kathleen Turner and Tommy Lee Jones; "Perfect Harmony" about race relations in the South circa 1950; "Mindwalk," "a walk-through of quantum physics," Hall Joked; and "After Hours", a little-known Martin Scoresece comedy.

Hall did offer up some holiday movies: "Snowman," a Christmas fantasy set to classical music, was nominated for a couple of academy awards in the short film category, and "The Small One," a cartoon about an idiot savante donkey who plays a key historical role. Hall mentioned that Tim Allen's Christmas movie is becoming a "new classic."

"These aren't the big ones that get all the attention like Miracle on 34th Street or A Christmas Story, but they're just as good."

Business in brief

Holiday lighting costs compare with leaving on porch light

Consumers Power Co. reports that 1.5 million of their customers are expected deck the halls with decorative lighting this Christmas.

About 5 percent of Consumers' December electrical load can be attributed to holiday lighting, according to a news release. In December, businesses add to the draw by decorating and extending hours of operation while homes glow in the night.

Consumers estimates that each house decorated has an average of four strands of outdoor lights. If these lights glow for four hours each evening, the cost would be less than 2 cents per night for the mini-lights and 7 cents for larger bulbs. The cost would be comparable to having the porch light on for the same period.

During the holiday season, about one million Christmas trees will be put up. Each tree hosts an average of four strings of lights, which are lit about five to six hours each day for 21 days. The cost for electricity equals about one-tenth of a cent, making the total energy cost for powering a tree for 21 days at about 74 cents.

Rayders go into Christmas break split

2-2 for season

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

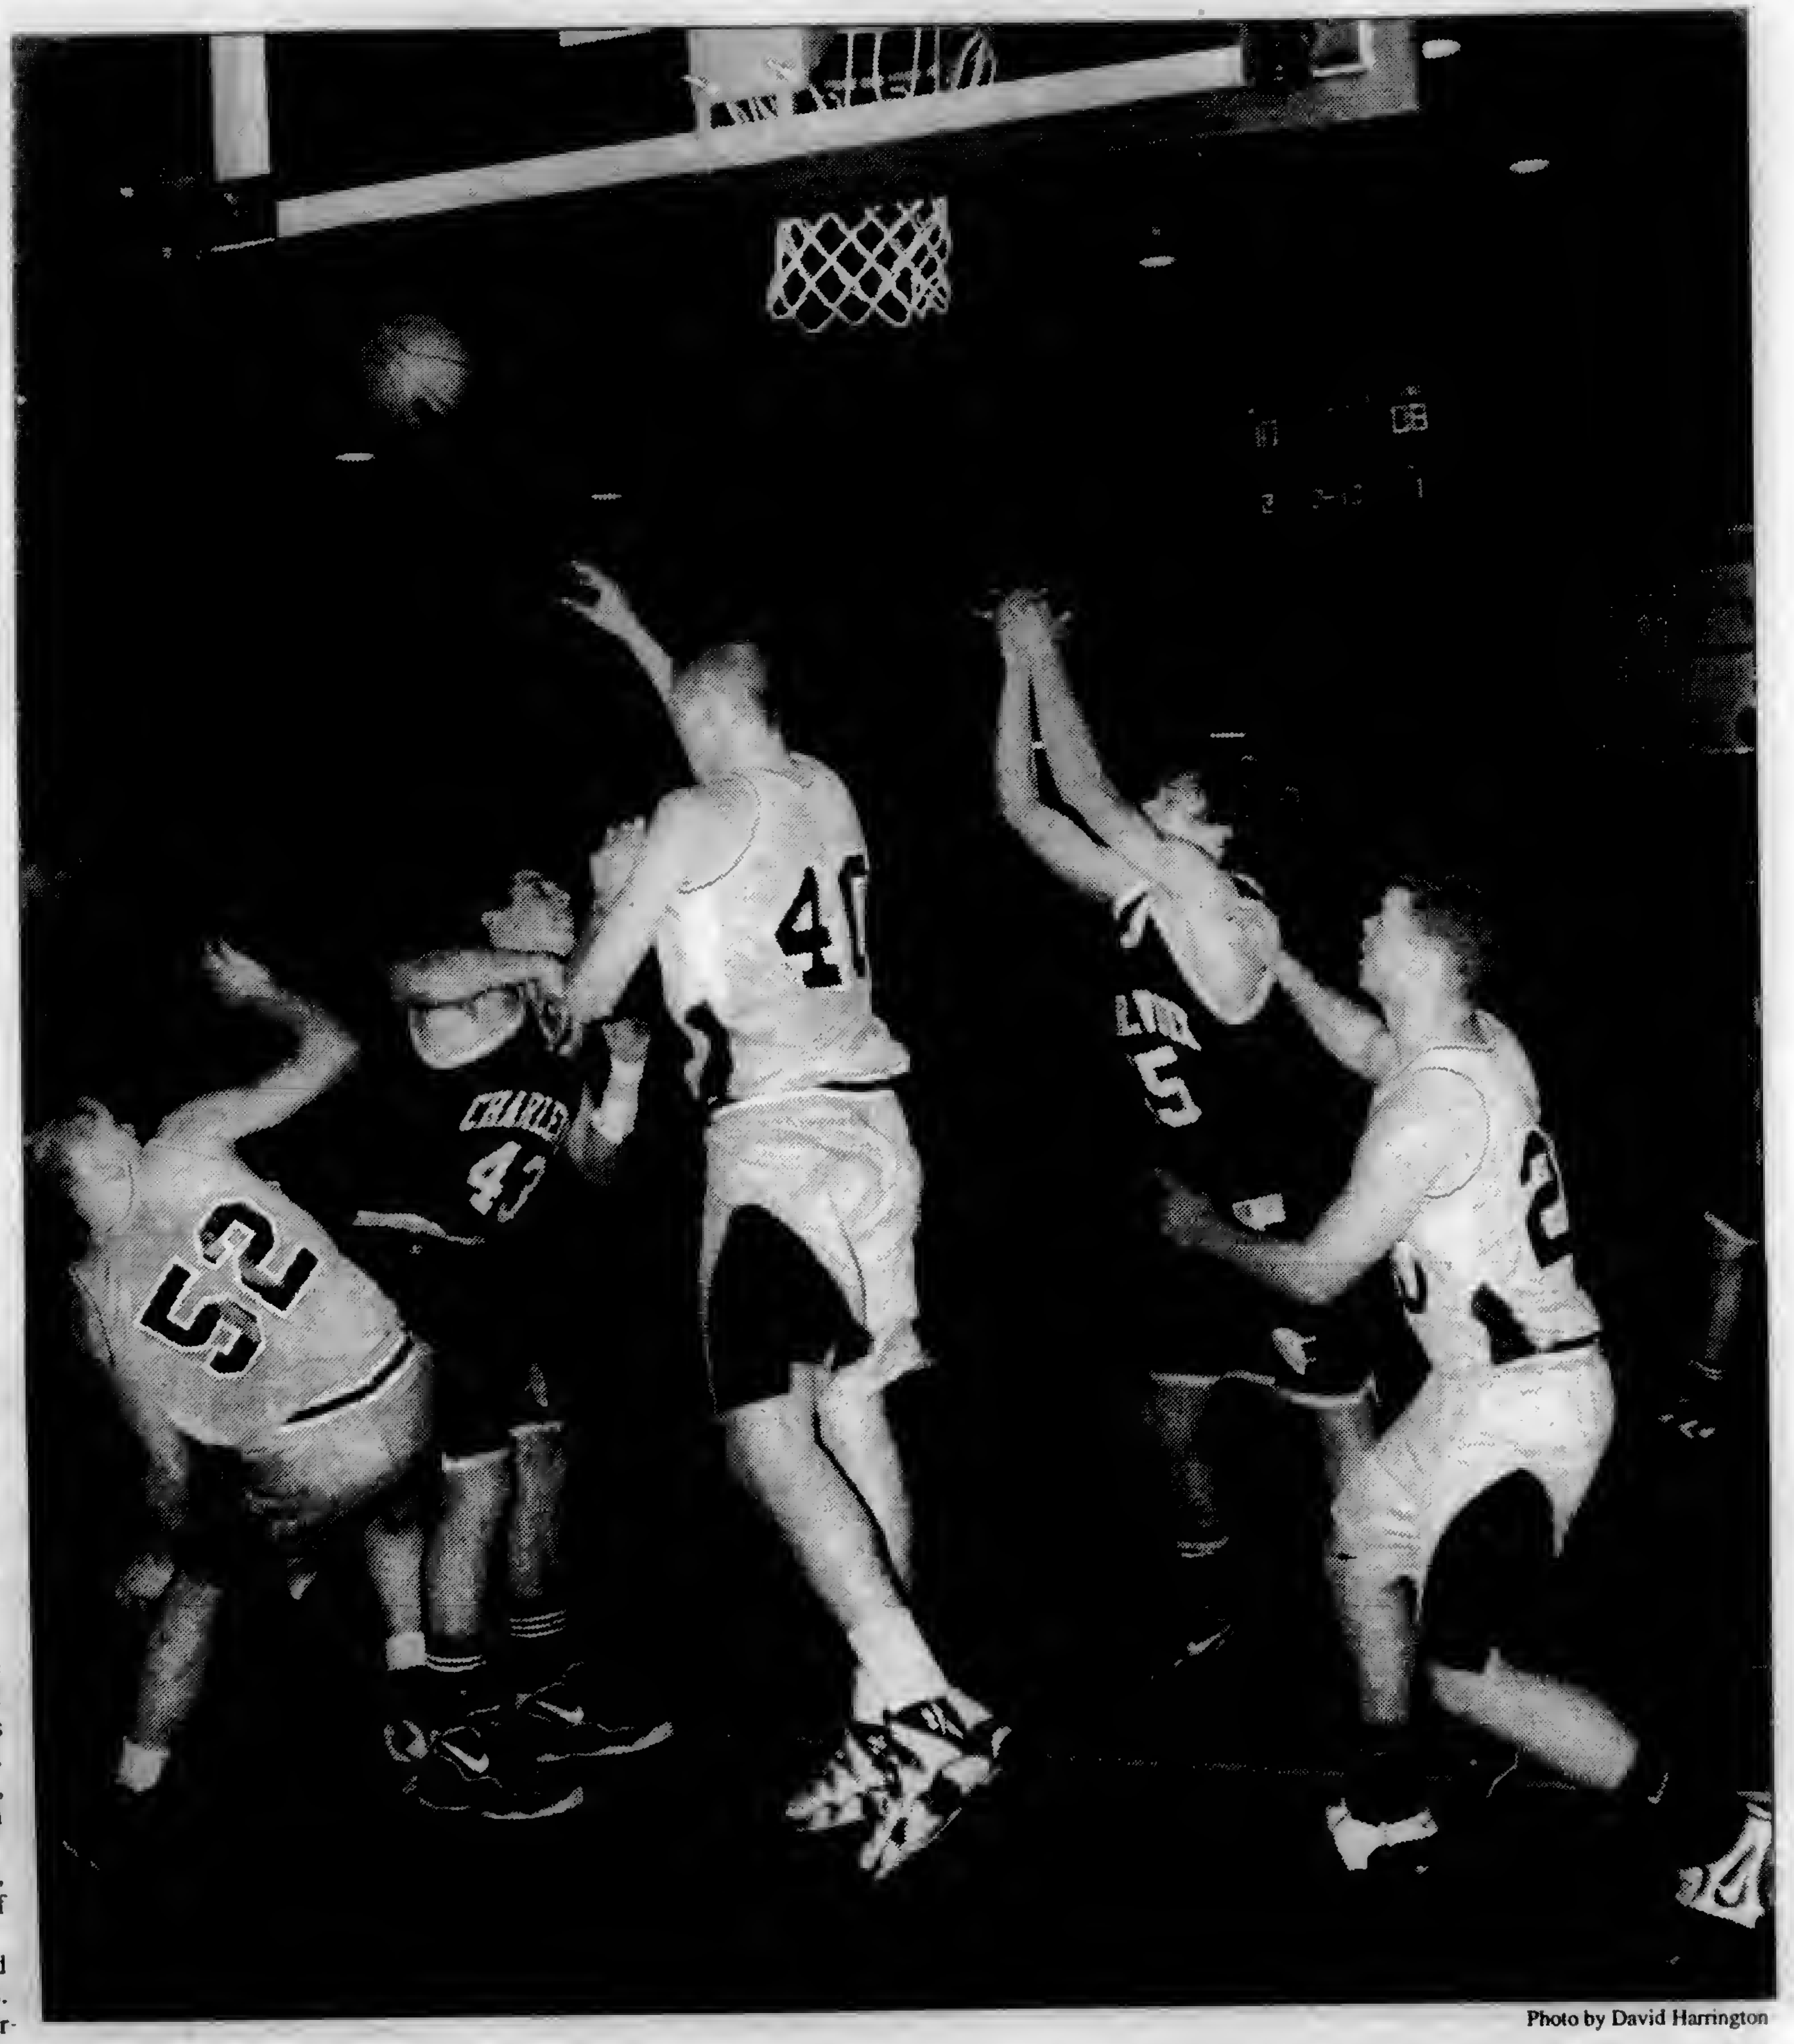

Photo by David Harrington

Rayders and St. Ignace Saints battle over the rebound during the Dec. 17 game played in Charlevoix's gym. The Rayders won this match and next face St. Ignace on Saturday, Jan. 4, away. Play is stalled for Christmas break.

Rayder basketball coach Jim Kanine did not place any lofty expectations on his team as they entered into the beginning of a rugged pre-conference schedule.

Just play hard and compete, he told them.

"I'll be discouraged if we don't go out and at least have a chance to win some of these games," he said, adding that he hoped they would not get blown out by "20 points" because then "it'll be a long year."

Four games later, the Rayders stand even at 2-2, and Kanine's expectations may begin to rise, as his team has shown promise.

With victories over Rogers City and St. Ignace, the Rayders have shown flashes of scoring flurries. Both wins had the Rayders with three players scoring in double figures. Against Rogers City, two Rayders, Matt McClellan and Steve Carland topped the 20 mark with 26 and 23 points, respectively.

At times it's been the press, creating more than 10 steals a game for the Rayders, which has lead to stretches of high scoring. The run ending the game against Rogers City came from the press, and as St. Ignace clawed back into striking distance, an eight-point run from the press nailed the Saints' coffin.

The Rayders staked out a 17-point halftime lead against St. Ignace because of half-court execution, and six three-pointers from four players was the most compelling damage. Josh Miller, Jim Kanine, Carland, and McClellan all are threats from long range.

"If we get looks at the basket, we'll hit some shots," Kanine said of his underrated shooters.

A small team, Kanine fretted about being dominated on the glass. The Rayders have been holding their own in this category, with Carland having two double-digit rebounding games and Ben Owens having games with nine and 10 boards to his credit.

In all the games, even the two wrestling matches with Cheboygan, the Rayders have played solid defense. They allowed just 14 points to Rogers City in the game's decisive 10 minutes. St. Ignace managed just two points in the second quarter as Charlevoix ballooned a four-point lead to 17. While reverting back to last year on the offensive end in the losses to Cheboygan, good defense kept them close enough in both games. Allowing only 52 points per game in the losses, one would expect a split with the Chiefs, but Kanine tagged the Chiefs as a team with a defense the Rayders can look up to.

"They bang you, knock you down," he said. "They are about as good defensively as we'll see all year."

Charlevoix could not get in any sort of flow in either game, forcing Kanine to change-up his game plan a bit, which usually foretells a bad ending.

"All of a sudden they're taking away what has been successful for you," he said. "Now you have to do something different, and in the middle of the game it's not always easy."

Kanine wanted to see more drivers to the hoop, and McClellan, who slowly is becoming the go-to guy, picked up six points by penetrating the lane. However, it was not to be this season against the Chiefs. The Rayders could not handle the physical style of the game, and the Chiefs did not wilt when the Rayders threw a press on them. Still, Kanine is resting easier about his teams chances this winter as Christmas nears.

"Last year we weren't good enough to compete," he said. "It's frustrating for our players. You are doing everything in your power and you can't even compete."

"We've played hard, so far. I'm really excited and satisfied. It's a good group of kids, they've worked hard everyday in practice, they enjoy playing, and they're competing in every game."

He could not ask for a better Christmas gift from his team than that.

Alzheimer's group celebrates money raised from walk

The Northwest Michigan Chapter of the Alzheimer's Association recently recognized individuals, teams and sponsors of the 1996 Memory Walk at a reception sponsored by Munson Medical Center. Northmed, Grandvue Medical Care Facility and Munson Medical Center were recognized as the Memory Walk's major sponsors.

The Top team raising $3,468 for this event was Munson Medical Center, which was led by team captain; Libby Thayer. Since 1993 the chapter has had the privilege of working with Vic Pickard, who not only collects pledges for Memory Walk but also collects returnable cans and bottles, and sells holiday poinsettias.

This year, Pickard has raised nearly $16,000, with hopes of winning the country's first place prize of a trip to Hawaii.

"Vic is truly our hero, and we are all hoping he achieves his goal of being the top Memory Walk fund-raiser in the Nation," said Chris Weaner, executive director. "What makes his achievement so special is that it is done with love and compassion for the many who are challenged with Alzheimer's Disease."

The Memory Walk event raised nearly $51,000. Proceeds remain in the 10 county area for education, training and support to the many who care for people with Alzheimer's Disease, and 15 percent of the proceeds go toward research, which will hopefully eliminate this disease.

For more information about Alzheimer's Disease and the Alzheimer's Association please call (616)929-3804.
